The Annual Farm and Home Convention will be held at the Experiment Station, Lexington on January 25, 26, 27, and 28th according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The Convention annually attracts a number of leading farmers and farm women from the county.

Speakers on the convention program include: Roy Hendrickson, Director of Food Distribution, on Food as a Weapon; Miss Florence Hall, of Washington, on Women's Part in Food Production; Marvin Briggs, of Indiana, on Farm Cooperatives; Dr. W. Faith Williams, U. S. Dept. of Labor, When the Nations Get Together; I. Forest Huddleson, Mich. State College, Keeping Farm Animals Healthy; Miss Elsie Margaret Reed, Norway, on Life Under German Occupation; A. H. Tandy, British Consul, on Food and Farming in Britain; Today, Mrs. Chu Shih-Ming, of China's part in the War; Miss Flora Dodson, returned missionary on Life in a Japanese Prison Camp; Miss Gertrude Lieken, Wilmington, Del. Postwar Prospects for Homemakers; J. B. Hutson, of Washington, on The Farmer's Part in the War in 1944.

The County Agent's or Home Demonstration Agent's offices will have a limited number of the meeting programs. The convention has for its purpose the bringing together of outstanding farm and home authorities to discuss with farm people timely and important problems.

Mrs. Mary Howe has returned home from a visit with her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards Bohl and sons of Batesville, Ind.

Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Quota Short of Goal—Not Too Late Yet to Buy Seal.

According to a report just released by R. V. Lents, Exec. Sec'y. of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association, the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal sale in 36th short of the county quota of $725. Mr. Lents stated that the quota could be reached by sending him your dollar now for the seals mailed. All schools are requested to make your reports immediately to Mr. Lents. Don't forget that it is not too late to send in your dollar for Christmas Seals. Put the county over the top.

Stanley L. McElroy Taking Preflight Training at San Antonio, Texas.

The future pilots receive nine weeks of instruction at the Center learning the fundamentals necessary for actual flight training in primary, basic and advanced schools. They are prepared physically and mentally to attain their common goal, the silver wings of Army Air Force pilots.

Mrs. Laura Piner
Mrs. Laura Piner, Crittenden, Ky., passed away at St. Elizabeth Hospital Friday, December 24th following a short illness.

Funeral services were conducted from Chambers and Grubbs funeral home at Walton with the Rev. Lloyd Robinson of Erlanger in charge. Burial was in Independence Cemetery.

She is survived by one son, Olan Piner of Crittenden and three grand children.

Walton Boy Undergoing "Boot" Training at Great Lakes.

A new recruit at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, is John Austin Snape, 18, 31 South Main Street, Walton, Kentucky.

Now undergoing "boot" training, he is being indoctrinated into Navy life, and is being instructed in Seamanship, military drill, and naval procedure. Soon, he will be given series of aptitude tests to determine whether he will be selected to attend one of the Navy's service schools, or will be assigned to active duty at sea. Upon completion of his recruit training, he will be granted a nine-day leave.

John L. Jones

John L. Jones of Bullittsville passed away at his home Saturday, December 25th from an attack of influenza.

Funeral services were conducted from the home Tuesday at 2 p. m. with the Rev. J. W. Campbell in charge. Burial was in Petersburgh Cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Zora Jones; one son, Bert Jones, and one grand daughter, Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Dear Folk:

I received the Advertiser from you folk this week. Certainly was glad to get the news from the home town and surrounding territory. It means a lot when you're away from home.

I enjoy taking this Hospital Course very much and only wish more folk had the opportunity of taking this course, civilians and all.

I wish to thank you from the depth of my heart for the paper. I certainly do enjoy it. Again thanks. Wishing you and all the folk in Walton a Happy New Year.

Sincerely yours,
N. E. Northcutt Jr. S 2-c

New Haven Homemakers'

A very enjoyable meeting of the New Haven Homemakers' was held at the home of Mrs. George Baker, December 21st. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Harry Moore. After the business meeting was over, the members were invited to the dining room where we did ample justice to the delicious covered dish luncheon. After lunch we drove out to New Haven and thoroughly enjoyed the program presented by the first six grades. We then returned to Mrs. Baker's for our Christmas party and exchange of gifts, under the direction of our program chairman, Mrs. Walker Pennington after which work on the Afghan we are making for the wounded soldiers. After the meeting were entertained by G. W. Baker Jr. with two very pretty piano numbers. Our next meeting will be held on January 18th.

Large Poultry Flock Makes Good Record

Grant Maddox of Florence has the honor of having one of the largest and highest producing flocks in the county according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. Maddox started the year with 2150 laying birds and finished the year ending October 1st with an average of 1445 birds that average laying 224.9 eggs per bird a county record for this size flock.

The October record, the first month for the new poultry year, rates equally good on the above flock. The past October was a low production month for most farms. This flock averaging 2138 birds produced a total of 33,289 eggs or an average of 15.48 eggs per hen.

The above record shows that good production can be secured provided good breeding stock and good poultry management is followed. Usually it is much more difficult to handle a large flock than it is a small flock.

Many poultry flocks today are giving poor production because they are over crowded or not culled close. From 3% to four square feet floor space per bird should be allowed in the poultry house if maximum production is to be secured. The poorly developed late birds seldom pay for their feed especially when they over crowd the good birds.

THANKS TO BEAU BRUMELL

The employees of the Walton Mfg. Co. wish to thank their employers, Weisbaum Bros. for a delightful Christmas Party given at the factory, Friday, Dec. 24th. At noon a bountiful luncheon of sandwiches, fruit, drinks, candy, and nuts was served.

The festive touch was added by a beautifully decorated Xmas tree. Each employee was presented a large dressed turkey with the compliments of Beau Brumell.

We take this means of expressing our sincere thanks to such generous and thoughtful employers, the Weisbaum Brothers: Stella Fisher, Ethel Winkle, Stella Gultridge, Grace Dearing, Evelyn Sizemore, Ethel Bredren, Hope Vest, Grace Hanks, Mabel Webster, Lucille Mershon, Margaret Young, Belle Fisher, Lillian Young, Belle Fisher, Mary Larly, Ruth Hall, Jane Johnson, Flora Summey, Eva Carr, Finella Sizemore, Grace Mayhugh, Osa Coop, Lovetta Phillips, May Windie, Anna Frake, Velma Furtner, Willis Hartman, Evelyn Sizemore, and Hallie Ruber, Manager.

Home Food Production Important

Home Food Production will play a more important part with farm people in 1944 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent and Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Boone County Extension Association and Homemakers Club leaders will hold a series of meetings in the near future to plan ways and means of meeting both the economic and time needs for increased home food production and more efficient uses of home produced foods.

The 1944 educational program will include not only quantity production but greater varieties of more efficient canning, storing and preserving of these products and the more efficient and palatable uses of these products in the family diet.

Farm families have made remarkable progress in home food in recent years. 1943 was a record home food production year. High quality foods were preserved for winter uses the past fall, never before according to the Homemakers club reports.

Mrs. Dora M. Kindred

Services for Mrs. Dora M. Kindred, who died Monday, December 27th at her home in Verona, Ky., after a lingering illness, was conducted Thursday, Dec. 30th at 2 p. m. at the Tharp & 8th funeral home, Florence, Kentucky. Burial was held in Hopefield Cemetery.

Real Estate News

The Mutual Realty Company, Williamstown, Ky. Forest S. Thompson, proprietor, reports the sale of 195 acres of highly improved farm land located in the edge of Gallatin and Grant Counties, near Route 16 and Verona to R. P. (Pat) Coleman, Falmouth, Ky. This farm belonged to D. R. (Dud) Chapman, Zion Station, Ky., who lived on the farm. This is a fine and stock farm and most of it can be cultivated with a tractor. Mr. Coleman will place a tenant on his new farm, as his immediate attention is required by the large Licking River bottom on which he lives. The price was app. $14,000.00.

Also the sale of the 152 acre farm located near Mason to Mr. Arnold, who now lives near Crittenden on Dixie Highway in Kenon County. This farm was owned by Bill Fortner, who lives on it. Mr. Arnold will get possession before March 1st, and will move to his new purchase. The price was $5,200.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wishterman of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, formerly of Independence are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a daughter, born Sunday, Dec. 26th. The little one has been named Joy Juanita, they have two other children.

Scott—Trapp

Miss Wanda Scott and Mr. Lewis Trapp were united in marriage on Thursday, December 16, 1943 at Walton, Ky. by the Rev. Geo. Carland, pastor of the Walton Christian Church.

Mrs. Trapp is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of North Walton. Mr. Trapp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Trapp of the Green Road.

They will make their home with Mr. Trapp's parents for the present time.

Their many friends wish for them a life of happiness, prosperity and success as they make the journey together.

More Men Needed In United States Maritime Service

Pointing out that the long-awaited invasion of Western Europe will require the greatest fleet of merchant vessels ever assembled, Ensign J. C. Jahn, enrolling officer for the U. S. Maritime Service, 8th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, declared today that many more merchant seamen must be trained within the next few months for the gigantic task of keeping the invasion army supplied.

Ensign Jahn's office is recruiting physically fit men from 17½ to 50 for training in the deck and engine departments, as hospital corpsmen, ship's clerks, radio operators, cooks, bakers, and steward's mates. Increased enrollment quotas have enabled the Cincinnati office to accept many more applications than has been the case in recent months.

Men classified 4-F or those discharged for physical reasons for the armed forces cannot be accepted. Applicants are urged to report at once with two copies of their birth certificates and a release from the nearest office of the U. S. Employment Service.

Henry Ellis Burden

Henry Ellis Burden, Walton business man and farmer passed away suddenly Tuesday night, December 28th from an acute attack at his place of business on North Main St.

Mr. Burden had been helping with the stripping of his tobacco on the farm near Kensington, in the evening when he started home. He could not start the car so he and Mr. Rice started to walk home but found the walk was too much. A car was sent for him and he passed away shortly after reaching his home at the store.

Funeral services were held from the Chambers and Grubbs funeral home Friday, Dec. 31st at 11 a. m. with Rev. C. G. Dearing, pastor of the Methodist Church in charge of the services. Burial was in the Cynthia Cemetery.

Mr. Burden is survived by his adopted daughter, Miss Daisy Hill with whom he made his home and one sister of Cincinnati and many friends.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the arrangements.

Park Hills Flyer Writes of Being "Tail-End Charlie" on Bombing Raid.

It's a good thing Lieut. Melvin G. Dryer, of Park Hills, was serenely unaware that his B-26 Marauder was the "tail-end Charlie" of a bombing mission group several months ago—or he might have been scared.

Lieut. Dryer, who lives at 600 S. Arlington road, told of his experience, the roughest of his 40 missions, in a dispatch from a U. S. Army 12th Air Force bomber base. It was a tight, over small railroad yards at Villa Littera, Italy, in August.

"A Long Flight"
"We were attacked by 75 ME 109's and they really were making persistent, aggressive attacks," Lieut. Dryer said. "My tail gunner called over the interphone to say he was out of ammunition. The fighters kept flashing by the cockpit and I kept thinking the Lord that there were four bombers behind us bearing the brunt of the attack."

"The fight kept up more than half an hour, finally the Germans quit after 22 of their planes had been shot down. I called the gunners and asked how the four planes behind us had made out. 'Right at the finish line we have been tail-end Charlies all during the fight,' was the answer I got. I'm glad I didn't know that while the bullets were whizzing around—it might have scared me."

Promoted Recently
The Park Hills youth, a pilot, was promoted recently from second to first lieutenant. He is 25.

Lieut. Dryer's 40 missions have gripped him since Rome, Naples, and in support of both the Sicilian and Italian invasion fleets.

Most of his missions were flown in the medium bomber called "Flak Hawk"—so named, Lieut. Dryer said, "because I think it had a magnet in it."

Since he went overseas in Sept. 1942, Lieut. Dryer has served in England as well as the Mediterranean theater. He has been awarded the Air Medal with eight Oak Leaf clusters—Ky. Post.

Lieut. Dryer is the nephew of Mrs. Edna Stamler Combs of Walton.

LI. (J. G.) William D. Scroggin, U. S. N. R. Visits Old Friends At Verona While On Leave.

LI. (J. G.) William D. Scroggin, U. S. N. R. has been in service since November 23, 1942 assigned to Naval Officers Procurement, Chicago, Ill. He is now assigned to the Pacific Theatre.

Bill as he is known to his many friends is a graduate of Verona High School, he attended University of Kentucky, graduated at the Teachers College and took some post-graduate work at Columbia University.

Since boyhood he has always been interested in outdoor life and is an enthusiastic athlete, was head coach at Morehead for a number of years and later held responsible positions with C. C. in Kentucky and West Virginia.

While Bill has no relatives here he stated that he could not resist the opportunity of spending a day or two on Old Kentucky soil before leaving for his recent assignment with Uncle Sam.

His many friends are proud of him and wish him well.

Important Notice to Truck Owners.
All truck owners who hold War Necessity Certificates, must apply for their gasoline in person for this quarter on or before January 16, 1944. If you don't apply by this date you will have to be referred back to the Office of Defense Transportation before you can get any gasoline.

Stanford Speaks At Local Farm Bureau Meeting

J. E. Stanford, Executive Sec'y. of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation addressed members of the Boone County Organization at Burlington, on Monday afternoon of this week. He outlined the important farm program being sponsored by the State and American Farm Bureau Federations and stressed the importance of the County meeting its goal of 100 members in 1944.

Lloyd Siskman and C. Liston Hempling were elected county delegates to the State Farm Bureau convention to be held at Louisville on January 12-14. Harold Criger and J. C. Acree were elected alternate delegates.

The Constitution and By-Laws of the County Organization calls for quarterly meetings to be held at Burlington on the first Monday of January, April, July and October.

The secretary reported that Boone County had 58 paid memberships in 1943. All members present felt that Boone County should exceed the goal of 100 members in 1944. All farmers interested in a strong county Farm Bureau in 1944 are urged to send their $5.00 membership to John E. Criger, Burlington, Secretary-Treasurer or to contact one of the officers, directors or members.

Lloyd Siskman of Petersburg was re-elected president, Stanley S. Ranson of Walton, Vice President and John E. Criger, Burlington, Secretary-Treasurer. Directors elected for two years, 1944 and 1945 are: George Hill, Florence; Joseph A. Huey, Union; Walter W. Criger, Verona; Hubert E. White, Burlington; and S. D. S. Ranson, Walton. Directors elected for one year or 1944 are: J. D. Acree, Hamilton; C. J. Hempling, Cincinnati; John L. Klopff, Petersburg; Chas. B. Beall, Hebron; and W. H. Presser, Grant.

Robinson—Revard
Paul A. Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Robinson of South Walton and Miss Margaret Revard, accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Revard of Independence were united in marriage, Dec. 24th, 6:30 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Revard, Chas. B. Beall, Hebron; and W. H. Presser, Grant.

The groom's parents and a few close friends were present.

The groom is a medical student in the U. S. Army at Richmond, Va. The bride is a member of the faculty of the Dixie Heights School.

They expect to make their home in Richmond, Va.

Best wishes are extended to this happy young couple.

Jean "Fox" DeMoisey has returned to Lawrenceburg, Ky. where he is a member of the faculty at the Kavenough High School after spending the holidays with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey.

Application For Subsidy Payments Should Be Made

The applications for the Dairy Feed Subsidy Payment for November and December, 1943 should be made when all weight receipts for milk, butterfat, cream and buttermilk are received.

The payment will be at the same rate as that paid for October.

Some producers have not yet filed for their October Payment. It is permissible to include the October weights along with November and December, and receive a combined pay for the three months, according to John E. Criger, Secretary of the Boone County Farm Bureau Association.

All producers are urged to submit their weight receipts as soon as possible, as it is doubtful if any weights will be received by the office from the Dairy Companies.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE—WNU FEATURES

Jan Payson is given the lead in the Devon Arms floor show when Paul Harris, the hotel manager, finds out that the rich William Anthony Devereest knows her. He thinks Devereest's interest will bring patronage. But the show is not a success and Paul Harris is angry. Devereest did not bring his friends. Jan does not want to let Paul know that she thinks he is the truth. She does not know Devereest—she thinks Devereest is her own chauffeur, Tony Williams. He does not dare tell her the truth, for she has told him she hates Devereest because of his wealth. Unknown to Jan, Devereest makes arrangements to pay for an operation that may restore her invalid sister, Dora, to health.

CHAPTER V

Jan stood mute as he went on. "The Devon Arms must take good care of its most important guests!" He clapped his hands as a gesture to his housekeeper and she followed him, and left the room. "I am going to find out what this all means!" thought Jan, a little later. She found Paul in his office still looking pleased with himself. "I came to thank you again for the beautiful way you fixed up our rooms," Jan began.

"Thank nothing of it," said the manager. "We have been very happy to have you girls here, Jan, and we hope you have enjoyed your stay as much as we have."

"Goodness!" thought Jan, "that sounds as if he expected us to be going soon."

More bewildered than ever, she tried again. "I really don't know how to thank you, Mr. Harris, and I know Dora will be more than delighted. She thinks that apartment, you know, is absolutely the most beautiful place in the whole world."

"Well—Paul cleared his throat. "I am very glad to hear that—very glad. I hope both of you, Jan, will always keep a warm spot in your heart for the Devon Arms."

That farewell note again Jan decided on a sudden attack.

"Where does Mr. Devereest come in on this?" she inquired as casually as if they had been discussing that gentleman just the moment before.

"What a bright little lady you are," said Paul, smiling. "Mr. Devereest bound me to secrecy."

Instantly Jan knew that in order to find out anything at all she must pretend to have information she did not possess.

"Of course there's no secret, really, except in his own imagination," Paul looked relieved. He had wondered if he had not been a mistake in rousing Jan's suspicions, but of course the girl knew what was actually at the bottom of it all. No girl smart enough to get into the Devon Arms could be really in the dark about his Christmas eve "surprise" for her.

"Well, since you do know the facts," Paul told her, "I see no harm in giving you a hint that ought to make the surprise even more enjoyable for you. Mr. Devereest is planning to announce his engagement with a magnificent party here, at the Devon Arms, on Christmas Eve. He is having the whole supper room made into a Christmas scene, with the biggest tree in town and all the trimmings."

"You'd like a new dress for the party, wouldn't you, Jan? I know you haven't been getting enough money—due to unfortunate circumstances—to splurge on a new party dress, so as a Christmas present I have arranged with Mary Elizabeth Howard for an engagement dress for you, and she's expecting you to call tomorrow morning for a fitting appointment."

"That's sweet of you, Paul," said Jan unsteadily.

"I ventured to hope that you would have dinner at my home," Brad Curtis said. "My mother is particularly anxious to meet you; I've talked about you two girls a lot."

"Do you live with your mother?" said Jan, simply because she felt she had to say something. Dr. Curtis was helping her into her wrap.

"That's right. She's very old, hardly stirs out of the big top-heavy house in which she went housekeeping when she was first married. I live there because it pleases her, and because I like it myself. He spoke to the chauffeur.

"Stop at the corner, Charles. I want to get some flowers."

When he came back he handed Jan a transparent box containing a spray of hellebore berries, red and gold against evergreen.

"How lovely with this dress!" Jan took out the unusual corsage and fastened it at her waist.

"Lovely with your eyes and hair," Brad said gravely. "More red than your hair, less golden than your eyes."

When the meal was over the old lady suggested coffee in the library for Jan and Brad. She never drank coffee herself, she explained, and would go to her own room at once.

Jan waited until Brad had called his mother to her room and called her maid to make her comfortable for the night. He returned to the dining room and saw Jan's arm through his, and they went into the library. Here only one lamp had been switched on, and the light of a coal fire, brightening things before you were ready.

"No. I was just taking the kitten to see Dora," she couldn't think of anything better on the spur of the moment.

"Humph!" said Mrs. Talbot.

"You belong here," Brad began again after a while. "Brad began to have the things that can give you."

"I'm thirty-five years old and you're twenty? That's fifteen years between us. Could you learn to love a man fifteen years older than yourself? Will you give me a chance to teach you to love me?"

"Perhaps," said Brad gently, "I ought first to ask you, is there anyone else, Jan?"

"No," whispered Jan.

"For a little while I thought you and Tony—er—Williams—"

"No," said Jan, firmly this time. "That didn't mean anything."

"Then—you try to love me?"

"Oh, Doctor Curtis, I do love you. Impulsively Jan rose and threw her arms around his neck. He disengaged them after a moment and held both her hands in his.

"That's not quite the way I meant," he told her softly. Then, "We'll leave it at that, shall we? And now I'll take you home."

He had not been long in the morning. I've got a camp at a place called Moose River.

"Brad, I do wish you a happy Christmas," said Jan.

It was December 23rd. Jan was expecting Tony to ring up any moment now. With such an excuse as this Christmas eve party he would surely make an attempt to see her again!

She was due at Mary Elizabeth Howard's at eleven this morning. She presented herself dutifully. Mary Elizabeth herself came in to supervise this last fitting as Jan did as they directed her before the big Brad rose and crossed the space that lay between them. "Come over here," he said, drawing her to his feet.

"You belong here," Brad began again after a while. "Brad began to have the things that can give you."

"I'm thirty-five years old and you're twenty? That's fifteen years between us. Could you learn to love a man fifteen years older than yourself? Will you give me a chance to teach you to love me?"

"Perhaps," said Brad gently, "I ought first to ask you, is there anyone else, Jan?"

"No," whispered Jan.

"For a little while I thought you and Tony—er—Williams—"

"No," said Jan, firmly this time. "That didn't mean anything."

"Then—you try to love me?"

"Oh, Doctor Curtis, I do love you. Impulsively Jan rose and threw her arms around his neck. He disengaged them after a moment and held both her hands in his.

"That's not quite the way I meant," he told her softly. Then, "We'll leave it at that, shall we? And now I'll take you home."

He had not been long in the morning. I've got a camp at a place called Moose River.

"Brad, I do wish you a happy Christmas," said Jan.

It was December 23rd. Jan was expecting Tony to ring up any moment now. With such an excuse as this Christmas eve party he would surely make an attempt to see her again!

BUSY PHYSICIANS

Every civilian physician is and has been very busy for many months. With and without hospital laboratories also busy he often has had to wait some time for reports.

In an endeavor to help his fellow physicians, many of whom "are carrying a killing load," Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, has some "diagnostic time-savers, for overworked physicians."

Among these "time-savers" are hints on recognizing functional illnesses.

"Good signs of a neurosis are the inability of the patient to say what the main complaint is, a tendency to answer the physician's questions with statements that have nothing to do with these questions, to complain of little things, to break in and let the physician finish a sentence, to keep consulting a long written list of symptoms, to tremble and weep as the story is told or tell the physician how to diagnose and treat the disease."

There are certain symptoms that practically always mean a neurosis. Symptoms such as jitteriness, the fear of not being able to get a deep breath, fluttering or burning in the abdomen, oft repeated belching, distress and bloating after eating or especially after drinking cold water or "pop," attacks of pain and soreness in lower abdomen, together with passage of mucus, distresses that come before breakfast, bloating that comes up during the day and disappears during the night without the passage of flatus (gas), and pains that persist even after several operations.

Dr. Alvarez points out that there are some of us who almost from childhood have had one illness after another without any cause that can be found. These illnesses are headache, weak eyes, indigestion, constipation, back-ache, sleeplessness and "aches and pains all over."

"Good nervous habits and the contractor's having put in poor materials are usually the best explanation for these symptoms."

Among the other "illnesses" mentioned by Dr. Alvarez as being caused by lack of nervous balance are nervous breakdown, extreme fatigue, food allergy, migraine, stomach and intestinal ulcers.

Scabies Parasite May Attack Anyone

One of the ideas we had as boys at high school was that a person with blackheads or pimples could not be as clean as his body as he should be. If he would wash his skin with soap and water, and perhaps use a skin brush, he would remove the blackheads from his "pores" and the skin oil would come out on the surface of the skin. Tony we know that having pimples and blackheads is not a matter of cleanliness, but is caused by gland changes in the body which interfere with the proper use of certain kinds of foods, usually fats and starches. Fortunately, a cure was not thought due to any lack of intelligence in these students with acne because their class standing was at least equal to that of the class average.

In the army, in schools or other institutions, patients suffering with the scabies (the itch) have usually been considered of low intelligence despite the fact that there were so many exceptions.

In the British Lancet, Drs. K. Mellanby, A. L. Northridge and C. Johnson report the results of their investigations as to the intelligence of several hundred patients suffering with scabies. The results of this investigation showed that men with scabies were mentally a normal sample from the army. There was nothing to suggest that the group suffering with scabies had a larger percentage with low intelligence than those not afflicted with scabies.

"There was no significant difference in intelligence between men who reported themselves sick, those who were discovered during the regular or routine physical inspections, those with a few parasites or those with or without infection following an attack of scabies."

From the above we learn that the parasite, the itch mite, the female which buries itself under the skin, giving the appearance of scratches, makes no special choice as to victims. The itching is due to substances given off by the parasites and their eggs.

QUESTION BOX

Q—What causes excessive sweating of the hands?

A—Sweating of the hands is usually a sign of nervousness or emotional disturbances. A single dose of Kraz may correct condition for months.

Q—What is creptation?

A—Creptation is that crackling noise you hear when there are adhesions about a joint. Did you hear it when bone is first broken. Often hear it in old rheumatic conditions.

JESUS BUSY WITH HIS MINISTRY OF LOVE

LESSON TEXT: Mark 1:34-45. GOLDEN TEXT—I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.—John 9:4.

Jesus said that He "must work the works of him that sent him" (John 9:4). And so we find Him going straightaway about His Father's business. It is a good example He has set for us.

What He did and how He did it will give us many lessons which we may apply to our service. We can not do exactly what He did, but in His power we may do mighty works.

1. Healing (vv. 32-34).

We will do well to include verses 29-31 in our thinking, for there we find our Lord tenderly sharing the sorrows of the home of a friend. One can picture the anxious husband that hovered over the home as distressed relatives and friends sought to alleviate the suffering of the one with a fever. They knew the possibility of a serious outcome of the illness. Many of us have gone through that dark valley. All at once there was new hope, and there was Jesus. He had come and had brought healing. Many of us have also had that blessed experience.

Christianity is not a selfish faith. It is for the Lord. We see in verses 29 to 34 that all the city came to His door with the diseased and demon-possessed, and He healed them all.

The account of the kindly and intelligent care of the sick is written large on the pages of the history of the Christian church. We do not have the record of immediate healing, but we may have His compassion which served the multitude with tenderness and kindness.

II. Praying (vv. 35-37).

The old God sought out a place and a time for prayer communion with His Father. How often we who profess to follow Him fail to pray at all. Certainly we need the grace and power that prayer can bring far more than Jesus did. But we say we are so busy. So was He. People will not let us alone. He also followed Him. We make excuses, but we have no real reasons for our unfortunate delinquency.

All men were seeking Him (v. 37); he still He took the needed time to pray. It has been said that "if you are too busy to pray, you are busier than God ever intended you to be."

When His disciples wanted Him, they had to look for Him in the place of prayer. Christian workers and pastors, do people find us there? III. Preaching (vv. 38, 39).

Jesus said, "Let us go . . . that I may preach . . . for therefore came I forth." It bears repetition that while Jesus did many miracles (and not for a moment would we detract from their worth and glory), yet He repeatedly, by word and act, emphasized the importance of preaching. Foolish though it may seem to the natural man (1 Cor. 1:18-25), preaching the gospel in the power of the Holy Spirit is now, as it has been through the centuries, God's chosen means of accomplishing His purpose. What a pity that churches and pastors are forsaking it for book review, drama, social hours, forums and what not!

God give us a revival of great, humble, and fearless preaching of the Word!

IV. Cleansing (vv. 40-43).

There is a sense in which the cleansing of the leper was another act of healing, but leprosy is such a striking type of sin that the incident calls for special consideration. Leprosy is like sin in that it is a destructive malady that pursues its insidious way without revealing its true nature until it is

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Keep Lamps Turned Off In Unoccupied Rooms

Leaving lamps burning in unoccupied rooms not only wastes light but shortens the life of lamp bulbs, which use tungsten — a critical war material. Turn off all lamps and fixtures promptly when not in actual use. Your lamp bulbs will stay brighter longer, you'll get more useful light at less expense and you'll help conserve electricity and vital materials for the war effort.

SIX OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

1. Remove and clean lamp bulbs and lamp bowls regularly. Dry thoroughly before using again.
2. Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Repaint or refinish dark-colored paper or parchment shades.
3. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.
4. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.
5. Arrange furniture so one lamp can serve two people. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.
6. Eliminate amber or flame-tinted bulbs. Inside-frosted white bulbs of same wattage give much more light.

LABOR: U. S. Runs Rails

Railroads fell into government hands as President Roosevelt moved quickly to avert strikes which threatened to tie U. S. freight and passenger transportation into a knot, and return to private ownership was promised after passage of the emergency.

FDR acted when the brotherhoods of conductors, switchmen and firemen and engineers refused his offer to arbitrate their dispute even though two other brotherhoods, the trainmen and engineers, accepted the proposal and were awarded a nine cent an hour wage increase and a one-week vacation with pay.

Also accepting FDR's arbitration offer at the zero hour were 15 non-operating unions representing 100,000 workers, who agreed to the government's recent wage increase from 10 cents an hour to the lowest paid to 4 cents an hour to the highest paid, but also asked for overtime beyond 40 hours.

Steel Workers Back
Answering an appeal of President Roosevelt, 170,000 striking steel workers trooped back to the nation's mills after a three-day walkout, in protest over the government's refusal to promise payment of new wage raises back to the date the old contracts expired.

In appealing to the CIO's United Steel Workers of America, FDR did so on the understanding that any new pay boosts would date back to the time the old pacts ended. If any such back payments checked into steel company finances, FDR promised price revisions.

The steel workers demanded a 17 cent an hour raise over the present 78 cents an hour rate. If granted, the increase would crack the War Labor board's so-called "Little Steel" formula, limiting pay boosts to 15 per cent over the January, 1941, levels.

AGRICULTURE: CCC Spends More

Fulfilling commitments to farmers to support higher prices of crops and livestock products, the Commodity Credit Corporation increased its loans and purchases to 3 1/2 billion dollars for the fiscal year 1943. In addition to stimulating production, CCC said its expenditures assisted OPA in maintaining price ceilings, particularly for vegetable oils, dairy products, poultry products and meats.

Prices principally were supported by loans to farmers on commodities stored against civilian and military requirements, and by lend-lease purchases. Of 2 billion, 700 million dollars worth of commodities CCC bought, about 1 1/2 billion dollars were for lend-lease account.

Beans and Peas

Despite record production of beans and peas in 1943, U. S. civilians will receive a per capita supply in 1944 equal to the average for 1933-39. Of the 23,000,000 bags of beans and 6,800,000 bags of peas which will be available in 1944, U. S. military services will get 3,441,000 bags of beans and 300,000 bags of peas.

U. S. Allies, liberated areas and U. S. territories will receive 7,085,000 bags of beans and 3,312,000 bags of peas, with Russia's share approximating 3,024,000 bags of beans and 723,000 bags of peas, and Great Britain's 572,000 bags of beans and 509,700 bags of peas.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

FEDERAL PAYROLL: Number of employees on the federal payroll declined in October for the fourth consecutive month, now standing at 2,952,013, as compared with 2,969,011 a month earlier.

FRIGHT CARS: New freight cars on order on December 1 numbered 36,253, as compared with 28,108 on the same date of 1942. Locomotives on order also increased.

PENICILLIN: A chemical company in Terre Haute, Ind., is being awarded a contract for the new wonder drug that is derived from a mold.

HAY: Race horse owners have to pay so much for horse feed that they are worried about hijackers. It is reported from Florida that motorcycle policemen guard trucks loaded with hay, oats and carrots.

RUSSIA: One-Two

Delivering a stiff one-two punch, Russian armies struck at the Germans in the north and south, knocking them off balance in both sectors. Greatest surprise came in the south, where Gen. Nicholas Vatutin's first Ukrainian army struck below the main battle line about the rail junction of Zhitomir, driving a deep dent in the enemy's positions before the Nazis could rush up reserves.

WAR PRODUCTION: Pattern Changes

Principally because Allied armies have swung from the defensive to the offensive, the pattern of war production in the U. S. has changed, with emphasis on ships, planes, heavy construction material and signal equipment, and de-emphasis on tanks, small arms and anti-aircraft artillery.

Ships of all kinds are needed for landing operations and supply; more planes are required for covering expanding fronts; heavy construction material is a must for building operational bases in occupied territories, and signal equipment has to be furnished to round out the service's growth.

On the other hand, shipbuilders' demands for steel and the effectiveness of anti-tank guns has led to a cut in tank output. Peak production has resulted in an overabundance of small arms and munitions. Improbability of enemy air raids over the U. S. and the increasing defensive strength of our air force, have determined reductions in the anti-aircraft artillery program.

WHISKY: Control New Brands

The addition of U. S. whiskey drinkers to the list of rationed consumers has resulted in a new brand of whiskey. OPA's decision to slap price ceilings on new brands making their debut since March, 1942, when controls were set on the old brands, has resulted in a new brand of whiskey. OPA set flat dollars and cents ceilings plus federal taxes at processors' levels for all bottled in bond, straight whiskeys estimated at 80 proof. Wholesalers and retailers were allowed markups, plus state taxes.

Similar ceilings have been branched for new brands of rum, brandy, gin, cordials and liqueurs, OPA said.

CIO:

Political Action
Seeking to mobilize 14 million labor votes, the CIO has organized a political action committee, headed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' chief, Sidney Hillman.

Declaring the object of the committee is to organize labor for obtaining effective representation in government, Hillman said immediately after the committee's formation from the congress from . . . die-hard Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats who have defaulted in their duties not alone to labor but to the whole nation on home-front issues.

Already engaged in joint or similar action with the AFL in many cases, the CIO committee is seeking support of the railroad brotherhoods and such farm groups as the National Grange. Funds totaling $700,000 already have been raised.

News Oddities

When frightened thoroughbreds could not be bugged from their stalls during a fire in Atlanta, Ga., recently, the caretaker remembered the old adage that a white mule can lead horses from a burning building.

Haltering a white mule from a nearby stable, the caretaker led the mule into the burning building, and, sure enough, the panicked, neighing horses quieted down and followed the white mule out.

HOCS:

New Floor Temporary
The government's extension of the "floor" price for hogs from 200 to 300 pounds, is a temporary measure designed to provide farmers with an equitable market during the present high tide of shipments, War Food administration declared.

When the glut is cleared, WFA said, the government will again go back to the 200 to 270 pound floor range, but farmers will be notified of the change.

Because of congestion, WFA said, some farmers have been unable to obtain permits for shipping hogs, and they have hesitated to send their animals to more distant markets because of shrinkage losses and higher transportation costs.

GOODS DISTRIBUTION

Communities that have been finding difficulty in getting their share of such scarce items as flashlights, bobby pins, cooking utensils and electric appliances can expect a larger supply soon. The War Production board has asked manufacturers and wholesalers to make voluntary changes in their allotment schedules.

Shortages are particularly acute in cities that have expanded in the last year or two because of an influx of war workers.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Washington, D. C.

FARM LAND ROOM
Secretary of Agriculture Wickard will soon trot up to Capitol Hill with a proposed bill in his pocket to put an end to the farm land boom. He is keenly worried about speculation in farm properties, has made a couple of speeches on that subject, but has not disclosed the full extent of the penalties he will propose to stop land speculation.

His bill carries a tax of 90 per cent on profits from the sale of farms held less than two years. In other words, if a farm is bought and sold within a year or two, the deal is obviously for speculation, not for farm production, and the profits are to be practically confiscated by the proposed tax.

Farm sales are so heavy that, if the present trend continues, they will surpass those of 1919-20, which was a record year. Iowa farm land, for example, is bringing $225 an acre.

Wickard has evidence indicating that the men engaged in this speculative buying are not farmers, and most of them are not even residents of farm areas. They are investment houses and insurance companies, who have money lying around loose and think they can make killing, as they did in World War I.

The record of their speculation in the past is still written black on the pages of farm history. It is seen every time AAA makes benefit payments, for the largest checks in many states go, not to individual farmers, but to insurance companies and banks which have bought land or taken it over by foreclosing mortgages.

Wickard is prepared for opposition to his bill. However, the opposition will come not from farm elements, but from the speculators and also from Wall street brokers who fear that the next move might be a capital-gains tax on stock-market operations.

ELK HILLS BOILS

Latest developments in the Elk Hills oil controversy are known only to those who can see the inner workings of the cabinet.

Attorney General Biddle was expected to denounce the navy's contract with Standard Oil of California as illegal. The reason he didn't is that two cabinet colleagues got next to him and changed his mind.

Experts in the justice department have declared the contract illegal, and passed their findings along to Biddle. Biddle, in turn, was expected to tell the house naval committee the object of the deal was the result that congress would not, doubtfully recommend condemnation. Thus, Standard of California relinquish all the property to the government.

But when Biddle appeared before the committee, he pulled his punches. Instead of declaring the contract illegal, he merely stated that he had "grave doubts" whether it was legal.

The committee was expecting a forthright statement. Even its chairman, Congressman Vinson of Georgia, who is very close to navy officials, privately favors condemnation.

Secret of what happened is this. Two cabinet colleagues got hold of Biddle's statement. One was Secretary of the Navy, who was responsible for the contract in the first place; the other was Harold Clegg, whose Petroleum Administration is negotiating a Standard Oil of California executive.

The light is not over. Look for fireworks in public hearings before the committee next month.

SUBSIDY ISSUE POSTPONED

The 9-8 vote by which the Bankhead anti-subsidy bill was defeated in the senate banking and currency committee came as a surprise to insiders.

When they first took it up behind closed doors, most members of the committee agreed that the bill would be reported out favorably and that Roosevelt would suffer a resounding defeat on subsidies. As it turned out, the deciding vote for subsidies was cast by Republican Senator Joseph Ball of Minnesota, whom Bankhead supporters considered in their anti-subsidy camp.

Terrific pressure had been exerted on Ball by some of the big dairy interests in his state. However, the Minnesota is a fearless spokesman who believes in putting the interests of the nation and of the majority of the people over special or state interests. He not only voted against the inflationary Bankhead bill, but also against the Toot compromise which was backed by a lopsided vote.

TIP ON PEACE RUMORS

Note to New York stock brokers: When you get panicky over peace rumors, read the following words of Col. N. B. Brice, commanding officer at Fort Knox, Ky.:

"There is much talk of early peace. If you were in a poker game, you would be the one to take the game to end. Obviously, that is the way it will be when you had all the chips in front of you. The Germans and the Japanese would be greatly pleased to make peace now while they hold captured possessions."

'Realistic' Attitude Marks Change in Allied Diplomacy

New Journey Into International Cooperation Combines Idealism and Realism; Step Away From Old Style Power Alliances.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

What kind of a man is Stalin?

That question was put to President Roosevelt at the White House press and radio conference on the day of his return to Washington from Europe. He was tanned, alert, cheerful, still pulsing with the consciousness of achievement. His answer, which came without a second's hesitation, I thought, was significant.

Stalin, he said, was a realist, just like himself.

I am not particularly interested in the accuracy of that answer, either as an analysis of Stalin or, as an analysis of the President, for the fact that the President chose to use the word "realist" is in itself a statement of the outstanding and common characteristic of himself and the man on whose word and deed so much of the future depends is, I think, significant.

On the whole, in the light of later pronouncements, use of that term seems a good omen rather than a bad one.

Mr. Roosevelt is committed to a plan for the postwar world which leans toward the ideal, rather than toward the old style diplomatic realism which has nothing but tooth-and-claw tactics behind a laundered facade of protocol. I think the American people have shown plainly that they are more interested in stopping—or at least postponing—war than they are in the slogans of the isolationists or the imperialists. Granted that, the fact that Roosevelt emphasizes the "realist" when he speaks, gives one a feeling that he and Stalin and Churchill have been able to reach some rough agreement, and that they are practical enough to work, and yet are a little less earthy than the old power alliances, which always end in wars and always fail.

The Conference

I recall very well that crowded news conference for which friend and foe alike turned out to see what the President looked like after his trip. One hundred and seventy-nine working press and radio correspondents were there, not counting officials. The innocent expected some hot, inside stuff, the cynical hoped the President would reveal secrets by concealing them; the average reporter knew it was going to be a good story one way or the other. Everyone was satisfied. Those who yearned for the dramatic got the story of the German plot which didn't come off. Those who were looking for trouble were gratified that he revealed no new concrete developments. The objective reporter got his quota of news, for everything a President says is that.

But the two remarks of the President stood out in my mind—the one I mentioned (realism) and another, made almost as soon as the last of us had squeezed into the crowded oval office, and they were, I believe, most revealing as far as our future foreign policy goes.

Those in the first row had time to take in the President's cheerful and informal appearance—the colored shirt and the pull-over sweater—before he turned to the press and, which, because of one meeting following another from the moment he arrived at the White House, he still wore. He had been on the job since 9:30 a. m.—it was then after four.

As soon as the signal that the last reporter was in the room was given, the President began to speak of the success of the trip, and he said that those who shared with him in the hopes of a durable peace (he referred to Russia, Britain, China) were motivated by the determination that there would not be another war while this generation lives.

I must admit that the words at first struck me a little coldly—"while this generation lives." Not much long-range optimism there, I thought. But when he went on to his later pronouncements, general though they have been, I feel a little better about it. It seems to me that, perhaps we are going to be embarked upon an adventure in international cooperation with enough idealism to keep our eyes on the beholder, and enough realism to keep our feet on the ground. That is my New Year's hope and wish.

Analysis of a Reporter's Job

As I sit down to my typewriter, I sometimes try to visualize the people who will read what I write—just as I try to visualize the little groups gathered about the loud-speaker when I talk to them.

Sometimes I shudder lest they exaggerate the importance of the things we reporters report.

I am not a bit different from the anxious anonymous reporter who, after the last war, still clad in his khaki shirt, wearing the OD (it's "GI" now) tie and trench coat, who came down to work and stumbled around the various offices and meetings getting his stories and writing them under the eagle eye of the copy desk.

The reason I am worried now is because I hear so many people talk about the things "the Washington correspondent" writes—or says on the radio—as gospel. Well, most of us try to report what we see and hear. We don't always know whether it is true or false. We just try to tell you about it. Most of us label what we know and what we think. Some of us are better than others.

Sometimes when we talk with people we think really ought to know, we report what they say with a little more confidence. If we can't quote the "Brass Hat" or the cabinet officer or the senator who told us this or that we say "authoritative sources." We are supposed to know from experience whatever what we hear so much fact or just wishful thinking.

The longer we live, the better we are able to judge between the real and the phony. Most old-timers in the government don't try to fool reporters because they know they can only do that once. Maybe twice.

You know the old Scotch proverb: "If he cheats you once, shame on him; if he cheats you twice, shame on you."

Many people think that unless we attack the party in power, we must be in favor of it. That isn't true. We know, as the old ball said, "One cow is much as another." We know that the innocent expect some hot, inside stuff, the cynical hoped the President would reveal secrets by concealing them; the average reporter knew it was going to be a good story one way or the other. Everyone was satisfied. Those who yearned for the dramatic got the story of the German plot which didn't come off. Those who were looking for trouble were gratified that he revealed no new concrete developments. The objective reporter got his quota of news, for everything a President says is that.

The Active Element

But the party in power is the active element. It makes the decisions. It does the things. The minority merely objects. We report what is done. Not because we approve or disapprove of what is done but because that is a concrete act. The opposition can do little more than oppose. That is negative. We know that if the opposition were in power, it might do the same thing, and the party in power, which would then be the minority, would object.

That is hard for the partisan layman to understand. We know that. We have ideas, too, and we know that power usually has some pretty good ones which the minority has to object to, merely on party grounds. Not because of either party we, as reporters, may also become partisans not really of the party but of some of the party's ideas.

It is hard to make some people believe that we are not partisans when we are objective, easy to make other believe we are not when we are not.

I have covered Republican and Democratic regimes. I have covered one Democratic regime a long time. I certainly hope, for the good of the state, that I shall be able to cover a regime of the Republican party, not because I think it is per se better or worse than the Democratic regime but because I think a change is good for the republic.

When the next administration comes in, I shall report what it does. I shall tell, in spite of myself, to ward the constructive issues it promotes. But that won't, I hope, make me a Republican any more than my leanings toward the constructive side in this regime make me a Democrat. I am neither. I am, and hope to remain, a reporter. But, as beauty lies in the eye of the beholder, so truth often lies in the ear of the listener.

HERE'S a fascinator crocheted in wool for fall that has a "different look." A cluster of roses atop your pompadour gives a "finished," calico-like effect. A double stitch edging edging ripples round your face. The pattern stitch is finished quick as can be.

Pattern No. 7623 contains instructions for fascinator; stitches; list of materials.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

For this pattern send your order to:

Gering Circle Needlecraft Dept., 847 W. Randolph St., Chicago 26, Ill.

CONCORD

Arise and bless the Lord, ye people of his choice; arise and bless the Lord your God with heart, soul and voice.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kannady have been entertaining their grandson last week, Sunday his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kannady came for him and spent the day. Slet Alphin and children were there also in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Webster and baby of Falmouth were the week end guests here of their parents.

Misses Beulah and Nina Jane Glacken of Erlanger spent the holidays with their parents Mr. and Mrs. Will Glacken.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Chapman, and daughter, Mrs. Vivie Webster and son Leo all spent Tuesday at Walton with Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Struve and children.

Mrs. Hobert Speagle and baby have had the flu, we miss them from church.

The farmers are stripping and delivering tobacco, it is bringing a good price.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rex and children of Ludlow spent Christmas here with their parents. Carl Jones and wife of N. C. visited their parents here last week, he returned to service Friday night.

The W. M. S. will meet with Bertha Chapman the second Wednesday in January, all members are urged to be present, any visitors welcome, lets all start the New Year right.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Chapman and family entertained Sunday for Mr. and Mrs. Herbert King and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Helen King of Latonia, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Chapman and granddaughter, Nola Rose of Verona, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Struve and boys, Terry Neil and Ronald J. of Walton, Mrs. Kathleen Webster was there Friday night and Saturday.

The big snow that fell the first of last week is going off with a rain. The rain was badly needed—no water is scarce.

Bro. Smith has planned to bring the young preacher, this Sunday to preach at Concord, he was to bring him a few weeks ago and couldn't, so come out and hear this young man as our pastor reports him to be fine.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Roy Sims showed me a mighty interesting folder the other day. "It's got a jaw-breakin' title," he said, "but there's plenty o' meat in it if you'll read it."

It was called "The Army and Navy Cooperation Program of the Breeding Industry Foundation."

But when I got into it, I found the job the breeders are doing is even bigger than that name.

Even before the National Selective Service act went into effect, the breeders had started this program in Kentucky.

Boiled down, its purpose is to work with military officials, the Public Health Service and others, to see that licensed beer retailers around our army camps maintain high standards of operation.

From where I sit, the breeders are doing a whole of a job. Just look at the improved conditions at Camp Breckinridge, and Camp Campbell alone!

And from what army folks say about it, this cooperative program is one of the good things that's come out of this war.

County Farmers Schedule Ten Planning Meetings

Boone County farmers will hold ten Community Agriculture Planning meetings during the next two weeks according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Farmers at these meetings will outline the local agricultural improvement work they consider important during 1944. The community improvement programs will be coordinated thru a county committee composed of the chairmen of the community group.

The schedule of the meetings are as follows:
Verona - Bank - Saturday, Jan. 15th at 1:15 p. m.; Hamilton - School Building - Saturday, Jan. 15th at 7:30 p. m.; Grant - School Building - Monday, Jan. 17th at 7:30 p. m.; Constance - School Building - Thursday, Jan. 20th at 8:00 p. m.; Walton - Basement Room Bank - Friday, Jan. 21st at 7:30 p. m.; Petersburg - School Building - Monday, Jan. 24th at 7:30 p. m.; Burlington - County Agent's Office - Tuesday, Jan. 25th at 7:30 p. m.; New Haven - School Building - Monday, Jan. 31st at 7:30 p. m.

These meetings held each year are both helpful and interesting. Leading farmers attending the meetings give their past year's experiences in agricultural improvement and a recommended program is planned for the new year. All farmers interested in the agricultural improvement work in their communities and the county are invited to attend.

Cpl. Nicholas T. Welch, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Welch is home on a furlough from Kelly Field, Texas. A family dinner was given in his honor on Sunday. Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Caroland, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Harris and Miss Betty Lou Harris of Ft. Thomas, Mrs. Louise Cunningham of Dayton, Ohio and the host and hostess.

Labor Program Assist In Placing 320 Workers

The Boone County farm labor program has assisted local farmers in securing 350 placements of farm workers since January 1st 1943 according to W. M. Smith, County Farm Labor Assistant.

The placements have included a wide variety of jobs varying from day workers, most hand and tenants to the securing of custom machinery and job contract work. The farm labor program has been extended thru January and until further notice. Present indications are that many farmers may encounter a more severe labor shortage in 1944 than during the past year.

The securing and placement of farm tenants has been the most important farm labor job the past thirty days. A large number of farmers have been assisted in this work.

Farmers who have not secured tenants for 1944 are advised to do so at the earliest possible date. Tenants who must move should complete their arrangements as soon as possible. The fewer the moves the better for the war effort. Tenant moves are made both parties see where the move could have been avoided.

Farmers who need tenants and tenants who must move are invited to contact the farm labor assistant at the county agent's office. A list of available tenants and available farms are on file there.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Menke of Dayton, Ohio were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schwab and daughters over the week-end.

Woman's Missionary Society

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Walton Baptist Church will meet in the church, Wednesday, January 19th for their regular monthly meeting. Business session at 11 o'clock, with Mrs. Wm. Soden, president, in the chair.

Covered dish lunch at noon and social hour. Program at 1:30 with Mrs. Margaret Wilson as leader. Topic for the month, "Characteristics of the Citizens of the Kingdom."

Sam Morris, Voice of Temperance will broadcast Sunday, at 12:45. C. W. T. from WHAS, Louisville. If you love your boys and girls in service listen to this broadcast without fail.—Publicity Reporter.

Training Class Held For County Homemakers

Homemakers attending the clothing training class in Burlington last week were told they could do most of their spring shopping at home in the clothes closet or where ever their unused clothing is kept. Clothing leaders studied "Mending and Patching" and handmade clothing accessories. Only five clubs were able to send representatives due to the bad weather.

The morning was devoted to a study of methods of mending and patching. Clothing leaders were pleased to learn how to reweave a patch on woven material and in knitted garments.

Clothing accessories such as hats, purses, gloves and collars were displayed at the afternoon meeting. Leaders discovered that many accessories may be hand-made from leftovers at home.

The lesson at the training class was given by Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent, assisted by leaders.

All local clubs in the county will have mending and clothing accessories for their major project in January.

Following are the clubs scheduling meetings for the rest of the month: Walton, Mrs. Carrie Rouse, Jan. 15th; Rabbit Hash, Mrs. Vernon Stephens, Jan. 17th; New Haven, Jan. 18th; Bullittville, Miss Mattie Kreylich, Jan. 20th; Florence, Town Hall, Jan. 21st; Taylorsport, Mrs. Essie Goodridge, Jan. 21st.

To the People of this Community KILL OR BE KILLED

United States Marines paid the steepest price in human life per square yard for the capture of Tarawa with Pacific outpost. It was kill or be killed. Your boys when they ran into the deadliest fire power along the beaches of this important Gilbert Island stronghold.

This assault, bloody and costly, is one of the many which will be made before Tokyo and Berlin are pounded into dust and ashes.

What are you doing to back up the boys? Remember these are boys from your very community, perhaps from your very home. Any home in your neighborhood would today do not display the Treasury's red, white and blue "We Bought War Bonds" stamp.

It is not backing the attack. It is backing the boys. If you buy a bond, you are a soldier on the battlefield, you would not count the cost of your slight sacrifice to make each succeeding assault less costly in the lives of our boys.

You can't afford NOT to buy Extra Bonds in the 4th War Loan if you would help these boys.

THE EDITOR.

Kentucky Boy Weds Scotland Girl

A wedding of interest to relatives and friends in Walton was solemnized on Saturday afternoon, December 18, in Prestwick, Scotland, when Miss Jane McGill Dunlop became the bride of Mr. Stevenson Brooke Ranson at St. Columba Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Luke McCarty officiated at the ceremony. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a broad-based white-satin wedding gown made with a long, full train. Her bridal veil was of white tulle, which fell from her crown of orange blossoms. She carried white bridal roses.

Miss Jane Bailey, cousin of the bride and her only attendant, wore a gown of ice-blue tulle. Her bouquet was of Talsman roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Dutch Tea Inn, which was decorated with Christmas greens.

After the reception, the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to Edinburgh, the bride wearing a gray woolen suit with hat and accessories of a contrasting color.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dunlop of Prestwick, Scotland.

Mr. Ranson is the son of Mr. Stanley Ranson and the late Mrs. Laura Bedinger Ranson of Walton, Ky. Following his elementary education in Paris, Ky where he spent his childhood with his parents and uncle, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Orr, he was graduated from Beechwood High School, Fort Mitchell, completed a course at the Aero Technical Institute, Los Angeles, and later was connected with the Glenn Martin Aircraft Corporation, Baltimore. For a year he was with the Pan-American Airlines in Africa, and now is with the Transcontinental and Western Airlines in Scotland.

Miss Billie Jean Allen of Independence was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Dora Fields over the week-end.

Six Men Appointed To Work On Paper Salvage In State

The critical paper situation that exists at the present time has caused the War Production Board to send six men to work on the paper salvage in Kentucky during the month of January. These six men have been assigned twenty counties each, and they will assist in perfecting the paper salvage in all communities now at work and to establish a paper salvage in those communities that have not undertaken this vital war enterprise. These men have been instructed to bring together all interested communities in an effort to stop the burning of every bit of waste paper and see that this paper is sold to a dealer.

The following men will do the work for the War Production Board: Edward G. Lee, Henry P. Rawson, J. Marcus Greer, and W. B. Chagny of Louisville; E. B. Hall of Lexington; and J. Warren Smith of Cincinnati.

In many communities it will be necessary to center the paper collection around the schools. Experience has shown that school pupils will be able to bring to school on one day of each week an average of 5 pounds of paper per pupil. This paper consists of 75 per cent newspapers and 25 per cent other paper.

It is the hope of the War Production Board that all schools in Kentucky will accept a quota of pounds per pupil each week and that each school will designate one day in the week as paper collection day. It is planned to have the paper moved from the schools on the day that it is collected.

The school will receive the money from the sale of the paper and may devote this to any purpose the school desires.

In addition, it will be necessary to secure all waste paper from business districts in every community, and it will be necessary for each community to make provision for this. The War Production Board representative will assist in solving all problems such as storage, transportation and price to be received.

Bearcats Defeat New Haven 23-22

The Walton-Verona Bearcats led Pennington and Elliott down New Haven Friday night on the local floor in one of the closest games played so far this year. The Bearcats led by a score of 10 to 5 at the half.

In the third quarter the Tigers started gaining on our boys and at the end of the quarter were leading 17 to 10, which they held until about four minutes of play was left, then the Bearcats started gaining on the New Haven boys and finished up one point ahead of them when the whistle blew.

Pennington and Elliott were high point men for the Bearcats with 15 and 7. Wharton and Moore were high for New Haven with 10 and 8 each.

The Cubs were overjoyed by winning their first game by a score of 19 to 16 with Roberts and Orrell taking top scoring honors with 7 points each.

S. Whitehouse Dunlap Farm Receives "Herd Improvement Registry" Certificate

"The S. Whitehouse Dunlap Farm, received from The American Jersey Cattle Club their "Herd Improvement Registry" certificate for the year ending October 31, 1943. The herd is on test and is re-entered for the third consecutive year.

With all the adversities the farmers in 1943 had to meet, this herd of fine registered Jerseys came through with a good performance.

The Certificate shows there were twenty-two cows in the herd which gave 132,281 pounds of milk and 6995 pounds of fat. The herd averaged 14.10 cows in milk. Each cow averaged 8242 pounds of milk, 5.05% fat and 417 pounds of fat on twice a day milking.

There were nine cows that produced over 400 pounds of fat during a 305 day lactation.

Attend the Public Sale Friday, January 14th at one o'clock, to be held at the V. P. Kern farm, one mile south of Walton. See his ad on another page of this paper.

National Red Cross Nursing Representative In Northern Kentucky

Miss Esther Finley, Special Consultant on Red Cross Home Nursing, is conducting conferences for instructors throughout Kentucky. She was at Covington Red Cross Headquarters all day January sixth and seventh. A large number of Nurse instructors attended. Many problems, ways and means of teaching were discussed and those who attended feel much benefited by instructions which were given.

Miss Elizabeth Lowry, Boone County Red Cross Nurse attended both days.

Sarah Eliza McWethy

Sarah Eliza McWethy passed away at her home in Petersburg Saturday after a prolonged illness. Her remains were taken to the Chambers and Grubbs funeral home for preparation. Tuesday morning she was returned to Petersburg Methodist Church where services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at 2 p. m. with the Rev. O. B. Thomas officiating. Burial was in Petersburg Cemetery.

Miss McWethy spent her entire life in Petersburg and leaves many friends to mourn her passing. She also leaves one sister and several nephews and nieces.

Waste Paper To Be Collected In Walton.

Watch this paper for an announcement of the date waste paper will be collected for the Government. Waste paper is desperately needed, arrangements have been made to collect all paper saved before February 1st.

Mr. J. W. Smith of the War Production Board met with the Advisory Council of the Homemakers in Burlington Tuesday to make arrangements for this drive.

Fourth War Loan Drive To Begin Tuesday, Jan. 14th

The Fourth War Loan Drive begins next Tuesday, January 18. The quota for Boone County is $500,000.00 for individuals which amount has been broken down into the twelve precincts as follows:

Precinct	Quota
Beaver	$ 19,277.09
Belleview	19,707.88
Bullittsville & Hebron	44,471.23
Burlington	68,485.54
Carlton	17,914.52
Clinton	27,935.41
Florence	112,870.65
Hamilton	16,638.66
Petersburg	27,468.68
Union	40,568.54
Verona	24,669.92
Walton	40,193.68

A. B. Renaker will continue as County Chairman with the following precinct Chairmen who served in the past drives:

Robert L. Green, Beaver; C. E. McNeely, Belleview; John L. Conner, Bullittsville-Hebron; C. D. Benson, Burlington; W. H. Presser, Carlton; C. Liston, Hempfling; Constance; C. F. Blankenbaker, Florence; Thomas Huff, Hamilton; J. H. Huey, Petersburg; Miss I. B. Bristow, Union; G. C. Ransom, Verona; Charles W. Thompson, Walton.

The citizens of the county are requested to contact their precinct chairman and offer their services in soliciting subscriptions. Go to your bank and volunteer your subscription and not wait for some one to call on you. This would make the task of raising our quota so much easier. The Chairman, precinct chairmen and workers are donating the services without hope of reward except to hasten the day of Victory. Do your part by subscribing liberally.

In addition to the usual Series E, F and G bonds, the Treasury offers a 2 1/2% bond dated February 1st, due in 1959 but callable in 1956; a 2 1/2% bond dated February 1st, due 1970 but callable in 1965; a 3% Certificate of Indebtedness dated February 1st, due in one year; and Treasury Savings Notes, Series C, due in 3 years, to yield 1.07% if held to maturity, or may be used for tax purposes.

Total amount to be raised in the nation is $14,000,000,000. In the past drives, the County Chairman has been provided with gasoline coupons to meet the requirements of workers when using an automobile. In this drive the O. P. A. advises that each individual worker will have to make application direct to the county O. P. A. office for gasoline to be used in soliciting bond subscriptions.

Let's all do our best to raise our quota.

Boone County Tuberculosis Ass'n Thanks Its Friends

I, as Executive Secretary of the Boone County Tuberculosis Ass'n wish to thank the good and civic minded people of Boone County for purchasing Tuberculosis Christmas Seals. I also wish to thank the publishers of this paper who gave many lines of free space to promote the sale of the seals, and to the Teachers and pupils who have worked untiringly to make the seal sale a success.

It seems that our goal will fall a little short, but even at that, Boone County people have purchased more Christmas Seals than any other time in history. We will give you a complete statement of the sale as soon as all the schools report.

Remember too, it is not too late to send in your dollars for seals.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

MCLURE SYNDICATE—WNU FEATURES

Paul Harris, manager of the Devon Arms, gives Jan Payson the job in the hotel floor show when he finds that William Anthony Devereest, rich and popular, knows her. But Jan thinks she is Tony Williams, the chauffeur, and he is afraid to tell her the truth because he knows she hates Devereest. She breaks into Tony believing him dishonest. Dr. Curtis, who has cured her invalid sister, asks Jan to marry him, just before he goes to his northern camp. When she learns that Devereest is to announce his engagement at a Christmas party at the hotel she decides to go to Dr. Curtis' camp. The bus takes Jan north and runs into a bad snowstorm. Tony picks up her trail.

CHAPTER VI

"I'm sure it wasn't there," said Paul. "Dora certainly would have mentioned it to me."

"Go back and ask her," Tony urged. "We've got to know!"

When he rejoined Tony, Paul found that young man almost beside himself with impatience.

"Dora hasn't seen the cat—"

"Then what are we waiting for?" cried Tony, hustling Paul down the stairs and out into the street.

"Let you go off at the hotel," said Tony between clenched teeth. "I am going to make a round of the railroad stations."

He had about given up when he discovered a man who remembered seeing a girl, in a green coat and carrying a basket with some sort of animal inside, buying a bus ticket. Tony's informant decided that it must have been a northbound bus.

At every bus station he stopped and questioned the attendant. Generally somebody remembered the girl in the green coat. But the answer to the one question that mattered was always the same. No—the girl hadn't got off at this station.

The telephone rang.

Everybody straightened as the bus driver took down the receiver.

"Yeah? ... Good! ... Okay ... I get it."

He hung up the receiver and started for the door. "The bridge is safe. Come on, folks. Step on it. Got to make up for lost time."

The bus with a sudden lurch slid sideways; the bride screamed. Instinctively Jan felt for the arm of the seat with one hand and for herself as she reached for Pusy-puff's slipping basket with the other.

The bus seemed to hang suspended for a second as if undecided whether or not to turn over. Then, slowly, so that Jan felt she could almost see the wheels skid gently into the snow covered ditch, the bus tilted to one side and lay there, panting.

Surprisingly enough the lights of the village did not seem to come any closer. Tony tried desperately to see if a road led off from the main highway, which, evidently, ran some distance from the town, but the soft unbroken snow effectively concealed any such road, even if there were one.

The little wayside stand before which he finally drew up did not seem firm enough to withstand the fury of the wind that rushed at him as he opened the door.

"You'd better shut that door, mister," the young man tending the counter said brusquely. "It's one freezing night!"

"Do you suppose that the buses try to get through on a night like this?"

"Oh, sure. Nothing stops them."

"Just tell me if the last bus went through," asked Tony, impatiently.

"Sure, about two hours ago. But as I was saying—"

"Two hours ago?"

"Yeah. They was late on account of the bridge being unsafe."

"They had to go over a bridge that wasn't safe?"

"I'm tried to tell you. The bridge got fixed."

Tony gave a sigh of relief.

"But they never did get to the next station. Had a call from Moose River an hour or so ago. Must have been some sort of accident."

"You fool!" Tony shouted. "Why didn't you tell me there'd been an accident when I first came in! How badly were they hurt?"

"Say, mister," the young man said aggressively. "I'm not receiving steel just an accident, that's all they told me. Somewhere along the road ..."

But the last words were lost on Tony as he slammed out of the station and flung himself into the car. The next minute, careless of drifting snow, he was driving beading around hairpin turns and down the steep grades of the mountain road.

A moan! Singing!

The gratitude that enveloped Tony made him realize how miserably sure he had been that he would come upon a silent and frightening scene. Of course Jan, brave as she was, would sing in the face of disaster. But the chorus swelled louder and he heard many voices joined with hers, he was definitely reassured.

"O come, all ye faithful. Joyful and triumphant."

As the beautiful old hymn rolled forth toward him Tony felt that he wanted to sing, too.

Back all runways as glad to be back home as she was! Jan wondered. Even runways who had accomplished nothing by their accompades, who were still faced with all the problems they had tried to escape? Dora was still thin almost to transparency, but she sat up really straight in her wheel chair and her blue eyes were radiant when she announced that Paul was going to take her to the party.

Now that she knew Dora was going, however, there was no help for it; Jan had to go, too. But she lingered so over brushing Dora's curls and fastening a sprig of holly at one side, that Dora protested.

"There was a soft knock on the sitting room door."

"From Mr. Devereest," said the boy who banded her a square white box.

Jan undid the ribbon after glancing at the name. "Miss Jan Payson," on the outside of the box. Inside was a mass of orchids.

Jan looked at the enclosed card. There was a mistake—the box was from Tony. She read:

"Chin up! Christmas is coming, Tony."

The roof garden had been transformed into a regular dream of a Christmas party. In the center of the dance floor stood a Christmas tree, so tall that the electric star at the top seemed very far away. It was decorated as a Christmas tree should be decorated, Paul pointed out firmly.

"I had no idea Paul could be so funny!" gasped Jan, choking with laughter after a particularly hilarious introduction of a "snowflake" dance. Dora leaned forward, her cheeks suddenly pink.

"You look as if it is a happy something," said Jan.

"It is. Paul and I," Dora hesitated, and began again. "—Paul—oh, Jan, he loves me! He wants to marry me and take care of me always!"

"Dora, darling," Jan jumped up and threw her arms around her sister. "I'm so glad!"

Jan jumped when someone behind her said suddenly, "Here I am!" Before she could turn, Tony had slipped into the vacant place by her side.

"Oh, Tony!" she cried. Then, lowering her voice, "Is Mr. Devereest here?"

"Yes. But don't you worry about him. I fixed that up all right."

"Shall I tell him?" Dora broke in, and without waiting Jan's nod she made the announcement of her engagement.

"Dora," Tony began, "I'm in a spot. I want to propose to a girl, and I've never done it before. Now, as an engaged girl who has experienced a proposal, I want your advice. Maybe you'll listen to what I've prepared, and see how it sounds to you. I know it won't be so good as Paul's, but let me rehearse it anyway."

Jan, turning swiftly, opened her mouth to speak, but Dora forestalled her.

"Go ahead, Tony," she invited. "I'll be glad to tell you what I can to improve your technique."

"All right—here goes," Tony drew a deep breath. "Now we'll begin. I'm talking to the girl. I pretend something like this—"

"D-darling, I love you."

"Good!" Dora interrupted, clapping her hands.

"You think that'll do? Then," Tony went on, "I thought I might say 'Will you marry me?'"

"Jan—will you?"

"Yes, Tony," said Jan.

"Well," Tony defended himself, "I told you I didn't know how to propose."

Paul dodged over to their table, and after a while he tapped his fork against a glass to get attention.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced, "there's no need to ask if you're having a good time. And I'm sure you want to thank the man responsible for it. May I present your host, William Anthony Devereest!"

Tony bowed and grinned while they cheered him to the echo.

"I can't begin to thank you for this reception," said Tony when he could make himself heard. "But I want to tell you that you'd better cut it short, because each person is to get a present from that tree and there are a lot of people here."

He made his way to the center of the floor, and at a signal from Paul, several of the hotel employees hovering in the doorway rushed forward to help him. Twenty-four Santa Clauses from the orchestra stood up behind them and as each present was detached from the tree Tony read aloud the name on the gift and then shouted:

"Paging Santa Claus! Another gift for special delivery."

At that point a Santa Claus would detach himself from the group, seize the gift and go in search of the recipient. Soon the room was full of red figures bearing gifts, as Tony reached each name Jack and his friends took up the cry:

"Paging Santa Claus!"

Under cover of all the excitement, Jan, very white, leaned close to Paul.

"You've made a terrible mistake!" she whispered. "And it's all my fault. That's Mr. Devereest's name. Tony Williams. I introduced him here as Mr. Devereest because you seemed to think ..."

"What do you mean Devereest's chauffeur?" Paul interrupted, genuinely astonished. "I know Tony Devereest—I knew his chauffeur, too—the last one he had. He fired him about a month ago. That's Tony Devereest all right, up there at the Christmas tree. Listen!"

Tony's voice came clearly to Jan's doubting ears:

"There's just one present left on the tree and I'm going to call the one for whom it is intended up here to please it. Will Miss Jan Payson please come forward?"

Jan sat motionless.

"Go on, Jan," whispered Dora. "Don't you hear Tony calling you?"

As in a dream, Jan rose and made her way through the tables. The blue dress rippled softly about her and her face, beautiful and serene, was turned toward Tony. When she reached the tree he took her hand and guided it to a small white package almost hidden in the green branches.

"Open it," he said softly, and she obeyed. The outer wrappings removed, there was disclosed a tiny jeweler's box.

"Paul called you William Anthony Devereest," she murmured, bewildered.

"Paul was right," said Tony. "And you're promised to be Mrs. William Anthony Devereest."

He took the box from her and out of it he took a ring. Jan scarcely looked at it as Tony slipped it on her finger. Her eyes were on his face and she did not move until even when he turned to the audience and said, his voice full of pride and tenderness:

"I am happy to tell you that Miss Jan Payson has promised to marry me. That's true, isn't it?" he added softly to the girl beside him.

"Well," Tony defended himself, "I told you I didn't know how to propose."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for January 16

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, under permission.

JESUS ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:23-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.—Matthew 5:11.

Criticism and opposition was the constant lot of our Lord as He gave Himself in His labor of love for mankind. It follows His disciples to this day, for men seem to have no only ingratitude, but an evil spirit which rewards kindness with hard words and unjust accusation.

The scribes and Pharisees had already found ground for their complaint. For He had eaten "with publicans and sinners" (2:16). The fact that He went there to win Matthew and to heal the sick (2:17) made no difference. Then they said: "How can we know His disciples did not observe a fast (2:18) in the solemn way they should. How could they, when the Lord was in their midst? They were joyful."

In our lesson we find these hating, watching enemies of our Lord's showing their bitterness in two ways.

I. Open Accusation (2:23-28).

They got at Him this time through His beloved disciples. It was the indirect approach so often used by cowardly people who are afraid of someone, but who dare not face him squarely. They spread evil reports or unkind criticism about a loved one, and thus wound the one they hate.

Their accusation was, however, in a sense a direct one. They claimed that He was the one who had perverted His disciples to violate the Sabbath law by plucking and rubbing the ears of corn to prepare them to be eaten. In other words, He had allowed them to do a secular thing on a sacred day and thus to violate the holiness of the Sabbath. They did not do wrong, but they did it on the wrong day, said the critics.

Jesus met the charge by reaffirming the high viewpoint of God concerning man. We have lowered our conception of man's position, while He has been exalting his undependable judgment.

Everything that concerns man is sacred in the sight of God. Hunger, pain, need, and the like are not to be regarded as hindrances to the Sabbath. The Sabbath was made to serve him, and he must not be harmed or hindered by his servant.

Now, observe what Jesus says: "The Sabbath is for man, not man for the Sabbath." "No, it does not. What you need is right. That you desire may not be. It is more than an animal, you are more than mere physical rest and recreation on Sunday. You are more than a mental being, hence you need more than quietude and music or friendship on that day. You are a spiritual being and must have fellowship with God."

See how nicely it all balances up. He sets the way, and you are the way. What you need is common or secular. It is all sacred.

II. Silent Hatred (3:1-6).

Open criticism is bad, but it becomes worse when it is hidden in the heart of a watching man (v. 2), one who looks for his opportunity to strike.

The scene is a most dramatic one. Jesus came into the synagogue on the Sabbath day as was His custom. (By the way, it is your custom to go to church on Sunday?) "In that synagogue was a man with a withered hand. Here occurs one of those incidental things, which are so full of beauty in these narratives. Seeking to find accusation against Him, His enemies nevertheless all unconsciously paid Him a supreme compliment. They associated Him immediately, not with the chief set of the synagogue, but with the most needy man in the crowd."

"They watched Him" (v. 2). The air was full of silent, malicious, cunning hatred. Jesus faced them with an alternative so high, so holy and so exacting that they dared not speak. He pointed out that we either do good or harm, heal or kill, by our response to a human need. It cannot be ignored. What would they do with it? Keep their strict man-made regulations, or honor God by helping a needy one on the Sabbath?

They said not answer, but He answered. He healed the man. He did not do any work, except a miraculous healing. But it was enough. The Pharisees and the scribes, who had each other, now became friends because they both hated Jesus.

What an awful picture of what may be in the human heart, even in the Lord's house on the day of worship. What was in your heart when you last went into the church? Love and a desire for the good of your neighbor, or hatred and malice? Here again our Lord declared the dignity of man in the plan of God, and placed his need above the keeping of a day. We are not little interested in the help we can give, but too fearful of the criticism of others.

Now Is Time When Fancy Turns To Thoughts of a New Blouse

little afternoon costume both blouse and skirt feature the new drawstring styling. For the skirt the designer uses fine rayon crepe in solid black, accenting its modishness with a deft drawstring treatment at the waistline. The flattering blouse, so sweetly feminine with its fluffy ruffles, is done in brilliant floral-print rayon crepe. Drawstrings gather the long sleeves in at the wrist and a soft self-fabric bow decorating the V-neckline stresses the importance of the bow-tie blouse for spring.

To wear with skirts or slacks in the daytime or for dinner and lounging, a blouse of novelty ribbed rayon crepe in a brilliant rose gives utmost flattery, especially if it be styled after the manner of the blouse pictured to the right. The graceful cascading of the soft-falling jabot collar is in accord with newest styling trends. Particular notice of the cuffs, for their long tab effect interprets a decidedly new technique which does away with the severity of a high-buttoned wrist band. A high built belted-in front line distinguishes the trim military slacks which place rose-colored grosgrain ribbon stripes at each side seam. Smooth tailored spun rayon and wool in a smart herringbone weave is used for the slacks.

There is a luxury look about many of the new blouses that is very appealing due to a greater extent to the charm and loveliness of the new output of rayon-weave materials. These pretty fabrics are so easily available this year and they include a vast variety, from the very practical white crepes that come out while as ever after each tubing to the most formal types of velvets, brocades, taffetas and crepes in the most brilliant colors. Many of the smartest blouses are made of rayon jersey and the midwinter displays place lovely dressy types of rayon lace in black, white and colors.

For refreshing appeal at this time of the year it's the gay print blouse that "steals the show." The importance of prints for the blouse is being acclaimed throughout advanced spring fashion news. The delightful model to the left is typical of that which is to be. For this charming

Luxury Lace Blouses Staging Revival

In this season, noted for its gala blouses, the revival of luxury lace blouses is a natural sequence. The blouses are all delightfully frilly with lace jabots and ruffles, and lace bows, also rosettes made of lace. The call for snow white accents with black brings the pure white lace blouse into prominence. Some of these are enhanced with gliding rhinestone buttons. Others look the part of elegant simplicity with their large white pearl-bead buttons. One pretty lace blouse has a huge rose corsage, fashioned of petals cut out of the lace, each huge petal pointed around the edge. The big sensation is the blouse of exquisitely sheer black lace, you can't get it too sheer to suit Dame Fashion. The sheerer the more flattering is the blouse. Some of the black lace beauties have tiny cap sleeves and devastating sweetheart or square necklines. Others have long sleeves, long-sleeved to the wrist, where their slender close-fitting lines suddenly burst out into a wide flare of lace frills.

Designers Using Much Black Lace

Among the most attractive of the "little black dress" list is the type that is distinguished by exquisitely simple styling, placing the emphasis on the new slender silhouette. With these adorable black crepe frocks comes matching long-sleeved boleros. Comes the feminine touch in way of tiny edgings of black lace, finishing off necklines, skirt hemlines, the short cap sleeves of the dress and the long fitted sleeves of the bolero, also traversing the little bolero about its fitted outline. It's the type of dress you'll love to wear.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Low costs prevailing, post-war world consumption of natural and synthetic rubber may total 2,000,000 tons a year, is the prediction made recently by John L. Collier, president of the U. S. Goodrich Co. This would be nearly twice as much as ever consumed in a record year of 1943.

Some 32 million pounds of rubber will be needed by the Army Signal Corps this year for building up and maintaining direct communications. An additional 4 million pounds will be required for fiction and splicing tape. Just two of the many rubber-using items of the Army branch.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly straining waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes fail to do their job—not act as Nature intended—all to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and injure the body's machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, swollen ankles, stiffness of the joints, giving up nights, swelling, puffiness of the face—especially around the eyes—marked increase in urination, loss of energy, loss of appetite, loss of sleep and loss of strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disease are sometimes blood in the urine, or too frequent urination.

Persons should be so foolish that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning awards for more than 40 years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the world over.

A WALTON MAN FELT LIKE SWOLLEN BALLOON;
FULL OF STOMACH GAS

Recently, a Walton man stated that he used to feel like a swollen balloon after every meal. He would bloat full of gas and spit up acidulous liquids for hours after eating. Was terribly concupitated. This man is one of the hundreds in this vicinity who now praise ERB-HELP. He states he was amazed at the results when he took this medicine. Now he eats what he wants without gas or bloating, and bowels are regular for the first time in years.
He feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great
Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go one suffering! Get ERB-

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Keep Lamps Turned Off In Unoccupied Rooms

Leaving lamps burning in unoccupied rooms not only wastes light but shortens the life of lamp bulbs, which use tungsten—a critical war material. Turn off all lamps and fixtures promptly when not in actual use. Your lamp bulbs will stay brighter longer, you'll get more useful light at less expense and you'll help conserve electricity and vital materials for the war effort.

SIX OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

- Remove and clean lamp bulbs and lamp bowls regularly. Dry thoroughly before using again.
- Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Replace or relene dark-colored paper or parchment shades.
- Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.
- Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.
- Arrange furniture so one lamp can serve two people. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.
- Eliminate amber or flame-tint bulbs. Inside-frosted white bulbs of same wattage give much more light.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Never laughed so hard in my life as when Ben Ryder's white-faced steers broke through the fence out on the pike, with Ben—dodging this way and that—trying to get 'em back on the pasture all by himself.

Ed Carey, Lem Martin and I were headed for town in Ed's car.

"Hold on there!" I yelled to Ben. "There's three good men here to give you a hand!"

Well sir, by a little coaxing and cooperation, we got those steers back in the field all right, and the fence fixed, in short order.

Homemakers Advisory Council Meeting Held

The advisory council of Boone County Homemakers Clubs met in Burlington, Tuesday, January 11. County President, Mrs. Leo Flynn called the meeting to order, and gave an interesting review on the origin of our club collect, and a short sketch of its author, Mrs. Flynn advised all Homemakers Clubs to use it and the pledge to the Flag in their regular meetings. Minutes of last year's meeting were read and approved. Treasurer's report given and accepted. County chairmen responded to roll call with good reports on accomplishments, work, and excellent ideas for further advancement in club work.

Mrs. Alan Gaines was asked to introduce a gentleman representative of the War Production Board. He discussed the urgent need of paper by our government, and was here to interest Boone County folk in the waste paper drive being staged in our two neighboring counties. Mrs. Alan Gaines was named county chairman for the drive in our county. Mrs. Gaines asked each local club president and citizenship chairman to serve on paper salvage committees.

Miss Lulla Logan, Assistant state leader of Home Demonstration Agents discussed the State Farm and Home meeting at Lexington on January 25-28 inc. Two county delegates were appointed, and Miss Logan hoped each club would send a delegate.

Miss Mary Hood Gillespie discussed some important amendments to the Federation Constitution to be dealt with at the State Meeting.

Real Estate Sales.

Forest S. Thompson, Proprietor of The Mutual Realty Company, Williamstown, Ky., reports the following sales for last week:

Herman Kenney and Hallie Kenney's farm of 96 acres located near Mt. Zion, Grant County to Herbert H. Spegal and Lavern Spegal of Palomouth, Ky., Pendleton County.

Mr. and Mrs. Spegal are to be congratulated on securing this fine local and limestone soil farm with one of the most modern homes in Grant County in either town or country. This farm is highly improved in every way, and has one of the finest tobacco crops of any in the burley belt.

Mr. and Mrs. Spegal plan to move to their new purchase by March the first.

The purchase price was $9,000. The Mutual has sold the J. R. Kenner farm belonging to J. R. and Verda Kenner, located on Morgan Road near Route 22, Pendleton County to Frank Klaber and Eva Klaber of the same vicinity.

This farm has a 4-room dwelling with two good barns and other improvements, and 118 acres of productive land.

Mr. and Mrs. Klaber plan to move to their new purchase by March the first.

The purchase price was $4,600.

Victory Waste Paper Campaign Now In Progress

We want your community and every community in Boone County to help in holding the line on the paper shortage. We can make up the shortage in paper by salvaging it on the Home Front.

All newspapers should be tied in bunched about twelve inches thick, all magazines should be tied in bundles, old books and record books should be treated in the same way. All brown corrugated cartons should be torn apart and flattened. We want all wrapping paper; all bags from very small ones to the large size used for cement, lime and fertilizer, shoe boxes, old posters, catalogs, and etc. Waste basket paper and envelopes are the best grade made. Leave the paper sheets flat and stuff this lightly in cartons.

It is the hope of the War Production Board that all schools will accept a quota of five pounds per pupil each week. The schools will receive the money from the sale of the paper.

Payment for all paper collected before the fifteenth of February is guaranteed by the War Production Board.

Collection mechanics and dates for collection have been set up in many localities.

You may call the following local chairmen for further information: Burlington, Mrs. H. R. Forkner; Hebron, Mrs. Sue Rogers; Bullittsville, Mrs. Albert Willis; Constancia, Mrs. Henry Kottmeier; Florence, Mrs. Harold Connor; New Haven, Mrs. Jake Cleek; Petersburg, Mrs. Gladys Klapp; Rabbit Hash, Mrs. Orville Kelly; Tatesboro, Mrs. W. M. Sprague; Verona, Mrs. Gilbert Spenser; Walton, Mrs. Harry Mann; Walton (colored), Mrs. Alice Sleet.

Collection dates for waste paper are: Petersburg, Thursday, Jan. 20th; Hebron, Friday, Jan. 21st; Walton, Saturday, Jan. 22nd; Verona, Monday, Jan. 24th. The Verona school bus is collecting paper every day on its route to school and expects to have all the paper at the school by Monday, Jan. 24th. Rabbit Hash will announce their date next week.

This set-up is sponsored by the Homemakers Clubs of the County of which Mrs. Allen Gaines of Walton is Chairman.

Endowment Fund For Methodist Churches.

The Methodist Churches in the Kentucky and Louisville Conference are undertaking to raise an Endowment Repair Fund of six hundred thousand dollars for the three Methodist Church Colleges in Kentucky. These Colleges are: "Kentucky Wesleyan" at Winchester, "Union College" at Barbourville and "Linsey Wilson" at Columbia, Ky.

Rev. Dearing, pastor of the Walton Methodist Church states that his membership has already contributed nearly five hundred dollars since he presented the cause. The drive will close for the Walton Church at midnight, Tuesday night. He requests that all pledges and checks be in by that time.

Applications For New 1944 Tobacco Allotments

Applications for new 1944 Burley allotments, must be filed at the Agricultural Conservation Office, by February 1, 1944.

New allotments are for those persons who have never established a tobacco allotment on their farm and no tobacco has ever been grown on the tract of land, on which the allotment is to be established.

The information needed on the application is the past five years of tobacco experience of the owner, cash tenant, or share tenant, the amount of cropland in the farm and the amount suitable for tobacco. It is also required that the applicant live on the farm and obtain a substantial portion of his income from the farm.

No allotment can be established unless either the owner, tenant, or share cropper has had an interest in tobacco in the last five years, and can meet the requirements regarding farm residence and income from the farm.

No Ration Stamp Necessary On Certain Types Of Ladies Shoes.

Our lady readers will be interested in this announcement that, effective now and lasting through February 5, OPA (Office of Price Administration) has ruled that shoe merchants of Kenton and Boone Counties may sell certain types of women's shoes without requiring the usual ration coupons.

We suggest ladies look through this paper for such special offerings.

Y. W. A's. Hold Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Y. W. A's. of the Walton Baptist Church was held at the home of Mrs. Bess Connor on Tuesday night, January 11th with Mrs. Byrd Rector as leader.

Those present were: Miss Lucy Pennington, Miss Grace Hanky, Mrs. Betty Joe Parker, Miss Mary Frances Jorace, Miss Goldie Hurston, Miss Bessie Jean Ford, Miss Ruth Mann, Miss Mary Louise McCubbin, Miss Bonnie Linkens, Miss Joe Ann Farris, Mrs. Julia Pennington and Mrs. E. B. Powers.

Bearcats Defeat Florence 50-35

The Walton-Verona Bearcats defeated the Florence Night by a score of 50 to 35 on the losers' floor Friday night.

Pennington and Taylor were high point men for the Bearcats with 19 and 10. Shields was high for the Night with 23 points.

In the second team game the Cubs in a closer contest defeated the Florence second team by a score of 20 to 17. Roberts and Winn were the high scorers for the Cubs with 8 each.

The Bearcats play Burlington at the Burlington School Friday night.

Coach Dearing says that both teams are coming through with ability that exceeds the expectations of the folk of the community and that there is a fine spirit of sportsmanship displayed in each game.

Quarterly Meeting

Mrs. W. N. Carnes, Sup't. of the Woman's Missionary Union of the North Bend Association, announces the first quarterly meeting will be held Thursday, Jan. 27th at 10:30 a. m. instead of Jan. 20th as stated earlier.

The Rev. John Mehl, returned Missionary to Brazil will be guest speaker.

The meeting will be held at the Latonia Baptist Church.

Rivard-Mehne

Delegates Attend Farm Bureau Convention

Lloyd Siekman, Harold Crigler, Boone County Farm Bureau delegates and H. R. Forkner, county agent attended the State Farm Bureau Convention at Louisville on last Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week.

The delegates report the best Farm Bureau convention on record with more than 400 delegates attending. Alex Calvert of Mason County was re-elected president and J. E. Stanford, secretary of the State Federation. The national goal for 1944 is 1,000,000 farm family memberships. The county delegates expressed confidence that the county goal of 100 members would be exceeded this year.

Richard L. Jones Promoted To Rank of Sergeant In U. S. Marine Corps.

Londonderry (delayed)—Marine Sergeant Richard L. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Jones of Verona, Kentucky, has been promoted to that rank from Corporal.

He attended Simon Kenton High School at Independence, Ky., graduating in the class of 1938, and then attended the Covington Commercial College in Covington, Kentucky, before entering the employ of F. W. Woolworth in Covington.

He left a position there as assistant manager to join the Marines in January, 1942. He was on guard duty for a short time after coming to this base.

Sergeant Jones has two brothers in the service, Raymond W. and Carl, both in the Marine Corps.

Boone County 4-H Leaders To Hold Training Meeting.

Boone County 4-H club leaders will hold a special training and planning meeting at Burlington on Saturday, January 22nd at 10:00 A. M. according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Plans for the 1944 Activity program will be made at the meeting. E. E. Fish and Edith Lacy, 4-H Club specialists from the College of Agriculture will lead the discussions with the adult leaders attending. Each community club is urged to be represented.

Walton Woman's Literary Club Entertained.

On Wednesday, January 12th the Walton Woman's Literary Club was entertained in the home of Mrs. Clayton Jones with Mrs. D. H. Vest as co-hostess. The meeting was opened with a prayer by Mrs. G. S. Caroland. The president, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker presided during the business session. Mrs. John Myers of Verona, accepted membership to the club.

Mrs. W. W. Rouse opened the program with the "Thought for the Day". This was followed by a short patriotic service led by Mrs. Clayton Jones.

The club was fortunate in having as their guests three of the Fifth District officers. The Governor, Mrs. B. J. Schwend of Ft. Thomas, and Mrs. C. W. Wallace of very timely thoughts and based her talk on "Woman's Place in Present War Work". She also left with the members several good points for becoming a good leader.

Mrs. W. E. Park of Covington, chairman of the Press and Publicity Committee gave a short talk on the phase of club work in which she is particularly interested. Mrs. J. B. Conrad of Ft. Thomas, Corresponding Secretary for the Fifth District introduced herself in her new work.

Following the talks by the visiting officers, a delicious salad course was served to the following guests and members: Mrs. B. J. Schwend, Mrs. W. E. Park, Mrs. C. Lewis Pierce, Mrs. E. D. Jones, Mrs. C. J. Bedinger, Mrs. J. B. Blankenbaker, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. J. B. Conrad, Mrs. G. S. Caroland, Mrs. C. S. Chambers, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. E. E. Fry, Mrs. A. H. Gaines, Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. C. W. Ransler, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. J. L. Vest and Mrs. E. B. Wallace.

Woman's Aid Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Aid Society of the Walton Christian Church met at the home of Mrs. Elra Vallandigham on the S. L. Highway, Thursday, Jan. 13th. Mrs. W. P. Fehnhorst, president having charge of the program, other members present were: Rev. and Mrs. G. S. Caroland, Mrs. Della Percival, Mrs. William Campbell, Mrs. Ed Mann, Mrs. Clifford Northcutt, Mrs. O. Fry, Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mrs. Gilbert Groger, Miss Alicia Neumeister, Mrs. Harris Moore, Mrs. Harry Bird, Mrs. Nick Welsh, Mrs. George Fisher and Miss Libb Ingram.

A very interesting meeting and social time was enjoyed by all.

Waste Paper To Be Collected Saturday.

Every citizen is urged to have their waste paper and magazines tied together and on the sidewalk in front of their homes Saturday morning, January 22. The paper will be collected and sold, the school will receive the money.

War Loan Drive Precinct Chairmen Hold Meeting

A meeting of the Precinct Chairmen of the War Finance Committee in connection with the Fourth War Loan Drive was held at the Court House last Thursday night. Only eight of the twelve Chairmen responded to the call for this meeting. Those present discussed the ways and means for raising Boone County's quota of $500,000.00, and it was felt that more interest must be given toward the War effort by every one in these drives. This country is practically the only country in the world that has not suffered from bombs being dropped on our homes and which has not suffered by women and children being wounded, torn and bleeding.

The high prices for tobacco now being marketed and the high wages being paid the factory worker is because of those young soldiers bleeding and dying on the battle fields of foreign countries. Can you look a soldier in the face when he returns knowing that you have gone the length in purchasing War Bonds in this Fourth War Loan Drive now in progress. Wake up Boone County citizens, there is a war going on, and get behind this Fourth War Bond Drive. Don't purchase a war bond and think you have done your duty. You have only done your duty when you buy to your very limit.

Go to your bank at once and make your subscription. The coupon bonds purchased before February 1st will not carry any accrued interest to be paid. After that date you must pay accrued interest. It is to your interest to subscribe before February 1st, however the drives does not close until February 15th.

Let's have a good report for our County papers next week.

A. D. Yelton is again serving as Co-Chairman with Mr. Renaker, and has charge of publicity and other details of the drive.

Thomas Dwyer

Mr. Thomas Dwyer, 70, retired farmer of Verona died suddenly of a heart attack at his home Monday, January 17th. He was born in Verona and had lived there all his life.

He is survived by his wife, Susie Kennedy Dwyer; one daughter, Mrs. Porter Stephenson of Covington, Ky. and a granddaughter, Willetta Stephenson, Covington; five sisters, Mrs. Lawrence Ryan, Walton; Mrs. Kate Ryan, Verona; Mrs. Thomas Maloney, Madisonville, Ohio; Mrs. Edward Roberts, Paris, Ill. and Mrs. Martha Ryan, Louisville, Ky.; and one brother, Ben Dwyer, Hume, Ill.

Funeral services were held at the Hamilton Funeral Home Wednesday, January 19th at 3 p. m. with burial in New Bethel Cemetery.

Farmers Plan To Attend Farm And Home Convention

A number of Boone County farmers have made plans to attend the Annual Farm and Home Convention at Lexington January 25th-28th.

The Wednesday and Thursday meetings are expected to attract largest attendance from the county. The Wednesday meeting will be devoted to the 1944 farm outlook and to national farm problems. The Thursday meeting will include a wide variety of special meetings on farm production problems including soils, crops, dairying, poultry, Veterinary and Horticulture and the rural church. The Friday meeting will be devoted to soils, livestock and dairying.

Plans are being made to aid all local people possible in their plans of travel to and from the meetings. Those who do not have a way to go or those who are going and have extra room in their cars are urged to notify the County Agent's Office.

Tobacco Stalks Worth $15.00 Per Ton.
Tobacco stalks properly handled are valuable fertilizer according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Recent work at the Experiment Station indicates that if the fertilizer in a ton of stalks was purchased it would cost approximately $15.00.

This valuable fertilizer when properly used will return three or four times this amount in increased crop yields. The unfortunate part is that the fertilizer in the stalks is highly soluble in water and if left out in the weather and not applied to the growing crop most of the value is quickly lost. One good local farmer the past week pointed out the practical difficulty in finding a suitable place to spread the stalks this time of the year. It was suggested putting them in a temporary loft in the tobacco barn, chopping them up in spare time and spreading on new grass and clover seed. It is a good practice when sowing alfalfa or any other grasses to sow a mixture of legumes and perennial grasses: i. e. alfalfa and orchard grass, alfalfa and timothy or bluegrass. SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS
By J. Casper Acree

Soil erosion continues, even with the greatest of care. We have often thought that our soil erosion problems were over when we sowed our fields to alfalfa or grass. It is a good practice when sowing alfalfa or any other grasses to sow a mixture of legumes and perennial grasses: i. e. alfalfa and orchard grass, alfalfa and timothy or bluegrass. One of the best commination of alfalfa and orchard grass. Also one of the best ways to get a bluegrass sod is to sow bluegrass with alfalfa. Of course alfalfa will not grow if the land isn't sweet. Lime and phosphate are very essential. The effectiveness of grass in preventing erosion is shown by an experiment carried on at the Missouri Experiment station over a fourteen year period. The field had a 3.58 feet fall per 100 feet. From data compiled it would take 3043 years for the soil to erode 7 inches where a blue grass sod was established but only 50 years if cultivated to continuous corn. In other words corn ground will erode or wash away 60 times faster than sod land. Taking into consideration (1) the labor involved to plow, cultivate and harvest a corn crop, (2) the cost of re-establishing a sod, (3) the greater amount of soil lost by erosion, (4) the actual value of corn harvested compared to the grazing value or hay crop, (5) also corn is more apt to be sold as corn or in animals than grass or hay. Can we afford to grow corn in Boone County. For this weeks problem, figure out what you would have to get per bushel for your corn that would justify you to plow it a good sod. Isn't it about time to cast aside the plow with the shovel and the hoe and pick up the mowing machine with the fiddle and the bow. More Harmony.

Cooking the Axis Goose Southern Style

PLANES, tanks, guns, ships, munitions, flowing from Southern industry, are literally writing the history of Axis defeat on every battle front . . . cooking the Axis goose—Southern style!

Blazing blast furnaces, giant steel mills, enormous tin plate plants, and numerous fabricators and finishers of iron and steel products in five Southern states served by the L & N Railroad have furnished a large portion of the Nation's contribution of essential production to the great war.

A mighty train of 112,000 cars, crowding the L&N main track from Cincinnati to New Orleans, 950 miles, would carry only a part of the annual Southern production of steel and its products. Hordes of additional trains are required to handle the incidental ore, stone, coal, coke, manganese and other things essential to steel manufacture.

This constitutes a miracle of production and transportation—Free Enterprise at work in Southern industry and railroad transportation—can any other nation or any other form of government match such performance?

In peace times the growth of the South has been constant if not so spectacular. No agency has contributed thereto more than railroad transportation. None will do more in the future.

The L&N, The Old Reliable, hopes to keep modern in its facilities and service and thus merit the good will and patronage of its peoples.

CONCORD

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world."
Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Chapman and grandson Leo. Webster went to Walton Sunday afternoon to visit Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Struve's baby. It almost had pneumonia, but was some better.

Opal Beach spent the week-end with her college friend at Williamstown, we missed her on Sunday School.

The Y. W. A.'s and Sunbeams met at the church Saturday afternoon, attendance could have been better.

Mrs. Russell Webster is on the sick list, we hope she will soon be alright again.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Robinson spent Friday at Ludlow with their daughter and family.

Mr. Julian Ford and family moved Saturday from the Mr. Charles Steers place to Rabbit Hash on Mr. Roy Lutes place.

The W. M. A. met with Bertha Chapman Wednesday with ten members and two visitors present. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Maggie Chapman and daughter, Mrs. Vevie Webster in Feb. The meeting was enjoyed by all. Our new president, Mrs. Laura Beach had charge of the program.

Mrs. Mae Brown still visits the Dr. but we are glad she still is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Webster and baby of Palmouth spent the week end here with their parents.

Preaching at Concord Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Sunday and Sunday night at the regular time. A welcome is extended to everyone, come!

Latest addition to the production and program direction staff of WCKY, Cincinnati, is Theodore Hahn, Jr., according to an announcement by L. B. Wilson, station owner. Mr. Hahn, who has been associated with musical direction in Cincinnati for the past 30 years, recently completed an assignment as assistant to the national director of music. He has been touring the nation arranging and directing government-sponsored grand opera, light opera and theatrical productions.

A member of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra at 16, Mr. Hahn and his family have been recognized as musical figures in Cincinnati since the turn of the century. Mr. Hahn is heard over WCKY from 1:45 to 2 p. m., each Wednesday and Friday on the program "Did You Know?" which gives intimate glimpses into the lives of famous composers.

THE WEEK IN WPB

Housewives soon may be able to purchase drip coffee makers, teakettles and other items made of enameled ware. The War Production Board announced last week that manufacturers of household, cooking and hospital enameled ware are permitted to make three items in addition to those they have been manufacturing.

Pre-war model baby carriages, strollers, walkers, and pushcarts will reappear on the market in about six weeks. This is about the length of time it will take manufacturers to make the necessary changes from production of war models, the only type permitted to be made since April, 1943. It is hoped that enough material will become available throughout the coming year to keep production high enough to take care of the expected 20 percent increase in births in 1944.

This would mean production at the capacity of the industry which is between 750,000 and 800,000 baby carriages and 650,000 strollers, walkers and pushcarts per year. Greater availability of steel has made possible this reversion to pre-war specifications. No new labor or facilities will be required to produce the pre-war model vehicles.

On the farm front, WPB announced production of wheeled tractors was being stepped up. Last month 20,000 were made against a production of 4,200 in December, 1942. This record was made despite the fact a number of component parts are used in landing crafts as well as tractors. You will not need to turn in your old tube when purchasing tooth paste or shaving cream after March 1st. This does not mean that old tubes are no longer wanted. The War Production Board is urging producers to turn in their old tubes voluntarily. Tin salvaged from old tubes has been dwindling in quantity since the tin content has been constantly reduced, therefore the need for the tubes is not as urgent as it was for the pre-war tubes.

On the production front, workers set a new schedule-breaking record for the production of heavy four-engine bombers during December. Despite the Christmas holidays, 8,802 war planes were delivered—an average of 339 planes every working day.

ON KENTUCKY FARMS

John and James Vansant, 4-H club boys in Elliott county, cleared approximately $71 in one month on their flock of 112 White Rocks. More than 100 new ponds were constructed in Mercer county last fall. Three hundred lockers have been rented in the frozen food bank soon to be built in Pendleton county.

A 4-H club window display in Leslie county contained 116 different items that had been produced in gardens or on home farms of members.

More than 8,000 acres were planted to hybrid corn in Pulaski county last year.

Ward Chumley of Bell county has a flock of 130 White Leghorns now laying around 95 eggs a day, or better than 70 percent production.

Garrard county 4-H club calf members have 65 choice baby heaves on feed for the annual fat cattle show at Louisville next fall.

It is said that tobacco stalks in Ballard county, if properly used, would be worth $40,000 to farmers as fertilizer.

Charles Gray, 4-H'er in Cumberland county, grew 804 pounds of tobacco to the acre.

Some of the Haldeman 4-H club members in Rowan county, made Christmas money by making and selling Christmas wreaths.

Carlisle county farmers have a tobacco allotment of only 110 acres, but averages of $400 to $900 per acre have been reported. Mercer county farmers sold much of their livestock last fall because of the drought and the feed situation.

You must have Vitamin A as an aid in protection against infections which are more likely to occur in the nose, throat, eyes, ears and sinuses; when there is a deficiency of this vitamin.

You need Vitamin D to help the body make proper use of the calcium and phosphorus in your diet.

If you are not getting enough of these two important vitamins, take a ONE-A-DAY brand Vitamin A and D Tablet every day and insure your normal requirements.

H. R. BAKER MOTORS

THIS is what we've been working for all along. This is the year to hit and hurt the enemy. This is the time when everything you do counts double. If we all get together and do all we can, we'll be over this hurdle and well on our way to complete and crushing victory.

No question about the men in uniform—they'll go "all out." But can we count on you to back them all the way? Your quota is where you work—you've got to buy your War Bonds and then buy more, until every last loose cent you have is fighting. Tough? Of course, it's tough—unless it is a sacrifice you're simply not doing your share!

Make the sacrifice now—buy more than the extra $100 lend your country counts on you for—winning the war is worth any sacrifice you make. Besides, you aren't giving, you're lending to America! You'll get back every dollar you invest in War Bonds, with interest. An extra $100 War Bond now is the minimum for everybody—can't we count on you for more?

This sticker in your window means you have bought 4th War Loan securities.

"Be not weary in well doing." "Faith is the key that unlocks the door of God's hidden riches." The Master who notes the fall of the sparrow will guard His children well. True Christians who live near to Him are close to the fire.

Through the kindness of Allen Butler, we received a lovely Christmas basket from Rev. and Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey, for which grateful appreciation is extended. It contained oranges, bananas, tangerines, apples, candy, nuts and a large Hershey bar with almonds.

Most highly commended was the kind thoughtfulness of Mr. H. Stanler's lot; thence with St. Stanler's line S 60° W 229 feet passing a 25 foot street at 160 x 185 respectively to a stake 33 feet from the center of the L & N Railway; thence North 3° W 72 feet to a stake; thence North 60° E 399 feet passing a 25 foot street at 214 and 239 feet respectively to the beginning. As roses have been scattered in many lives by Mrs. J. H. Anderson, may there be yielded back to her a perpetual fragrance.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Rankin entertained on Christmas Day with an elegant turkey dinner. The honored guests were: Lieut. and Mrs. Bryson Fish.

Heartiest thanks are extended to Mrs. Jasper N. Williams for another lovely box of canned peaches, pears, and tomato juice.

A number of relatives enjoyed a lovely turkey dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pak and daughters, little Miss Nellie and Janet on Christmas Day.

Little Miss Patricia Williams has sufficiently recovered from her severe illness to return to her home from the hospital.

Most heartily do we thank Mr. Victor Webster for recent kindness.

Deeply appreciated were lovely gifts from the following friends during the holiday season, and we sincerely trust that the year which lies ahead for them will be filled with spiritual blessings, and the happiness that comes from a close fellowship with God, and for every kindness and manifestation of Christian love. We heartily thank: Rev. W. T. Gardner, Rev. and Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey, Mrs. J. H. Anderson, Mrs. Helen Connell, Mrs. Jasper N. ## HE'S BACK!

He's done his part and more—have you?

They're coming back—the gallant men who've been wounded in action.

Tell them the war's as good as won and that there's no need to buy more War Bonds.

They know first-hand what invasion costs in blood and lives and money. They know the real fight's just begun... that wishful thinking can prolong the war and waste thousands of lives needlessly.

They're looking to us to keep on backing the attack... to help get it over sooner by providing the overwhelming weight of arms it takes to win.

We can't match their sacrifice but we can show them we're in the fight by buying extra War Bonds during the Fourth War Loan.

Buy at least one extra $100 dollar bond now... and keep on buying Bonds until Victory.

Even those names that meant so much have vanished now, so that you will look in vain for Ox Bow or Dripping Spring or the valley of the Little Comanche on any recent map. And it is hard to believe that this land, where flashing beacons now guide the roaring courses of planes by night and by day motorcars darted off across its endless miles, was then but a wild and rolling prairie of buffalo grass, and a journey of any length had no certain ending, no assurance of a restless nature seemed to be following the sun in a mad race set off by the cry, "Go West, young man go West!"—not sixty years ago.

This was a time of new and unbelievable happenings. Fullerton's Golden Palace cars were running clear to the Pacific, with their clear velvet curtains wound, their gas lamps that shined as brightly as the sun, and their sleeping compartments in which many women still refused to undress when going to bed at night. Three thousand Negroes were marching south from Alabama, with their women and children and half-starved dogs, to claim the forty acres of land and the span of oxen which the state of Texas had promised. Boxcar emigrant trains rolled out of the East one upon another, spewing settlers along the way, and the high-topped "Pitchfork" wagons lumbered West behind their ox teams, to meet—not a barren prairie—but the red swarms of Texas longhorns coming up from the South.

For this was a time when the shant in the saddle was king of the plains and prairie; all others were hounded, beneath him, to be swept aside by the relentless march of his trail party. Ten million Texas longhorns that had run wild since the Rebellion were finding a market in the shipping towns of the new railroads; a thousand cattle ranches were being made in the new lands of Montana and Wyoming; where cattle had never been before. Up that trail, two hundred miles long, unchecked by storm or drought, by the bands of Comanches or the barbed wire of the homesteaders, the great flood poured northward, a million head in a single year.

This was a time of a man's opportunity. Whatever a man was going to be depended only upon himself.

In the upper valley of the Little Comanche that night only one campfire glowed the blackness, a small one, placed faintly where high rimrock guarded a narrow canyon, looking down from the vast empty reaches of the Staked Plain.

Low Burnet was cooking supper over a cautious blaze. He had laid his cot down twice to the westward, Indian fashion, spreading them outward like the spokes of a wheel. That way they burned with no smoke and a small flame, but made an intense point of heat beneath his pot of coffee.

The coffee boiled and he pushed the pot back. A comb of antelope ribs, already braised, stood propped against a rock. A pile of stick bread lay at his knee. He tore the antelope ribs apart and felt toasting with the hunger of a man who'd had nothing since dawn.

His was a young face, with sober strength in its long lines, but strangely marked from the trampling hoofs of an outlaw horse at its ends, Indian fashion, spreading them outward like the spokes of a wheel. That way they burned with no smoke and a small flame, but made an intense point of heat beneath his pot of coffee.

GLAUCOMA

You have been reading much lately about trachoma, that disease of lining of eyelids and how the sulfa drugs have been able to cure many cases in a short time, thus avoiding the prolonged and painful treatment of former years.

However, another disease of the eye—glaucoma—is responsible for many cases of partial loss of eyesight. Glaucoma is increased tension within the eyeball caused by it to bulge outward. An early symptom is the appearance of colored rings around distant lights at night. The pupil is usually dilated and is often very severe, being frequently mistaken for neuritis.

Glaucoma is caused by obstruction of the flow outward of the fluid which keeps the eyeball taut. If not treated early enough and by proper methods glaucoma finally causes complete and hopeless blindness, usually with a period of great pain.

The responsibility for this loss of eyesight rests to some extent on physicians and on the patients themselves. The task of the general practitioner is threefold: To discover the presence of glaucoma among his patients, to refer them to eye clinics or eye specialists and to co-operate with the eye specialist by furnishing him with full information concerning the general health of the patients.

In many cases, even when patients know that they have glaucoma, they neglect to visit their doctors or eye clinics and postpone operation until it is too late.

Glaucoma usually starts about the age of 40 or 50 and partial loss of vision begins in one eye, with an occasional blue or green tinge to the other eye and a slight one-sided headache. Reading becomes difficult and a few hours spent in playing cards or at the movies leaves him with an uncomfortable feeling in his eye and blurred vision.

There was no answer to that. Things happen in a year. Even twelve months ago, Lew remembered, Steve's young rebellion had turned into violent ways.

Now coming back, perhaps, just in time. For he and Steve had grown up together in a close companionship, more confiding than between father and son. Everything Tom Arnold had built his life in Texas was planned around his boy. Still there was that antagonism between them, a reckless, high-strung nature fighting the strict, unspurring nature of the man.

Inevitably Steve brought up his sister Joy. Lew bent forward and knocked his pipe out against his boot toe. Behind all his thinking there was one question. He asked it now.

"Willy, when did Tom's girl marry Clay Manning?"

Willy's head tilted. His gray eyes squinted brightly. "Never did. There's been none of that on the Cross T. Why not, this child couldn't say. But there's somebody could make a better man for her. Well, he could!"

"No," Lew said. "It's the sleek bucks they run to, Willy. You know that."

In a moment when the old man stood up to go he knew there was no use offering a bed here. Willy always slept alone. It might be ten miles from Dripping Spring or only of a hundred yards; he wouldn't know.

Standing with the ancient needle gun cuddled again against his chest, Willy took the quick glance all around him into the shadows. He stepped back. "Raise your smoke," he said, "it you've a mind." That was his promise and Lew understood. He'd not stray far from the Little Comanche for a while.

Low broke camp in the dark next morning, saddled while his coffee boiled, and in the cold sharp gray of daylight he was traveling south. This was the end of a month-long trail. Even the tall black beneath him stepped out with a homecoming knowledge, and the red mule with its white tarpaulin pack trotted behind, needing no lead.

The Little Comanche had changed even more, he saw, in his absence of a year. Once a man could ride down this valley through a waving sea of bluegrass grass knee-deep on a horse. But Tom Arnold, like every cattlemen in Texas now, had staked his range beyond his limit in this mad race to supply the northern demand. The bluegrass had vanished, never to grow again.

There was left only the short curly buffalo grass—nature's last stand—even that showing great dusty patches. The Little Comanche could be wholly worthless in another five years.

At least, he thought, he had learned that lesson, and his own gaze of his eyes—that was his vision now as this once had been, a sweet-grown country, ten thousand acres he had got control of by playing the horse and the spring. The opportunity was there for a big ranch, as big as Arnold's Cross T.

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

CUT PAPER 1/2 LONGER. MEASURE OF THE TOP OF THE SKIRT. CENTER FRONT. JACK SHARP FASTENER. TAPE TO TABLE THEN. SEW OTHER SIDE OF TAPE TO SKIRT TOP.

How to cut a flared dressing table skirt without fullness at the top, is something worth knowing. It may be making a smartly tailored affair of white pique with pink bindings and buttons, like the one shown here; or an under lining for a full skirt of transparent material.

The diagram shows how to make a pattern for half of the skirt. The center front may be placed on a fold of the goods in cutting if there is no front opening. Cut the paper by the dimensions in the diagram. Mark point A in 14-inches from the upper left corner. Measure up from the lower right corner a distance equaling the length of the skirt from A to the left edge of the paper and mark point C. Connect these points with lines drawn, as shown.

NOTE—There are three other interesting styles of dressing tables with directions for making in SEWING BOOK 1. Also slip covers, draw curtains, and many other household articles. Copy of BOOK will be mailed for 15 cents. Address: MRS. RUTH WYETH SPEARS, Bedford Hills, New York. Enclose 15 cents for Book No. 1. Name _____ Address _____

Ships Go Over Bridge

A military bridge built recently across the Shatt-al-Arab river, Iraq, acquired a unique feature through a change in design which had to be made after construction began, says Collier's. Although a lift-type drawbridge, its 89-foot span is lowered instead of raised so vessels pass over instead of under it.

BROWN ACTS OLD TODAY

Naturally a man looks old beyond years when he's sore from lumbago or other muscle pains. The famous McKesson Laboratories developed Soretone Lumbago for these cruel pains—due to exposure, strain, fatigue or over-exercise. Get the blessed relief of Soretone's cold heat action.

1. Quickly Soretone acts to enhance local circulation. 2. Check muscular cramps. 3. Help reduce local swelling. 4. Dilate surface capillary blood vessels.

Soretone contains methyl salicylate, a most effective pain-relieving agent. There's only one Soretone—Soretone. 50¢. A big bottle, only $1.

Money Back—If Soretone doesn't satisfy. "and McKesson makes it"

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

Mrs. L. N. Hoffman who has been quiet all the past couple of weeks with the flu, is much improved.

We are glad to welcome Mrs. Thomas Barkers back to Sunday school. She has had a very severe cold the past couple Sundays and could not be out.

The farmers are very busy stripping their tobacco and getting it on the market while prices are very good.

Miss Reva Richardson entertained on last Thursday evening with a rook party in honor of her brother, Wayne who was home on a twenty-day furlough from Panama. Wayne left Saturday morning for California, not knowing just where he will be stationed.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballanger spent the week-end with his cousin, Ralph Brannock and wife of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. John Kitcher and daughters, Lodeana and Delores and children spent Friday afternoon with Mrs. Roy Klein and children on Taylor Mill Pike.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Maddox called on Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Ballanger one day the past week. Rev. Cardwell fulfilled his regular appointment at Staffordburg Sunday. Our attendance was a little larger and we are hoping to have a beautiful sunny day on our next church day, perhaps that will help to get our people out. Our Church School is holding up very good, owing to so much sickness and bad weather, try to keep on coming.

Mr. and Mrs. Stallcup spent the day Saturday in Covington visiting with their children and grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hanna called on their son, Harley and family Sunday afternoon and also visited with Mrs. Gannett Crainville who has been confined to her bed the past five weeks with the flu, but is much improved at present.

UNION

The many friends of Dr. G. R. Coe were very glad to see him in Union Saturday. Dr. Coe is a Capt. in the Army and is stationed in South Carolina at present.

Miss Vera Robinson, who makes her home in Erlanger was the week-end guest of her parents here.

The cookie sale held at Newman's Store Saturday by the G. A. Girls was quite a success. Future sales will be held and the proceeds will go to sponsor a member at Clear Creek Camp next summer.

Pvt. Russell Doane has returned to his camp in California after having spent his first furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Doane of Walton, R. 2.

Mr. Charles Wilson was the Saturday night guest of his friends Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Jones.

Mrs. Charles Hedges, Mrs. C. P. Hedges and Mrs. J. W. Doane were shopping in Covington Thursday. Deepest sympathy is extended the family of Mr. Will Southernland as his passing last week brought grief to the hearts of his many friends here.

Mr. Floyd Smith of Cincinnati was visiting his mother and family last Thursday.

Mrs. J. T. Bristow and Mrs. Elmer Hensides children, Jimmie and Kathleen were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weaver and family of Erlanger one day last week.

Many farmers of this community are reporting good prices for tobacco sold so far. Due to the late bulking season there is much more to be stripped and it is hoped the high prices will continue throughout the season.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry Beach of Louisville were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Newman and family.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

I set the alarm ahead the other morning to hear a so-called temperance broadcast. Being a temperance man myself I was in hopes of hearing a good talk. Temperance and moderation are the same thing, my dictionary says. But this speaker didn't discuss temperance at all.

It was a hysterical, rabble-rousing hodge-podge advocacy of an impractical program. He told of anonymous people who'd come to horrible fates. He drew liberally on things that happened 2000 years ago. But he couldn't get around the fact that, no matter how folks have changed in 20 centuries, they still like moderate sociability with their fellow-man. From where I sit, that's where best comes in. Those who like it, set a heap o' store on a moderate glass with friends.

The occasional immoderate drinker is far outnumbered by those who like each year of glut-tony and over-eating! He is no more approved by moderate folks than by "temperance" speakers.

Christmas Seal Sale Goes Over Top In County

R. V. Lents, Executive Secretary of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association, reports $528.47 as the amount of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals sold during the last drive. Mr. Lents stated through the columns of this newspaper two weeks ago that reports were coming in slowly, and at that time it did not appear the goal would be reached. A goal of $725 was set for the county, and the sale went more than $100 over the goal.

The Kentucky Tuberculosis Association and National Tuberculosis Association gets 33% of the sale, and it cost about 5% of the sale for stationery, stamps, and prizes for the school children who aided in the drive. This leaves more than 62% of the gross sale to be used to aid in stamping out tuberculosis right here in Boone County.

The sale of each community was as follows:

Bellevue $4.37

Burlington 105.05

Burlington Col. 22.05

Constance 68.03

Constance 152.50

Hamilton 23.50

TOTAL $528.47

$55.19 Tobacco Average Received By Local Farmers.

James A. Orr and David Houston of the Walton-Richwood Road, sold 3,558 pounds of tobacco at the Carrollton Warehouse the first part of January for an average of $55.19 a hundred.

Landlord-Tenant Trades Completed.

The largest number of landlord tenant trades of any time the past year were made last week according to W. M. Smith, Farm Labor Assistant. Activity is expected to pick up until March 1st, the usual date for tenant moves. There still remain a large number of landlord and tenant placements to be made. There are a number of requests for day and month hands to be filled. Anyone knowing of available help not now employed is expected to notify the County Agent's Office.

Minister Called At Local Baptist Church.

Rev. Burton Garrett of Behol, Ohio, has accepted the call of the First Baptist Church of Walton. Rev. and Mrs. Garrett and family expect to move here and begin their work about March 1st.

Tobacco Specialist To Meet With County Growers

Russell Hunt, tobacco specialist from the College of Agriculture will meet with county growers on Friday, February 25th according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Mr. Hunt will discuss new production practices recommended for 1944.

There are many new recommendations and practices in tobacco production that are bringing growers greater cash returns. The exact time of the meeting will be announced in the near future.

Priming Pays Tobacco Growers

The priming or pulling of the over ripe lower leaves from the tobacco stalks before cutting time was tried the past year on an extensive scale in the county for the first time, according to the County Agent's Office. Reports on this work will be made from time to time. Two sales reported recently indicate this practice is profitable.

J. P. Cleek of Beaver recently sold over $300 worth of primed leaves from three acres and reported profitable results. The primed leaves averaged approximately 50c per pound.

James G. Pennington of Walton reports that he sold 300 pounds of primed leaf from three acres that averaged $56 per hundred pounds.

Most growers are agreeing that there labor is available priming is a profitable practice. The harvesting of the primed leaves can easily be done by children.

Birthday Party

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Wiggins of Mason, Ohio delightedly entertained on Sunday afternoon with a party for their little son, C. G. who was nine years old that day.

Those present were: Anna Mae Putman, Phyllis Edens, Cathleen Munsian, Sue Troxell, Jimmy Putman, Everette Glacken and Mrs. Margaret Cooke. C. G. received many nice and useful gifts.

After an enjoyable afternoon was spent refreshments were served and they all left wishing him many more very happy birthdays.

George N. Parsons

George N. Parsons, well known farmer passed away Saturday at his home on Lower river road, North Bend, following a short illness.

Funeral services were conducted from the home Tuesday at 2 p. m. with the Rev. C. C. Helton, pastor of Sand Run Baptist Church officiating. Interment was in Hebron Cemetery.

Mr. Parsons is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lenora Parsons and one son, Stanley Parsons. Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of funeral arrangements.

Better Production Practices Planned By Local Farmers

Leading farmers meeting in Community meetings are planning to carry out better production practices in 1944 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Meetings the past week were held in Hebron, Verona, Hamilton and Grant Communities. Meetings during the next ten days will be held in Florence, Walton, New Haven, Petersburg, Constance and Burlington Communities.

Better farm practices planned for 1944 to date include greater use of cover crop and permanent pastures, improved quality of hay crops, use of higher yielding hybrid seed corn, more economical feeding of dairy cows, parasite control in sheep, adjustment of hog and poultry numbers and healthy stock production, heavy uses of fertilizers to reach a goal of a ton of tobacco per acre.

Improved truck production and a more complete home food production program and the greater uses of farm labor saving equipment.

Farmers are faced with strenuous production problems in 1944. The careful study of these problems at this time is considered by the leaders as most important. All farmers are invited to attend the meetings held in their communities.

Surprise Party Given In Honor Of William Piner.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piner entertained with a lovely surprise party for their son Bill who left Friday, January 21st to enter "boot" camp at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. It was a happy gathering of family and friends. Various musical instruments were played by Mr. Stephen Ammerman, Mr. Jim Allen, and Mr. Piner. Mr. Ammerman and Mr. Allen also sang some of our best known and best liked songs. The music was enjoyed by all.

A delightful buffet lunch was served consisting of sandwiches, coffee, salads, pop corn balls, donuts and cake. The cakes were decorated beautifully. One was decorated in red, white and blue with U. S. Navy across the top. Bill at the bottom and a miniature flag in the center. The other was birthday cake in pink and white, it being the birthday of one of the guests, Mrs. Rachel Curtin.

Bill received numerous gifts, all of which were useful.

The guest were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Ammerman and children, Mr. and Mrs. William Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Lancaster and Bobby Ray, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lunsford, Ruthie and Tommie Lunsford, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jackson and son Walter, Mrs. Rachel Curtin, Mr. Jim Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Lunsford and son Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. William Jarrell and daughter Lynn, Mr. and Mrs. Piner, Mary Lee and Bill Piner.

The party broke up with everyone wishing Bill all the luck and success in his training. The Advertiser joins his many friends in wishing him well.

R. M. Hall Returns To Frankfort

R. M. Hall Representative of Boone and Gallatin Counties spent the week-end with his family, and from him we learn that the General Assembly is now getting sufficiently organized to begin actual business in the next week or so.

Many important measures are pending, and Mr. Hall would be glad to hear from any resident of either county giving him their views, concerning any pending measure.

Of course he can not agree in advance to vote for or against any specific measures, but the Legislature has shown an inclination thus far to be an independent body and Mr. Hall in thorough accord with this idea and manifesting his desire to know the views of his constituents, so that he may reflect their views concerning pending matters as they come up for final action.

Mr. Hall is taking a great interest in the future of our State and all Boone and Gallatin County citizens should feel free to contact him on any proposition for the benefit of Kentucky.

Mr. Hall returned to Frankfort Monday afternoon.

Notice—Change In Time

School Children Injured In Bus Wreck Wednesday

Students along Decoursey pike attending Simon Kenon High School made arrangements last week to board their bus at a different time for the next several days as the result of the bus crash Wednesday in which 48 students were hurt, seven severely, and the bus heavily damaged after it had overturned at the foot of Piner Hill.

J. A. Caywood, superintendent of Kenton county schools, said a revision of schedules was made in order to accommodate the students along the line serviced by the school buses so there would be no overcrowding.

Drivers of the buses, Dewey Pisk and Adrian Durr, administered first aid after the accident and were credited with having saved many of the children being injured seriously.

The buses, which were traveling in opposite directions, crashed when the Simon Kenon bus, driven by Mr. Durr, skidded as the brakes were applied at the foot of the hill. The bus of Mr. Pisk had stopped at the bottom of the hill to take on a student and Mr. Durr was stopping his bus in compliance with the state law that states: "No vehicle may pass a school bus when it is taking on or discharging passengers."

Striking a patch of ice, the bus, driven by Mr. Durr and en route to Simon Kenon High School, plunged across the road, struck the front of the other bus, and overturned.

After Mr. Durr had crawled from the wreckage, Mr. Pisk and the children, who were piled atop one another.

No children in the Piner School bus were injured and only minor damage was done to the bus.

Of the 48 children injured, seven required medical attention; others returned home for treatment of shock.

Francis Peebles, 17, Bracht Station, Kenton county, was carried to a nearby home on an improvised stretcher and treated by Dr. F. A. Daugherty, Independence, for a deep knee cut.

Six other students were treated at the offices of Dr. Charles M. Petty, Independence. They were: Allen Culbertson, broken left arm; Lydia Connelly, both legs cut; and Geraldine Mullen, Elizabeth Bowen, Violet Bass and Catherine Jennings, leg and arm cuts.

Mr. Caywood, upon hearing of the accident, rushed to the scene and took charge.

Real Estate News

Forest S. Thompson, Proprietor of The Mutual Realty Company, Williamstown, reports the sale of Allen and Mrs. Kemper Piner's farm to Robert Wagner and wife of Falmouth, R. 2 for $47,000.

This is an excellent and well improved farm located near Flingsville, Grant County.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner plan to move to their new purchase in the near future.

Local Leaders Plan 1944 Farm Food Program

The home food production program is one of the most important farm operations for 1944 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Leaders from Homemakers clubs, Community Extension programs and other organizations will meet at Burlington on Wednesday, February 2nd to plan a five day home food production program for this year.

The home food production program will include not only the production of better gardens and home meat, dairy and poultry products but the preservation and preparation of their products for the family table to the extent that every farm family will have an abundance of highest quality of all the necessary nutritious foods.

Eradication of Household Pests Planned.

Plans were made to eradicate many household pests by leaders who attended a Training Class last week in Burlington. Miss Ida C. Hagman conducted the all day class attended by fourteen leaders representing seven clubs.

Damage to property, life habits of importance to effective control and methods of control served as an outline for the study of household pests such as silver flies, cockroaches, fleas, mosquitoes, moths and many other pests. The group decided that an effective campaign should be promoted in each community to destroy and prevent flies and mosquitoes.

The study of "Household Pests" will be the next lesson presented to homemakers at their local clubs in February.

Income Tax Man To Be At Burlington Feb. 16 thru 19th

Collector of Internal Revenue, S. R. Glenn, announces that a deputy from his office will visit Burlington Feb. 16th thru 19th at 8:30 a. m. 1944, for the purpose of assisting individual taxpayers in preparing their returns. Mr. Glenn says that the new Revenue Act in many particulars different from the laws previously in effect. Special attention is called to the many changes affecting taxpayers in the Armed Forces, and particularly the additional allowances for personal exemption for taxpayers in the Armed Forces.

The Collector says that the many changes made cannot be explained in a short notice, but that his deputy is familiar with the law and is being sent here to be of real service to the taxpayers. The service is absolutely free. Mr. Glenn urges the taxpayers of this county to see the deputy and let him help with their income tax problems.

Ries Classmate, Mrs. Wilson, Dies At Home of Son.

Greenfield, Ind., Jan. 22—Mrs. Martha W. Wilson, one of the few surviving classmates of James Whitcomb Riley, died recently at the home of her son, Edwin Wilson. She was 93 years old.

She was a charter member of the Order of Eastern Star, attended classes here with the Hoosier poet.

Shewas awarded a 50-year membership pin this year by the O.E.S. Mrs. Wilson was born in Kentucky, but had lived here most of her life. She was a member of the Methodist church, where funeral services were held.

Survivors are two sons, three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.—Indianapolis Star.

Mrs. Wilson was the aunt of Mr. Jerry Johnson of Walton.

Howard, Richard Howard, Flora Howard, Florence Howard, Mary Howard, James Howard, June Howard, Ross Howard, Herbert Werks and Norma Jean Werks, Master Sgt. Stanley Kacaba and Mrs. Kacaba.

Bond Chairmen Urged To Organize Local Workers

Subscriptions for the first week of the Fourth War Loan Drive in Boone County ending last Saturday night amounted to $71,676.75 from 185 subscribers. This is a very good start on our quota of $500,000.00. All County Chairmen are requested to organize their workers and make an active campaign to see if a window sticker can be placed in the window of every home in Boone County. All subscribers should ask for one of these window stickers when making a subscription at your bank if the bank employees should overlook this you are immediately giving you one. This will show that you are doing your bit in this drive.

One day last week a tenant farmer sold his crop of tobacco for $700.00 and when he came to one of the banks in the county to cash his check he purchased $600.00 in Series E Bonds saying that he had purchased $200.00 in E Bonds in previous drives and wanted to do so to get more in the county to cash his check. He further stated that he had no close relatives in the army but that he would gladly make his Government a present of his $600.00 in bonds if it would stop this war immediately and that he felt the more bonds we buy the quicker this war will end and that he expected to put every dollar he could possibly spare into War Bonds and within a short time, purchased by this man is practically all the wealth he possesses. If every one was as patriotic and loyal to his country as is this man, our quota would be reached without any trouble and within a short time. How many more citizens in Boone County have we like this?

The Drive closes February 15th but please do not wait for the last week to enter your subscriptions. Try to get more than half the quota before February 1st. The 2 1/2%, 2 1/2% and the 3% bonds are dated February 1st and you should subscribe for these issues before February 1st, otherwise you will be required to pay the accrued interest from February 1st on subscriptions made after that date. You should also subscribe for Series E, F and G before February 1st because all bonds in this series dated in January but interest from January 1st but you do not have to pay this accrued interest, and you therefore gain a month's interest. Full steam ahead this week!

Local Leaders Plan Banner 4-H Organization

There will be services, both morning and evening at the Richmond Presbyterian Church, Sunday, January 30th.

Communion Services will be observed at 11 a. m. February 6th, conducted by Rev. E. N. Rock of Louisville, Ky.

Special plans for a banner 4-H organization in 1944 were made by Boone County 4-H Leaders at Burlington on last Saturday according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Organization work of community clubs will begin February 1st with clubs organized in each of the high school and grade schools in the county. Enrollment is expected to equal the record enrollment of 875 members of last year.

Project work of direct importance to the war effort will receive special attention this year. Members in addition to carrying war projects will be encouraged to keep business records on their records on their projects activities.

A county wide 4-H Council and Adult leaders advisory meeting will be held at Burlington on February 26th to assist in project plans.

Leaders attending the Saturday conference were: D. H. Norr, president of the 4-H and Upland council, Hubert Baker, Walton; Mrs. Albert Willis, Hebron; Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Lents, Constance; Rachel Pennington, Grant; Mrs. Vernon Pope, Burlington; J. C. Acree, Hamilton; Mary Hood Gillispie, O. D. Perkins, and E. E. Fish, Experiment Station, Lexington.

Red Army Launches 'Bloodiest Drive' To Break Strong Nazi Defense Lines; Indian Tribes Aid in Arawe Offensive; Government Relinquishes Rail Control

Home to Yanks—Protected overhead by sandbags and shell cases, this dugout on Italian battlefield is home, sweet home to these Yanks.

RUSSIA: Baltic Drive

Massing 250,000 men along a 250-mile stretch, the Russians launched a new offensive below Leningrad in the north, 70 miles from the Latvian border. In the initial fighting, the Reds cut across a railroad supply line, and also pushed toward the big Nazi base of Novgorod.

To the south, Gen. Nicholas Vatutin's First Ukrainian army drove 40 miles within prewar Poland, while in the province of White Russia, the Reds gained in heavy fighting over the frozen wastes of the vast Pripiat marshes. On the southern front, stiff German defenses prevented a breakthrough to the Black Sea Rumanian region.

Polish Boundary

Following Russia's suggestion that discussions for settlement of the Polish boundary dispute be based upon the so-called "Curzon line" awarding the provinces of White Russia and the western Ukraine to the Soviet Union, the Polish government-in-exile answered by asking that the U. S. and Britain mediate the question.

Russia took none too kindly to the idea, claiming that by asking the U. S. and Britain to intervene the Poles rejected the "Curzon line" as a basis for negotiation. Violently opposed to the present Polish government-in-exile the Russians declared discussions with the present Polish government-in-exile were virtually impossible unless it was revised, with Communists included in a new setup.

Peace Talks

Russia's unofficial report that two prominent British statesmen had met with German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop in Spain to discuss a separate peace were vigorously denied in London.

In London, it was pointed out that the Von Ribbentrop story apparently was an amplification of a rumor that has been widely spread since the Churchill-Elton conferences in Egypt, but was not taken seriously by other sources.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: Surprise Promised

Made up of Indians from 20 tribes trained in jungle warfare in Panama, units of Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger's Sixth army plowed forward at Arawe in southwestern New Britain, as U. S. bombers continued hammering the big Jap supply base of Rabaul, to the northeast.

Although U. S. advances on New Britain were slow, they were widely expected to contain Jap forces that might be employed in the more vital area to the east. Speaking from Southwest Pacific headquarters, Rear Adm. Robert B. Carney said: "Rabaul and Kavieng are next on our list, but our method of taking them won't be in accordance with any familiar pattern. . . . Just how we will do it will be something the enemy least expects. . . ."

Indicative of the scale of U. S. air attacks on the big base of Rabaul which acts as a feeder point for Jap barges supplying the New Britain, New Guinea and Solomons area, the Tokyo radio admitted the sinking of several ships in the harbor after a raid of 200 American planes.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS . . .

Good Reader

Somewhere in the South Pacific, a native kept one ear cocked while marines argued over the height of the Empire State building.

Finally, the native piped up: "No one right," he said. "Empire State building 1,350 feet high."

"How do you know?" the marines asked.

"Just good reader," the native answered.

RAILROADS: Back to Owners

Following the termination of strike threats with the settlement of the unions' wage disputes, the war department returned the railroads to private ownership.

The action was taken after 1,150,000 members of the non-operating unions were granted wage boosts of from 9 to 11 cents an hour, with extra payments for time over 40 hours making up part of the increase. Employees receiving less than 47 cents an hour will get the 11-cent raise, with those over 57 cents granted 9 cents.

Previously, 350,000 members of the operating unions had been awarded a 8-cent-an-hour boost.

EUROPE: Road to Rome

From their positions on the mountain slopes, U. S. and French troops looked down on the defenses of the Nazi stronghold of Cassino, marking the long road to Rome. From Cassino, the broad plain running northward lends itself to armored warfare instead of the tedious, uphill mountain fighting of recent months.

As U. S. and French forces bore down on the tangled barbed wire, concrete emplacements and deep pits making up the Nazi defense system around Cassino, swirling rain and snow held up the British Eighth army's advance on the other end of the front.

Across the Adriatic in Jugoslavia, guerrillas of Josip "Tito" Broz continued to harass German troop movements throughout the country, considered as a possible invasion site.

POLITICS: Strange Letter

Grumpy old Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes was brought into the case of the mysterious letter, produced by C. Nelson Sparks and allegedly written by Harry Hopkins, and purporting to show that the latter as the President's No. 1 adviser is in close contact with Republican Wendell Willkie.

Also, it is less dangerous than high-altitude bombing. Coming in low, the planes avoid detection by the enemy, whereas the high-altitude planes are caught both by instruments and vision.

The tree-top flying requires greater pilot skill, also the use of delayed-action bombs so that the plane can get away from the target before it blows up under the plane.

This is the kind of work that was done in the famous battle of the Bismarck sea, in which every Jap ship was destroyed. It was also how the Nazis sneaked up on Borl and wreaked havoc with Allied shipping.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY CREW REASON

Washington, D. C.

PLENTY OF TRAINED PILOTS

General Arnold did not say so in his report to the secretary of war, but the tremendous job of expanding air forces personnel is almost finished. He might have penned a little footnote, saying, "We have pilots running out of our ears."

No cadet training bases have been closed as yet, but the army will close approximately one dozen schools for training between now and April. Air forces officials find that the elaborate program has now produced enough competent navigators and pilots to finish the job in both theaters of war.

The tip-off to this is found in recent changes in policy of the transport command.

Army transport command, which does non-combat flying all over the world, has always preferred to take pilots from the open market, usually from the airlines. These pilots are specially trained in safe, efficient transport flying, as distinguished from the combat type of training in the army air forces.

Recently, however, transport command has been forbidden to take on civilian pilots, and has been forced to accept combat-trained pilots from the air forces.

MIRACLE WORKERS

Miracles happen, even in Washington. Farm Service administration, heir to all the grief of Rex Tugwell, and long confined to the Capitol Hill dog house, is now emerging into the warm sunlight of congressional favor. A simple matter of southern friends and a few Congressmen has done it.

The miracle resulted from the fact that Frank Hancock and Harold Cooley were a couple of congressmen from North Carolina. Hancock, now out of Congress, has just been appointed head of Farm Service. Indeed, Congressman Cooley, formerly FSA's deadliest critic, is now a supporter of the agency.

All during the past year, FSA operated on a shoestring. Its funds were cut, and congress frowned on almost everything it tried to do. But now, a respectable house agriculture subcommittee which Cooley heads is about to give FSA a clean bill of health and recommend that it be continued as a permanent agency.

The report will not whitewash Mr. Tugwell or any of his works. In fact, it will sharply criticize all the old resettlement projects (already in process of liquidation). But it will give strong approval to two other FSA programs—rehabilitation and tenant purchase.

Also, there will be a proposal for combining the lending programs of Farm Security with two types of Federal credit administration loans, with a new corporation to handle the joint lending activity.

EXIT BOMBIGHT

There is every indication that the U. S. bombing to which the Japs will be subjected in 1944 will be without benefit of bombight.

The Norden bombight has been publicized as the great secret aid which will help us win the war. It has been highly successful in the European theater, but in the Pacific it has actually become excess baggage.

Supply officers in Washington are still assigning bombights to planes for Pacific action, but fliers are urging that the device be left at home. They have found that the most successful air attack in the Pacific is the low-level tree-top bombing, in which medium bombers swoop down on the target and let the bombs drop when they are so close they can't miss. It is better than any precision instrument ever invented.

Also, it is less dangerous than high-altitude bombing. Coming in low, the planes avoid detection by the enemy, whereas the high-altitude planes are caught both by instruments and vision.

The tree-top flying requires greater pilot skill, also the use of delayed-action bombs so that the plane can get away from the target before it blows up under the plane.

This is the kind of work that was done in the famous battle of the Bismarck sea, in which every Jap ship was destroyed. It was also how the Nazis sneaked up on Borl and wreaked havoc with Allied shipping.

National Service Act's Answer to War Disputes

'Too Many Cooks' Root of Labor Disputes; Pressure Groups, Individuals Unwilling To Lay Aside Financial Desires.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Why did the President order the army to take over the railroads? You can get seven reasons from several different presidential advisers. I won't repeat them. I will name three.

First, the epitome of those the politically minded probably gave; it will be a good thing for 1944. That is the sum total of a number of conclusions of the master minds who are advising concerning the political campaign which is ahead of us.

There are two other reasons which some of the time-hardened officials in Washington offer (aside from the threat, real or fancied, to the world's food supply). These officials let the political stream flow over them. They are more interested in getting the particular job assigned to them done than in figuring out its political consequences.

Needless to say, they belong to that large, conscientious army which most people outside of Washington forget exists, an army of people wise or unwise in their judgments but beholden to no political party for their positions.

These are the two probable reasons they offered: first, the roads were seized as a threat against other industrialists who might make trouble in accepting terms of future labor wage decisions. The second reason offered is this: Simply because many of the President's present labor advisers have had little or no experience in labor relations, in the methods of labor leaders.

Misunderstanding

There are a number of signs which might point to reason one as the one which turned the scales, but, like most of the other motivating forces in many of the recent labor decisions, they spring from the same soil as does reason two: misunderstanding of the methods of labor leaders.

You will recall that William Green, A. F. of L. chieftain, when he made what since seems to have been an ill-starred attack on the Marshall statement that threats of strikes might prolong the war, stated flatly that the railroad unions had never intended to strike.

That statement isn't questioned in spite of the angry denials of the railroad union leaders. It is a statement you heard in every railroad office from every old time counselor and advisor in Washington before the roads were taken over.

Unfortunately, the whole situation is reminiscent of the conversation concerning the dog. The dog growled. The owner said, "Don't be frightened. I know he won't bite." "But," replied his friend, "does the dog know it?"

You see the friend had no understanding of dogs.

If you had slipped into the White House on a certain day not long before the deadline for the strike (engineers and firemen, and conductors) had been reached, you too might have been alarmed. The union representatives (I am told) were making a noise very much like a dog that is going to bite.

Now the old timers were used to the noise. But the two gentlemen upon whom the President leans for advice in matters of stabilization involving wage and price boosts, Messrs. Byrnes and Vinson, were not accustomed to the sound. They did not know that a labor leader's bark is often worse than his bite.

(There never was the faintest possibility of an actual walkout on the nation's railroads.)—William Green.

Messrs. Byrnes and Vinson believed what they heard and it was plenty.

That is experience. I think I can say, is authentic. The labor leaders emphatically and enthusiastically threatened, Messrs. Vinson and Byrnes took the warning growl for a real threat. Others of the President's council were convinced that there was excuse enough to do something which they thought would be advantageous for political reasons.

HARSH LAXATIVES UNNECESSARY?

Millions Find Simple Fresh Fruit Drink Gives Them All The Laxative Aid They Need

Don't form the habit of depending on harsh, gripping laxatives until you've tried this easy, healthful way millions now use to keep regular.

It's fresh lemon juice and water taken first thing in the morning—just as soon as you get up. The juice of one Sunlight Lemon in a glass of water. Taken thus, on an empty stomach, gives you a normal bowel action, day after day, for most people.

And lemons are actively good for you. They're among the richest sources of Vitamin C, which combats fatigue, helps resist colds and infections. They supply vitamins B, and P, aid digestion and help alkalize the system.

That's grand, wake-up drink! 10 mornings. See if it doesn't help you! Use California Sunlight Lemons.

'Expert' Apparently Had Efficiency on the Run

Desirous of bucking up business, the proprietor of a large store engaged an "efficiency" expert, whose chief delight was changing the departments around.

"One day a section would be on the top floor of the building; the next day it would be in the basement or where the restaurant used to be.

After three weeks of this an old lady approached a worried-looking floor clerk and asked if he could tell her where the chinaware department was.

"No, ma'am, I cannot," he replied, wearily, "but if you'll stand here for a few minutes, I'm sure you'll see it go by."

Lady Nearly Choked While Lying In Bed—Due To Stomach Gas

One lady said a few days ago that she used to be afraid to go to bed at night. She was swollen with stomach gas, which always got worse when she went to bed, and the gas would rise up in her throat after she lay down and would nearly choke her. She couldn't lie flat. Had to prop herself up on pillows. Recently this lady got ERB-HELP and now says gas is gone, stomach feels fine, bowels are regular and she can go to bed and sleep soundly. ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! WAR LOANThis war must end sometime. Your whole family, your neighbors, are praying it ends soon and those fighting boys of yours will come home safely.
But will you be ready for whatever happens when peace comes? Will you have something laid away? We're all hoping there'll be jobs aplenty, jobs which mean making something for somebody's happiness and not for somebody's sorrow.
That's where your War Bonds come into the picture. Sure, Americans own billions of dollars of War Bonds now; and before this 4th War Loan ends they will have put away billions more. But how about you?
You're the one that counts. The bigger the pile of War Bonds you have when peace comes, the bigger chance you'll have to slip right into the post-war world you're dreaming about tonight.
So "Let's All Back the Attack."
THE EDITOR.

"OUR SON"

'Tis twenty-one years since that wonderful day
When God blessed our home with a Son.
How happy we were, it is useless to say
For life in our home had really begun;
That dear little one entrusted to our care
So small, and precious and sweet
Made us thank our God as we knelt in prayer,
For we loved him from his head to his feet.We could see him grow a little each day
Like a tiny bud, unfolding in bloom,
Those first little steps, and the new words he'd say
For we had met it all with our prayers;
The time seemed so short for his baby days
For at six he started to school,
We tried hard to teach him it really says
To always be led by the golden rule.The years flew by so swiftly, it seemed
With it's trials and troubles and cares,
But at last the day came, of why we had dreamed
For we had met it all with our prayers;
The day of Graduation was finally here
In a way it really seemed sad
For we realized the time was drawing near
When our Son would leave Mother and Dad.But we tried in those years to raise him right
To love his Church and his God
To be thankful for all his blessings each night
And be careful on the road which he trod.
He had many sick spells in younger years
Serious operations were made,
But we're drawn close to God when we are in tears
And God gave him health, for which we had prayed.The time finally came, when our Son was of age
A time for which all boys have dreamed,
The years had flown by like turning a page
For we just didn't realize, it seemed;
But our Nation was in a terrible War
And we knew he would have to go,
It grieved our hearts when he was sent so far
But we're proud he wouldn't say "NO".Of course we are lonesome and grieved each day
But there are other parents the same;
We are thankful we each are privileged to pray
And even our Sons can call on God's name;
We pray God to protect them, near and far
And lead and guide them each day,
"May we soon have a Lasting Peace from this War May our Sons soon come Home," we pray.

NICHOLSON

"Remember thy creator in the days of thy youth". Children always respond most readily to the Gospel message than do those of mature years. Heaven's richest blessing upon them.

In appreciation of his faithful services rendered and as a token of esteem, the Hickory Grove Church recently generously presented their highly efficient pastor, Rev. Courtland S. Weldon with a hundred dollar check. Such an act of generosity is highly commendable and is truly worthy of emulation.

Mrs. Addie Chambers of Independence was a recent pleasant caller.

In observance of the tenth milestone she has reached in life's journey Miss Betty Jo Weldon enjoyed a lovely little celebration with a few small friends Saturday afternoon at the residence of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Courtland S. Weldon. The birthday cake was aglow with ten tiny pink tapes casting a soft radiance throughout the room. Delightful refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, and games were enjoyed. She was made happy indeed over many lovely gifts and the guests likewise were delighted by little souvenir baskets of candy. Those in attendance were: Jacqueline Morgan, Bessie Morgan, Betty Jo Weldon, Kirtley Weldon, Allen Butler, Johnny Butler, Nellie Pisk, Shirley Jane Collins, Peggy Jo Popp, Phyllis Williams Joyce Armstrong and Curtis Peebles. All reluctantly took their departure wishing that the little hostess might celebrate many, many more Happy Birthdays.

Rev. and Mrs. Courtland S. Weldon paid a brief call Friday afternoon.

BUY Extra WAR BONDS

This sticker in your window shows you bought extra War Bonds. It's your battle flag here at home.

Sure — we'd all like to see headlines like these. But just waiting and hoping won't make them come true.

The plain truth is that while we now hold the initiative in this war, we have yet to penetrate beyond the outer perimeter of Axis defenses. We still have a long, hard road to go... a road that will be longer and harder if there is any let-down now.

That's why you're being asked to buy extra War Bonds during this Fourth War Loan. To keep our fighting men supplied with the weapons they need to win... at a minimum cost of blood and lives.

Remember — war eats up munitions at an incredible rate. The bonds you bought last year won't win today's battles. So buy at least one extra $100 bond now... and keep on buying bonds until Victory.

Let's All BACK THE ATTACK!

Midwinter Jellies Pep Up Menus!

(See Recipes Below)

Get Your Spreads!

Are you low on brown points? Then set the jelly and jam kettles boiling with midwinter fruits and make some delicious spreads to save points.

*Last summer when homemakers were putting up their fruits they discovered they did not have enough sugar for putting up all the jams and jellies they would like, but now they have probably caught up on the sugar and can boil the jellies they saved into delicious, quivery jellies. Use the jellies and jams on biscuits and muffins when the butter is scarce. It spells first aid and appetite appeal to menus.

For those of you who did not put up juices for winter jelly-making, there are plenty of fruits in season now that make delightful spreads. Out with the kettles and colanders, with jelly glasses and paraffin and here we go:

Orange Marmalade.
(Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
3 1/2 cups prepared fruit (about 1 1/2 pounds)
2 1/2 cups sugar
1 3-ounce box powdered fruit pectin

Prepare fruit. Use peels from 6 medium-sized oranges and 2 lemons. Cut in quarters. Lay quarters flat; shave off and discard half of white part. Put peels through chopper, twice. Add 1 cup sugar, 2 1/2 cups water, juice from 1 medium-sized lemon and 1/4 teaspoon soda. (This 1 cup sugar is in addition to measurement given above.) Cover. Heat to boiling. Simmer 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into 3 to 4-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary. Place over high heat. Add powdered pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, heat to a full, rolling boil and boil hard 2 minutes. Remove from heat, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot marmalade at once.

Honey Orange Jelly.
(Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
1 cup juice
1 cup honey
1/2 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare juice, squeeze and strain juice from 2 medium oranges. Measure juice and honey into a large saucepan and mix well. Heat to boiling over high heat and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then heat to a full rolling boil and

Winter Jam.
3 cups cranberries
1 cup diced apples
1 1/2 cups water
1 cup crushed pineapple
3 cups sugar
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon

Cook the cranberries and apples in water until they are clear and tender. Add the lemon, pineapple and sugar. Mix well and boil the mixture rapidly until it is thick and clear. Pour into sterilized glass jars and seal at once.

Colorful and spicy is this next jam with all the relish and tang that only cranberries can give:

Cranberry Jam.
8 cups cranberries
2 cups each, water and vinegar
6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1/2 tablespoon ground cloves
1/2 tablespoon ground allspice

Mash cranberries lightly. Add vinegar and water and cook until soft. Put through a coarse strainer; add sugar and spices. Cook 8 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour into sterilized jars and seal immediately.

And now for those of you who have bottled grape juice on hand. Here is an excellent jelly that is quickly made with powdered fruit pectin:

Grape and Orange Jelly.
(Makes 7 6-ounce glasses)
3 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups bottled grape juice
1 1/2 cups canned orange juice
1 box powdered fruit pectin

Measure sugar into a dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 3- or 4-quart saucepan and place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

If you want sugar-saving suggestions, write to Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Dearborn Street, Chicago 6, Illinois. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

CONSERVATION NEWS
By J. Casper Acree

Grass farming is the surest way for improving depleted soils, as well as retaining what we have left. Old pastures will do a great deal of extra grazing if we do a little work on them. Probably the first step would be brushing and rockings; that is cut or deaden undesirable brush and trees and trim some of the lower limbs off the best trees, using some of this material for mulching galled areas. Loose rock should be piled so that they can be removed for crushing later on. Rev. William Smith said that he deemed it hacked around several trees about this time last year and that all of them died. Nearly all of the land in Boone County needs lime and phosphate. If this material is available at least two tons of lime and 300 lbs. of 20% phosphate should be applied per acre. Now also is a good time to thicken grass stands and to seed bare spots. A mixture of rye grass should be used. On sweet land a mixture of sweetclover 5 lb., red-top 2 lb., ryegrass 5 lb., and bluegrass or orchard grass 5 lb. should be used, and on sour land—lespedeza 5 lb., red-top 2 lb., ryegrass 5 lb. should be used. The rate of seeding of this mixture per acre of course depends on the stand of grass already established. After we have a good pasture and want to keep it we must practice pasture rotation. Fields should be arranged so stock can be moved from field to field every three or four weeks. This not only is beneficial to the pasture and stock as far as grazing value, but it will help control parasites. Last but not least where at all possible fields should be clipped so as to encourage even growth and to get rid of undesirable growth; then these clippings return to humus faster where they have fallen down on the ground.

Spring Am Here
Bulldozers came out of their winter hiding like a swarm of bees last week. Spring must be here. One outfit is building ponds on Omer Cleeks farm this week and is scheduled to go to the Bob Green and J. B. Hizer farms next week. Mr. Hizer had the Soil Conservation District to locate two reservoir sites for him. After completing one of the dams he plans on pushing a pipe thru the dam so that water can flow to a concrete trough below. By using an automatic cutoff he will have clean water available for the stock at all times. Also by extending the pipe he can furnish water to another field eliminating digging another reservoir. He is thinking of building a second reservoir east of the barn, using the dam for a roadway eliminating considerable erosion down a steep slope, used for a lane. These reservoirs will be stocked with fish furnished thru the District.

A second Bulldozer built a reservoir on the Helen Tomlin farm at Verona this week. Mr. King, operator of the farm, is certainly proud of the fact that he will have plenty water next year. Likewise a pipe was placed thru the reservoir dam and a fence will be built to keep stock out of the reservoir. This reservoir was staked out by the District and will be stocked with fish. A third reservoir being constructed this week is on the Orville Kelly farm. Orville says he has worn out several pencils putting down the number of gallons of water he has hauled the last few years. When this reservoir is completed his water problem should be over for it will have a depth of eighteen feet. This reservoir is being constructed under District supervision and will be used as a demonstration fish pond. Thru the bottom of the dam an eight inch string of tile was laid, and a drain trap will be built at the upper end of the string so that it will be possible to drain the reservoir at any time. An inch pipe will be run thru the tile to furnish stock water to a trough below. This reservoir will be stocked with fish, fertilized and an account will be kept of the catch. Little by little Boone county is becoming a county of many reservoirs. Information on how to construct farm reservoirs can be secured at the county agents office or the Boone County Soil Conservation District Office.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

No More Brass

On land or at sea our fighting men do their many chores by the sound of a bugle. All sorts of uncomplicated machinery are used to designate the bugler, but nobody has yet been able to provide a satisfactory substitute for a bugle although recordings are used at some permanent bases.

Aboard ship the men fall in at the order of "Pipe muster." On land the bugler sounds "Assembly!" But no matter where the bugle is used thousands must be bought out of the money we are investing in War Bonds. Back the attack with an extra $100 Bond in the 3rd War Loan.

Orchard Specialist To Meet With County Growers

W. W. Magill, Fruit Specialist, College of Agriculture, will meet with Boone County growers in two planning meetings on Wednesday, February 16th, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The morning meeting will start at 10:00 a. m., from the county agent's office in Burlington. The afternoon meeting will be held at 1:00 p. m. at the farm of William H. Moore, Hebron, Kentucky.

Boone County growers produce some of the highest quality fruit. Insect and disease control are two of the most difficult factors in quality fruit production. The annual winter fruit planning meetings aid growers in analyzing their past years production problems and in planning their new year production program.

All fruit growers are cordially invited to attend one or both of the above meetings.

Big Bone Baptist Church Calls Pastor.

The members of the Big Bone Baptist Church have called Rev. Sam Hogan of the Louisville Seminary as their pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Hogan and young son expect to move to the Parsonage the latter part of this month.

Methodist Church Fellowship Dinner.

The monthly church fellowship dinner will be held Thursday night, February 3rd at 7:30 at the church. The pastor says that a good program is in the making and that he knows the good ladies will bring their plates "heaped up."

Come and bring some one with you, let's have every member represented.

Attend Farm and Home Convention.

Lloyd Slekan, W. G. Kite, J. C. Acree, O. D. Perkins and H. R. Forkner were among the Boone County delegation attending the Annual Farm and Home Convention held at the College of Agriculture at Lexington the past week.

Those attending report one of the best farm improvement meetings held to date.

$2,000 Subscribed By Standard Oil Company In Local War Bond Drive.

The Boone County quota in the Fourth War Loan Drive is nearer fulfillment today due to the subscription of $2,000.00 by Standard Oil Company (Ky.).

Mr. C. E. Nelson, the Company's local Agent at Erlanger, entered the subscription for Standard Oil, and received expressions of appreciation from the Committee.

Mr. Nelson, well known in this community, stated that the action of the Standard Oil Company was taken as an expression of the genuine interest of the organization in the success of the Fourth War Loan in Boone County and in the state.

Miss Luke Gordon, teacher in the Versailles School spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Estelle Gordon and other relatives.

Local Women Attend Northern Ky. State Nurse's Meeting.

Mrs. Robert Brugh, Walton, Mrs. Jemison Ayler, Miss Lucy Grant and Miss Elizabeth Lowry were among those attending a dinner at the Chambers of Commerce Building Covington Tuesday evening.

Lieutenant Leona Jackson of the U. S. Navy was the principal speaker. Lieutenant Jackson was one of five nurses who was in Guam at the time it fell. She was taken prisoner.

Plans are under way to secure Lieut. Jackson for a Red Cross meeting at Walton High School, at which time Home Nursing Certificates will be given out to the High School girls who have just completed this course.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moser and daughter of Nicholson spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Johnson and daughter and brought Loretta Johnson home.

Change Made In Tire Rationing Regulations

Under a drastic change in tire rationing regulations announced Saturday by OPA, eligibility of a motorist for new passenger car tires will be based on the "purpose" for which he drives rather than the kind of gasoline ration he has.

The OPA office for Boone County was informed that the new regulations became effective Tuesday, February 1st. It gave rationing boards authority to decide who are the "most essential drivers."

Scarcity of used and reclaimed rubber tires has "grounded" many essential A and B drivers, OPA officials explained. The amendment will make certain that the increasing number of new tires which will become available this year will get into the right hands.

The new program divides motorists into three categories: One, highly essential occupational drivers; two, less essential occupational drivers; and three, nonessential drivers.

Local W. S. C. S. Hold Installation Meeting.

Wednesday, January 26th the Women's Society of Christian Service held its January meeting and installation service for the 1944 officers at the Methodist Church. A covered dish luncheon was enjoyed at noon in the "fire-side" room of the church. The afternoon session was in charge of the Vice-President, Mrs. J. R. Conrad. The installation was performed by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Dearing. Each organization of the W. S. C. S. was requested at the District Meeting to make at least one member a "Life-Member" during the year, consequently Circle No. 2 had voted to make Mrs. Sallie R. Miller a "Life-Member."

She having been a member of the missionary society of the Methodist Church for sixty-years. This being Mrs. Miller's birthday the Circle felt it was a most appropriate time to announce to Mrs. Miller their intentions and surprise her on her birthday. Needless to say it was a most pleasant surprise and greatly appreciated by Mrs. Miller.

Members and guests present were: Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Redinger, Rev. C. G. Dearing, Mrs. Sallie R. Miller, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. Earl Robinson, Mrs. Mary Stephenson, Mrs. Lula J. Hudson, Mrs. J. P. Jockey, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. C. O. Carlisle, Mrs. E. B. Wallace, and Miss Emma Jane Miller.

Word has been received that William Brittenheim is able to be out again after being in a hospital in Northern Ireland for thirty-two days with scarlet fever. One of his nurses was a lady from Falmouth, Ky. His many friends are pleased to learn of his recovery.

Ellis O. Bird

Ellis O. Bird, 73, a retired Atwood, Ky. farmer and former Kenton County Deputy Assessor, died Sunday at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington. Kenton County Coroner James F. Riffe said death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

Bird was taken to the hospital after being found unconscious on Madison Pike near Independence Saturday. He collapsed on the roadway, according to Dr. Riffe.

A lifelong resident of Kenton County, Bird was formerly a rural mail carrier. He was a brother of the Independence Savings Bank.

Services were held Wednesday at 2 p. m., followed by burial in Independence Cemetery.

Surviving Bird are his widow, Mrs. Fannie Bird; a daughter, Mrs. Carlisle Northcutt, Covington; four sons, Rensley and Herman Bird, Independence; Chester Bird, Toledo, O.; three brothers, Ira Bird, Indianapolis, and Wood Bird, Independence, and four grandchildren.

Mrs. James Cheesman, whose husband is stationed in North Ireland, is now located in one of the Norman Apartments on Main Street in Walton. Their son, James Jr. is improving after a severe illness.

Independence Sailor Killed In Action

Torpedoman 2nd class William Robert Hampton, son of Mrs. H. W. Hampton, Rural Route No. 1, Independence, has been killed in action in the Italian theater, according to a telegram received by his parents Friday, January 28th from the Navy Department.

Mrs. Hampton said the telegram gave no details of the death of her son who has been assigned to a cruiser. He enlisted in the Navy June 30, 1942.

The Navy man, who was 30, was the son of the late H. W. Hampton, Spanish-American War veteran and a former chief engineer of the Covington waterworks. He also was a nephew of Charles Truesdell, reporter for The Enquirer.

In addition to his mother he leaves two brothers, Lew, James E. Hampton, stationed at Sedalia, Mo., and Wade Hampton, Independence, and two sisters, Mrs. Virginia Hamilton and Miss Evelyn Hampton—Kentucky Post.

Mrs. D. Hess Vest returned home Tuesday from Carrollton where she spent a few days with her husband who is with the "Bright Light" Tobacco Warehouse Co. during this season.

Mrs. C. C. Sleet is very ill at her home on South Main St.

Several Friends and Relatives Entertained Sunday By Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Combs.

A party was given to Lieut. Melvin Dryer and Roy Dryer of Park Hills by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Combs at their home in Walton Sunday.

Guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Boyd, Erlanger, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Charley Boyd, Erlanger, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cassidy, daughter and mother, Mrs. M. Cassidy, Newport, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dryer of Ludlow; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dryer and daughter of Edgewood, Ky.; Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dryer and two sons, Roy and Melvin of Park Hills; Mr. and Mrs. Matt VanLeuvan of Ft. Thomas; Mr. and Mrs. Dave Vallandingham of Walton; Miss Rita Rose of Cincinnati; and Mrs. Katie Welsh of Walton, Ky.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Friday in the home of Mrs. Lula J. Hudson. Please all come who want to help win this war. Time 2:30 p. m., February 4th.

The Unchained Tiger

We hear the pious advice that we should "show temperance." We do. The teacher gives the boy a lesson which is certified by tragic human experience through thousands of years. The teacher tells the boy that wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging.

Then the advertiser takes that boy in hand. He has at command unlimited pages in newspapers and magazines, billboards on every highway, movies in every town, radio in almost every home. He has hundreds of "millions of money to spend."

There is the power which the Eighteenth Amendment had blocked. There is the tiger which you unchained when you changed your minds and abolished prohibition.—Dr. William Lowe Bryan, President, Indiana University.

Mrs. W. L. Sturgeon, Mrs. Wm. Soden, Mrs. F. E. Fisher, Mrs. Ed. Hankinson, Mrs. James Pennington, Mrs. Bryan Rector and daughter Irma, Mrs. Nathan Northcutt, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. Jesse Wilson and Mrs. Nell Hunt were among those from Walton, who attended the quarterly meeting of the W. M. S. of the Third Bend Association, held Thursday at the Latonia Baptist Church.

Walton Homemakers

The January meeting of the Walton Homemakers at the home of Mrs. Carrie Rouse was marked by the same interest and enthusiasm that has been characteristic of all the meetings of that organization.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Frederica Mann, who read a beautiful poem, "This I Resolve." After the pledge of allegiance and the singing of the National Anthem the remainder of the morning session was given over to business.

Following a most enjoyable noon hour, the lesson for the day, "Mending and Stitches" was well presented by Mrs. Edna Vest and Mrs. Anna Pearl Gaines. Beautifully prepared examples of the various kinds of patches and stitches made this a very interesting and helpful part of the day's program. The Home Agent, Miss Gillaspie showed hand made accessories and suggested others, any of which could be made at home at very little cost.

Mrs. Gaynelle Flynn, program chairman, presented a short program on "True Worth," in which Mrs. Louise Rouse, Mrs. Mamie Ranson and Mrs. Flynn took part.

Mrs. Martha Jane Carpenter gave an interesting report on "An Italian Tour."

Sixteen members and seven visitors were present. Three names were added to the membership, making a total of thirteen new members.

The February meeting of the Homemakers will be held at the home of Mrs. B. W. Franks of South Walton.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morgan and daughter spent last week with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe P. Morgan of Owenton.

Two Precincts "Over The Top" In War Bond Drive

Subscriptions for the week ending January 29th amount to $129,474.25 which bring our total subscriptions to $197,987.50 so far in the Fourth War Loan Drive. In addition to this we have received official notice that the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky has allocated $2000.00 of its subscription to Boone County. We have also received notice that the Federal Land Bank of Louisville has allocated $3000.00 of its subscription to Boone County. The Federal Land Bank, not being a commercial bank receiving deposits, is permitted to subscribe for bonds the same as an individual in this drive and counts on quotas. The people of Boone County appreciate these two subscriptions which came as a surprise and unsolicited. We understand the Union Light, Heat and Power Company placed a $300.00 subscription through the Florence Deposit Bank which is included in the total above and counts on the quota of the Florence Precinct.

The allocation of the Standard Oil Company and the Federal Land Bank will count on the quota of the County as a whole.

The Bellevue Precinct is the first precinct to report "over the top" on its quota, with Beaver following a close second. Several other precincts report that they are confident of exceeding their quotas. With a little work and a close canvas by the precinct chairman and their workers we believe every precinct can raise its quota. Many people wait to be solicited. Be sure to see every one. There is only one more issue of this paper before the close of the drive February 15th. Let's have the full quota raised before this coming Saturday night as our reports must be prepared and given to the press on Monday for the previous week's subscriptions. Boone County must not fail. The eyes of our soldiers are upon us. What is your answer to them? What will be the opinion of our own Boone County soldiers who are in camps out of the firing lines if our quota is not raised? Your subscription may be the means of saving the life of one of your neighbor boys. Can you sleep soundly at night if you have not subscribed liberally? Go back to your bank and make another subscription before February 15th. Don't expect this one to come to see you. This is your war. The soldiers need your help. We have raised 40% of our County Quota.

Elden Clemons has accepted a position with the Model Food Store and began his duties last week.

Rollie Hume, 72, of Nicholson passed away Tuesday at Booth Hospital. Mr. Hume had been in poor health for the past year, having been in the hospital the past six weeks.

He was a well known and prominent farmer, member of the Board of Equalization of Kenton County and had lived in the same community all his life.

Mr. Hume is survived by his loving wife, Mrs. Ivonora Watson Hume, and two sons, Philip R. Hume, Vice-President of Keeler & Stites Advertising Agency and Robert Hume, County Agent for Grant County; one grand daughter, Louise Hume of Ft. Thomas and one sister, Mrs. George (Belle) Brown of Indianapolis, Ind.; other subscribers and a host of friends.

The funeral services will be held at the residence Thursday (today) at 3 p. m. with Rev. R. F. DeMolloy having charge of the services. Burial will be in the Independence Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Hume celebrated their golden wedding anniversary three years ago.

Chambers and Grubbs have charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rev. R. F. DeMolloy will preach at the Walton Baptist Church, both morning and evening, Sunday, February 6th.

NO! You can't see Inoculating Bacteria

You can't see legume bacteria without a powerful microscope. If you could, you wouldn't know whether they were good bacteria or bad. There is one sure way to get plenty of effective inoculation... just ask for NITRAGIN when you buy. NITRAGIN is the oldest, most widely used inoculant. For 43 years farmers have used it to get bigger yields of alfalfa, clover, soybeans, and to build soil fertility. It costs only a few cents an acre; but frequently boosts yields up to 50% and more. It pays to inoculate every planting of legumes. Get NITRAGIN when you buy your seed. Look for the yellow can.

ABOUT RUBBER

A Wisconsin truck driver recently received a tribute from the Office of the Rubber Director because he risked his life to save the tires on the trailer of a tractor-trailer unit he was driving. The trailer brought fire, but the driver locked it up and removed the tires while it was blazing.

The fur-reducing influence of the rubber suction will be appreciated when it is known that close to 40% of the motor vehicles available in this country were still in service in December, 1941. More than half of them were owned by families with incomes of less than $30 a week.

Indian BEEF

by HAROLD CHANNING WIRE
W.N.U. RELEASE

LEW BURNETT, riding back to southern Texas in 1913, met a NUTRIE, an old trapper. Wiley tells Lew the news: that the bank at Ox Bow has been robbed, that TOM ARNOLD, owner of the Cross T, plans to move to Wyoming, that STEVE ARNOLD may be involved in the robbery, and that JOY ARNOLD is not yet married to CLAY MANNING, Cross T foreman. Lew encounters four men. They offer him the job as trail boss. When he refuses, they capture him and keep him prisoner at one camp. During the night, recognizing Clay Manning's voice, shouting: "I'm through," Wiley releases Lew, and he arrives at the ranch just as the Cross T herd is stampeding.

CHAPTER III
The Longhorns were still in a closely packed formation but beginning to string out. They were led by a small bunch of leaders at the point. Coming abreast of these, he threw his horse against their hindquarters. They were crowded close to the long, gaunt faces.

They were running like frightened jack rabbits. But they edged away from his blazing gun. That broke their galloping stride for a moment. Slowly the black wedge began to curve, until in time the point was bent in and joining to the base. The cattle were still running, but in an endless merry-go-round now, getting nowhere. Their own slackened. Under the pressure of men closing in they made at last a solid, milling pool.

He turned his horse off to one side where a little group of riders had halted.

In the dust and dark he had recognized him, and had not then recognized him. When their talk began to reach him.

Someone said, "We're lucky, that's all. They didn't get a good start."

"Wasn't luck either," another put in. "Who was it got up to the point so fast?" That was Tom Arnold's rough low voice.

They were aware of his horse then coming out of the dark, and their talk broke off. He rode in, grinning. "Hello, Tom," he said.

"Lew," Arnold's head now, as if lifted. "Boys, it's Lew Burnett!"

The group moved and they were suddenly around him, their horses crowding his legs, and he was shaking hands and grinning at the warmth of friendly faces—Tom Arnold and Joe Wheat and old "Rebel John" Quartermaster, who had taught him all he knew about cattle.

He was aware, however, of one rider who had remained apart, standing there, and he called out, "Hello, Clay."

Clay Manning brought his horse around. "How are you, Lew?" He was a big, square-jawed man, with a wide mouth, with all expression on a wide mouth closely guarded. He was a high, square-built man, young and blond and strikingly good-looking; one who could be forgiven, Lew thought, for watching his shadow on the ground.

There had been some reason for his wait off there in the dark, but now, casually enough, he said, "Guess you got here just in time. How'd you come?"

"Down the Dripping Spring today," Arnold said. "That was the brief, direct state Clay gave him; yet in the faint light he could read nothing more."

One by one at spaced intervals the guard riders had come past, and as their dim figures loomed out of the dark Tom Arnold had kept close watch. He was back now, and suddenly, "Clay, where's Steve?" They were together.

"I'll look," Clay said and started off.

Near him Joe Wheat straightened up his thin stall frame, offering, "Better take someone. I'll go with you."

But Clay refused with a quick impatience. "Stay with the guard. Nothing's happened. Tom, you go back to the house? We'll get no more trouble now. There's too many of us. Someone ought to be with Joy."

"I'm going," Arnold said. "Send Steve in when you find him. Lew, come on with me."

They topped into the black valley mouth side by side, but aware of Tom Arnold's strict silence he held down the questions that crowded his mind.

With the day's dust scrubbed from his face and his long hair watered black slick he went out into the hall and turned to the Cross T family dining room.

SPOILED FOOD
Owing to the excellent food laws now in operation there are not many cases of sickness and death from spoiled foods, considering the great necessity of preserving food for future use.

In Hygeia, the health magazine, published by the American Medical Association, Mary C. Brown, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, states that a slight, small and common sense are enough to enable one to tell whether food is fit to eat.

"Intelligent planning for the family needs, plus a proper knowledge of how to care for foods not used immediately, are the keys to the protection of 'leftovers' that must be stored from meal to meal and how to detect spoilage, will pay large dividends in the avoidance of unsafe foods and in protection for the family budget."

The family cupboard is not a suitable storage place for cooked meat—especially lunches, meats and cured meats. All meat should be kept in one of the coldest shelves in the refrigerator.

Further, once meat is purchased it should be cooked within a few hours as the average "home" refrigerator is nowhere near as cold as the refrigerator from which the meat was obtained.

Another suggestion from Mrs. Brown is that while "leftovers" cooked and eaten may seem safe and saving, nevertheless, preventing leftovers is safer and more saving. The housewife should study her needs carefully and have fewer leftovers. Leftovers should be discarded before serving which should be within 24 hours after the first cooking.

"Food that has an 'off' or undesirable odor must be uneaten. Even boiling food with an 'off' odor is not sufficient to make it safe."

"If fermentation and gas appear in the food, it is on top of the danger. Discard the entire can—not simply the part that appears spoiled."

The way to detect odors is to heat the food and smell it when it first becomes hot. An odor is more noticeable when the lid is first lifted. If in doubt, discard the food.

Those afflicted with catarrh or other conditions affecting the sense of smell and taste are not qualified to judge as to the fitness of food for eating.

Sugar Gives Spurt Of Energy to Heart

I have spoken before of the experiments conducted by Harvard research workers during the running of the Boston Marathon for many years ago. The results showed that the amount of sugar present in the blood at the end of the race indicated the condition of the runner. The greater the amount of sugar present in the blood, the better was the physical condition of the runner and the nearer he was to being among the victors at the finish.

As we face the need of the world now and after the war, we wonder how the peoples of other lands can be fed without depriving our own and they need it. It is a great problem, and we ought to pray for those who must work with it.

But let us not forget that all that we have come from God, and that it is a blessing to be able to abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. 3:20). The Christ who multiplied the loaves and fishes is our Lord today, and ready and able to do it again.

III. Jesus said, "I have Compassion on the Multitude" (6:34-44).

He started right. Instead of shutting His heart against the tender desire to help, He let His love for the people control. Then instead of magnifying the difficulties, He multiplied the provisions. And there was enough for all, and to spare.

"He commanded . . . and they did all that He said" (vv. 38, 42). When God speaks all things are made manifest, and the needs of men are fully met—"twelve baskets full of fragments" left over!

Note the orderly manner in which our Lord met this situation. Five thousand men, with women and children to swell the throng, were seated on the grass. Jesus took the loaves and fishes and blessed them. You who forget to thank for the table, notice that quiet and meaningful act. Then He broke the loaves and fishes and distributed them. Doubt they were multiplied as the disciples passed them out to the people.

God is able to do that very thing even in our day. Perhaps not in just the same manner, but surely those who serve Him have marvels as they have seen that "little is made much of" (vv. 16, 17). Let those who labor in difficult places with limited resources take heart—and trust God.

Note the care with which the fragments were collected for future use. It took this war to teach America how shamefully wasteful it has been.

BEDTIME STORY

THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHAT PETER RABBIT FOUND

Every day learns something new; That's the only way to do.

PETER RABBIT found that out a long, long time ago. It is one reason he is so curious about everything. The trouble with Peter is that when he learns something new today he straightaway forgets what he learned yesterday, and, of course, this is no way to do. Peter has to learn a lesson a great many times before it will stick in that queer little head of his, and so, sometimes, he gets into the same kind of trouble over and over again. Now, Reddy Fox never has to have more than one lesson. He never forgets, and this is why everybody thinks him so smart.

Peter was learning something new and very interesting now as he sat on top of the house of Paddy the Beaver. It was how Paddy got air to breathe. You see, ever since Peter had climbed up on the roof he had smelled Paddy the Beaver, smelled him so strong that it had seemed as if Paddy must be right close to him. Peter had sniffed and sniffed. There could be no doubt, not the least teeny-weeny bit, that he smelled Paddy. You know, every one of the little forest and meadow people has a smell just his own. A little of it is left in their footprints, and it is by this that they track one another and know where to find each other.

Peter knew right away that he smelled Paddy the Beaver, but where under the sun could Paddy be? He looked and he looked and he looked, and then, just as he was giving up hope of finding out anything, he made a discovery. What was it? Why, it was that right in the very middle of the roof where Old Man Coyote had dug away the snow and tried to break in were tiny little holes that went down between the sticks of which the roof was made, and out of these tiny holes was coming the warm air which Paddy had breathed, and which brought up with it the strong smell of Paddy himself. Peter chuckled as he thought of how that smell must have set Old Man Coyote almost crazy, for he knew that in the winter Old Man Coyote, like Reddy and Granny Fox, often must go hungry. And big fat Paddy would make a fine meal for any of them. Paddy knew that, too, so he made sure his house was very hard and strong, so that no one could break in.

"I wish I could have seen him trying to dig his way in and not being able to, and all the time smelling Paddy just as I do now," thought Peter. "My, but Paddy is smart! Yes, sir, he is smart. Why, it must be that he gets fresh air to breathe through these little holes, and all the time I've been wondering and wondering how he could live in a house without any opening except under water. He plastered the side walls and most of the roof with mud, which Jack Frost has frozen as hard as stone, but right where these little holes are there isn't any mud, and it must be that he left it this way just so that the air could get through. Now, I wonder how he knew enough to do that. I wouldn't have. I just wouldn't have thought anything about it."

And this is quite true, for Peter never thinks ahead. That is why he is so bappy-go-lucky. He says that thinking ahead makes his head ache. And so he takes things as they come, stuffs himself when there is plenty to eat, and goes hungry when there isn't; gets out of one scrape only to tumble right into another; gets a terrible fright and forgets all about it three minutes after it is over. Nothing worries Peter for very long. So it is no wonder that it was hard work for him to understand how anyone could be so thoughtful of the future and work so hard to prepare for it as does Paddy the Beaver.

Soldier on Trial

An American soldier is allowed, before his trial by a general court-martial, to examine the evidence and the witnesses of the prosecution. During the trial, at which he may be represented by his own civilian lawyer, the defendant is not required to testify under oath if he chooses to make an unsworn statement.

In such a case, the soldier, after telling his story in his own words, may not be subjected to cross examination.

ORDINANCE NO. —

An ordinance providing for the sale of a Franchise by the town of Walton, Kentucky, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Distribution System therein.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE TOWN OF WALTON, KENTUCKY, DO ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1.—That the town clerk advertise in two successive weekly issues of the Walton Advertiser next preceding day of sale, that he will on the 11th day of February, 1944, up to twelve o'clock, noon, receive sealed bids for a Franchise to be clearly described in such advertisement as "A Franchise for constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Light, Heat and Power Plant in the town of Walton, Kentucky, for a period of Twenty (20) years; with the right reserved to the town to reject any or all bids."

Section 96.020 of KRS provides:

- (1) "Each person desiring to bid for the franchise offered for sale under KRS 96.020 shall first deposit with the proper officer of the city, cash or a certified check equal to five per cent of the fair estimated cost of the plant required to render the service. The deposit shall be forfeited to the city in case the bid is accepted and the bidder fails for thirty days after the confirmation of the sale, to pay the price bid and to give a sufficient bond in a sum equal to one fourth of the fair estimated cost of the plant to be erected. The bond shall be conditioned to be enforceable in case the person giving it fails, within a reasonable time, to establish a suitable plant for rendering the service and being rendering the service in the manner set forth in the terms of the sale."
- (2) "This section shall not apply to a person already owning, 'in a city other than a city of the first class, a plant and equipment sufficient to render the service required under the franchise'."

When bids are so received for such franchise, the town clerk shall hold same, sealed, until the next regular meeting of the board of trustees of the town, when and where all such bids shall be opened and examined by the board of trustees; and if no acceptable bid is received, reject all bids; but if an acceptable bid is found, said board shall so declare by ordinance or resolution then and there adopted, and sell said franchise to the accepted bidder, provided he has fully complied with, or exempted by, said section 96.020 KRS above; and the deposits of all unsuccessful bidders shall be immediately returned to them after such franchise is sold, or all bids rejected.

- (a) That the purchase of this franchise shall authorize and permit the purchaser, his successors and assigns, to construct, maintain and operate a general distributing Electric system in the town of Walton, Kentucky, with full right to occupy any or all of the streets, alleys, avenues and other public places of the town as now laid out, or may hereafter during the life of this franchise, be opened and dedicated to public use, with its poles, wires, guy wires and any other necessary line equipment for the continuous period of twenty (20) years from and after the date of his or its purchase of this franchise.

- (b) In the construction of such Electric system, all work in, on, over or under the streets, alleys, avenues and other public places of the town, shall be done in a neat and workmanlike manner; and all surplus dirt, litter and trash created by such work shall immediately be cleaned up, removed and disposed of as directed by the town trustees.

- (c) The location of all poles, cross-arms, guy wires and other line equipment shall be such as not to interfere in any way with free ingress and egress over their usual and customary way or ways to any private property; or interfere with the public traffic or pedestrians in the free and unhampered use of all streets, alleys, avenues and other public places any ways of the town.

- (c) The owner and operator of this franchise may, when necessary, trim any tree overhanging the public streets, alleys and ways of the town; but such work shall be done in a reasonable and prudent manner, and with the least damage possible thereto.

- (d) The franchise hereby offered for sale is not to be exclusive; and the town of Walton may at any time during the life of this franchise, offer and sell another franchise for same purpose.

- (e) The purchaser of this franchise, his successors and assigns, shall provide continuous twenty-four per day standard electric service to all consumers of electric current hereunder, unless otherwise agreed, or prevented by an act of God or other unavoidable temporary interruption.

- (e) And shall give the town of Walton ample security that all of the terms and conditions of this franchise will be faithfully performed by him, his successors and assigns. And will keep and maintain a general office in the town of Walton, Kentucky, which shall be open at all reasonable hours (except on Sunday) for the transaction of all business between such owners of this franchise and its patrons.

Section 3.—That, in the construction and maintenance of the Electric Distributing System provided for hereunder, should the purchaser of this franchise, his or its successors and assigns, elect to use underground conduits for installing any part of its electric wires or other equipment, the same shall be done without damage or injury to any of the pipes, meters or other equipment of the town Water System or private property; and the location and installment of same shall be controlled by the town trustees.

Section 4.—That, by the purchase of this franchise, the purchaser, his or its successors and assigns, bind and obligate themselves to promptly pay to the town of Walton, Kentucky, all damages to any street, alley, avenue or other public place or way of the town, or any other property of the town, arising or growing out of any act or omission done or omitted by such purchaser, his or its, agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system herein provided for; and upon notice from the town so to do, shall answer and defend all actions for personal injury or damage to property that may be brought against the town of Walton, Kentucky, for damages suffered by reason of any negligence of such purchaser, his or its, agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system herein authorized; and to promptly pay all judgments for such damages that may be rendered by any court against the town of Walton, Kentucky; for such damages; and to, in every way, indemnify and save said town harmless from any loss or damage by reason of any negligence of the owner of this franchise, his or its, agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system provided for in this franchise.

Rates

Section 5.—The rates to be charged for electric current by the purchaser of this franchise, his or its successors and assigns, until, and unless changed by order of the Public Service Commission of Kentucky, shall be as follows:

Residential Lighting

First 12 KWH for	$1.00
Next 38 KWH at	.06c

HELP 'EM FINISH THE JOB!

Buy EXTRA War Bonds Now!

Everywhere in this global war, our armed forces are relentlessly pressing the offensive against the enemy.

Thanks to their heroic efforts, total victory is undoubtedly closer but military leaders warn us this is no time for donning rose-colored glasses.

The decisive battles are still to be fought. Millions of dollars worth of equipment must be made and delivered to the fighting fronts. There can be no let-up in the flow of arms our men must have to overwhelm and destroy the enemy.

So no matter what your bond buying has been in the past, step it up, increase it, buy at least one extra $100 bond during the Fourth War Loan!

Loans and more if possible. Whatever sacrifice it may involve, it's nothing compared to those being made every day by the men at grips with the enemy. Help them finish the job—bring them home sooner—by buying extra War Bonds now!

This sticker in your window shows you bought extra War Bonds. Display it proudly!

ITALY: Nazis Trapped

Taking one daring jump after the long Italian peninsula, Allied troops under command of Mediterranean Chief Sir Henry Maitland Wilson landed for the rear of 100,000 Nazi troops fighting in the mountainous Cassino area.

Swarming ashore along 30 miles of sandy beach a short distance below the Germans of half an hour ago, the Allies encountered

As supplies were being rushed to the invading army, the Nazis launched a series of fierce counterattacks near Cassino to cover their withdrawal from the town shortly after.

The German Field Marshal Albert Kesselring found himself in a pretty pickle, with the Allied army at his rear, threatening the two supply roads leading down to Cassino. The Allies first began to encounter resistance at their invasion point when they poked 12 miles inland, with one of the two supply roads already under their fire.

LEND-LEASE: Food Shipments

Ten and one-half million pounds of food and farm products were sent abroad on lend-lease during the first 11 months of 1943, with November shipments alone aggregating 1,000,000 pounds, of which Great Britain got 60 per cent and Russia 38 per cent.

During the 11-month period, lend-lease took 15 out of every 100 pounds of pork produced in the U. S.; 1 1/2 pounds out of every 100 pounds of lamb and mutton; 1 out of every 100 pounds of beef and veal; 4 out of every 100 quarts of milk; 13 out of every 100 pounds of cheese, and 3 1/4 out of every 100 pounds of butter.

Of the 10,500,000,000 pounds sent abroad during the 11-month period, sugar alone accounted for more than 3,000,000,000 pounds.

RUSSIA: Press Baltic Drive

Nazi troops fell back to the south of Leningrad as the Russians pressed their big offensive aimed at driving through to the Baltic sea.

As the Reds moved forward behind the tremendous weight of tanks and artillery, they cut off all of the east-west railroads over which the Nazis could remove troops from their front lines. In addition, they fought to clear the Germans from the Leningrad-Moscow railroad linking Russia's two great industrial cities.

Fighting to stave off capture of the Warsaw-Odessa railroad supplying their Ukrainian troops, the Germans launched counterattacks on the southern front, slowly pressing back the Reds about 80 miles from the Rumanian border. After snatching deep into prewar Poland on the right side of the vast wastes of the Pripiet marshes, the Russian drive tapered off in the face of strong resistance.

BOLIVIA: Snubbed by U. S.

Charging that the Bolivian revolutionary government's seizure of power last December 20 was closely linked with Axis conspiracy in South America, the U. S. State Department in 1943, in recognition of the new regime, but did not immediately resort to applying an economic squeeze against the country.

Source of 50 per cent of U. S. tin supplies and also the source of rubber, tungsten and quinine, Bolivia was the recipient of lend-lease, which would generate 6,000 kilowatts, was being tested before being put into service. A section of wall was blown out, fragments of steel flew around like shrapnel and the roar was heard over a wide area.

The Washington MERRY GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

ARMY DOCTORS

It was lost in the news shuffle, but Dr. John H. Musser of the Tulane University medical school, who is a member of a special committee named by Secretary of War Henry Stimson to study medical conditions in the army, made some startling admissions recently at a senate committee hearing on the utilization of doctors by the war department.

Testifying before the Pepper subcommittee on wartime health and education at a hearing in Pascagoula, Miss., Musser was asked if the army had too many doctors.

"Yes," he replied. "There has been too much indiscriminate recruiting of medical men without due regard for civilian needs."

"Do you think that the army has too many doctors properly?" he was asked.

"Definitely no," replied the Tulane professor. "The present system of medical service in the army is based on a revolving door which has been a Spanish-American war and calls for the recruiting of a disproportionate number of physicians from civilian life."

To illustrate his point, Doctor Musser pointed out that Tulane university's unit of doctors in the army medical corps had spent more than a year "twiddling their thumbs" at Camp Benning, Georgia, while awaiting a call for overseas duty. At this time, Doctor Musser said, there was a crying need for doctors by civilians.

Dr. Musser said he realized that the need for doctors was far greater than in the last war, but that the army medical corps was making the fullest use of its personnel.

WILD ANIMALS' HOLIDAY

Since the army has a priority on guns and shells, there hasn't been much hunting for two years, with the result that wild animals are creeping up on civilization. Both farmers and state officials are demanding cartridges to drive off this invasion.

War production board has received urgent messages from state officials in every part of the country. Pennsylvania is alarmed at the boldness of bears and deer. New York says rabbits eat Victory gardens. Louisiana needs shotguns to drive off the flocks of rice birds.

This explosive situation was the last task handled by Maury Maverick before he left WPA's government division, to be replaced by a chairman in charge of the small plants division.

He tried to raise the civilian credit quota from 12 per cent of the time in January, this year the war was willing. But that was before Cairo-Teheran. After the Big Three powwow the army hinted that it would not relinquish the invasion, and declined to pass the ammunition.

When the news reached the backwoods, says Maverick, the deer did dance, and bears celebrated with big bear hugs.

COSMOPOLITAN CONGRESS

The farm child is all-powerful in the house of representatives, but you'd never guess it to judge by the number of members who are real, estate farmers. There are only 30.

Lawyers, because of their natural bent for politics, continue to dominate the house membership by an overwhelming majority. Out of a total 435 members, 234 are lawyers. Business men rank next, with a delegation of 60.

There are 27 teachers and professional writers and newspaper men, 9 former government officials, 3 insurance agents, 4 doctors, 2 engineers, 2 dentists, and 2 certified public accountants.

Only one minister holds a congressional seat, Rep. Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, former pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church in New York City, and now Rep. Walter H. Judd of Minnesota was a medical missionary in China for several years.

The sports world is represented chiefly by Congressman Joseph O'Brien of New York, former professional wrestler and football player; Samuel Weiss of Pennsylvania, a boxer; and Congressman Charles McNinch of New York, a prizefighter.

In National Pro league games; and La Vern R. Dilweg of Wisconsin, former All-American football at Marquette university.

The rest of the membership hails from a miscellany of trades and professions, including a number of laboring men, miners and mill workers, two druggists—Representatives Carl Durham of North Carolina and Harvey Tibbott of Pennsylvania—and a veterinarian, Congressman George W. Gillie of Indiana.

CAPITAL CHAFF

At D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, privately denounces Bill Greer's statement that the railroad strike would never have been pulled. Robertson says he and his men meant ever word of it.

Because of his interest in Communism, ginger Paul Robeson has been prevented from making USO concert tours of U. S. army camps.

The state department even denies him a passport to go to England, where he is immensely popular.

'A Season of Surprises'—And Still More to Come

Government Control of Railroads and National Service Act Complete Surprise In Many Quarters.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

This is the season of surprises—I won't mention at this moment the big one which will cause your eyebrows to go up at an early date if they haven't already.

I'll mention two others—the labor front—since they represent two of the nearest problems with which congress still has to deal and which are particularly full of dynamite because of the coming elections.

And elections are bound to color the acts of every public man from now until the day of November.

We are used to it now because it happened some time ago, and the effects were not visible to the naked eye—but one big surprise that shook Washington as the year ended was the sudden announcement on a balmy Monday evening in December which ordered the army to take over the railroads.

All over Washington the day before, that day too, as a matter of fact, you could have collected fine odds against such a thing happening. Not that people were betting on that subject itself; what they were betting on, those who ought to be (and I still believe were) in the know, was that there would be no railroad strike.

The second big surprise is still having its sharp repercussions although it happened not so much more recently than the other event to which it was closely linked.

National Service Act

The first, I discussed in a recent column in connection with the seizure of the railroads. Then the second, the President's demand for a national service act as a part of his legislative program outlined in that annual message, came tumbling after, and we haven't gotten over either yet.

One astute and neutral observer of affairs in Washington—an old-timer, who sees parties come and go without loss of sleep over his head, said something to me after the roads had been seized that I have had occasion to ponder upon often since.

He is one of the men who were ready to give odds that there would be no strike and he knows all of the people who participated in the conferences, employers, union leaders, and by their first names—except the President, of course, who nobody but his mother as far as he knows, perhaps his wife when she is here, first names.

One just doesn't first-name Presidents.

Anyhow, this friend of mine, aghest at the suddenness of the seizure of the roads, remarked:

"Do you realize that Overnight, instead of being the object of all attacks for babying labor, the President suddenly is in the position now of defending the people against labor?"

That was the quick reaction of a technical man to whom politics is only an interesting sideline.

When the President's message was dropped out by the radio clerk in congress and the President came to point five in his five-point legislative program, there was a sharp intake of breath. You can't tell a reaction. Hardly anything but a frigid reception for the suggestion for what was immediately called "the labor draft."

Cynical Reactions

Then came the cynical observation of the anti-administration politicians. It sounded a little like the comment of my first-quoted observer except that it was flavored more heavily with party tabasco.

"Pure politics," they sneered. "He had no labor program. He knew it. So now he tosses the hottest controversial question on the boards—labor draft—into congress. He probably hopes it won't pass. If it doesn't, he'll say: 'See, I give them a labor program and they turn me down!'"

Well, there are two surprises which are scheduled to breed others in their trail, and you and everybody else will interpret them in terms of your or their prejudices, shored up to a knife-edge of devotion or hatred in this year of the ballot.

What is really behind these two sharp and unexpected moves? It is pretty hard to be really objective.

Anyone who has watched political campaigns in the making, has a hard time to attribute a partisan motive to any act or word spoken in Washington in an election year.

As far as taking the railroads over goes, that might have been prompted by a real and honest fear that transportation would have been interfered with at a moment when it was as vital to the war effort as a division of fighting men. What possible excuse could there be for letting such a thing happen?

Again, whether or not there was a strike threat, there was a strike threat. At the same moment, there was a strike threat in another vital industry—steel. That was called off by putting pressure on Philip Murray, head of the C. I. O. But could that pressure have been applied unless Mr. Murray could have been told: "Remember, the chances of acceptance of your demands by the steel men will be a lot better if they are afraid the government will take over the industry over too. The railroads are a warning."

And then, if you want to take one highly unoriginal explanation from a nobody as far as officialdom goes, but fairly convicted of all that exist within his own little sphere for things he believes in, I'll throw it in for good measure.

The comment was applied to the President's call for national service act, not the seizure of the roads, but it applies to both. This observer observed:

"Politics? No. The guy just wants to win the war."

And come to think of it, that might have had something to do with it too.

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

The following two viewpoints received recently are interesting. Here is the first:

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction."—from the Constitution of the United States.

The President wrote to uphold the Constitution—the national service act or the labor draft is involuntary servitude or human slavery. That's what he called it in Berlin and Tokyo and he meant it here. What are we fighting for?

And now for the second viewpoint! General Eisenhower said we can't win the war in 1944 but everyone must do his part.

Something must be wrong somewhere for him to say that. He knows it is not the armed forces. So it takes us on the home front. For the armed forces operate on a functional alignment—from commanding officer down, orders are given and obeyed. Servicemen cannot bargain with their commanders as to wages, hours, fighting conditions or make contracts on a cost-plus basis. Their objective is to win battles.

But on the home front, the objective is to make money (see Truman Report). Ships, planes, tanks and guns are secondary.

We can have a functional operation at home by installing total conscription of men, machines, material and money.

These boys were conscripted to die. Then why not conscript the ones at home? If it's good enough for the armed forces, it's good enough for the rest of us.

Who can say he is entitled to more?

Jottings

From May through September, 1943, various government agencies placed 2,706,000 volunteer farm laborers to help harvest the nation's crops.

During 1943 Massachusetts home-makers canned fruits and vegetables which were worth an estimated 900,000,000 ration points.

Every ton of scrap iron and steel used in our blast furnaces saves two tons of our reserve of high-grade iron ore.

"NO MORE TROUBLE WITH CONSTIPATION!"

Says Long-Time Sufferer Who Tried Laxative Cereal

If you, too, are disappointed with pills and purgatives, be sure to read this unsolicited letter!

For several years I was afflicted with constipation. I tried various remedies, but not only temporary relief. Several months ago I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN each morning, drinking water freely through the day, and have since never had the slightest trouble with constipation. My gratitude to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Mr. H. M. Riley, 15 S. Chicago Street, Chicago.

Scientists say KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN can really "get at" a one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They work by helping the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. It's a "gentle-acting, regulating" food.

If you have constipation of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't cheer its welcome relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

JET PLANE: The new "jet plane" is easier to operate than a primary trainer, according to a veteran test pilot who has made many flights in experimental models. He said that the chief advantages of the jet propulsion engine are the great power compared to size and weight and its adaptability to a wide range of fuels, including alcohol and cheap petroleum products.

BLAST: Explosion of a steam turbine in a huge steel plant in South Chicago, Ind., killed five men and injured 11 others. The huge machine, which would generate 6,000 kilowatts, was being tested before being put into service. A section of wall was blown out, fragments of steel flew around like shrapnel and the roar was heard over a wide area.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Through a series of phrase books supplemented by phonograph records, American troops are learning to speak the essentials of as many as 30 different languages.

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

Many people in this community are digging ponds, the water situation is getting to be serious, we would appreciate a good rain.

Mrs. L. N. Hoffman is able to be up in her room after several weeks illness.

Mr. Shaler Marshall is doing nicely from a spinal operation at Christ Hospital one day the past week.

Several from this community attended the funeral of Mrs. Julia Culberson of Newport Monday. She was well known in this community.

Mrs. Jim Crouch and sons returned home Sunday from several days visit with relatives at Sparta, Ky.

Mr. Bob Farrel spent a few days thorough with his parents this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Sowder and little son of Latonia spent the day Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Loeys and family and attended church services at Staffordburg.

Mrs. Della Williams returned home Friday evening from the Farm and Home Convention at Lexington and reported the week well spent. Mrs. Williams went as a delegate from the Staffordburg Homemakers Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Miller are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter, born Friday at Booths Hospital. Both mother and daughter are doing nicely.

Rev. Cardwell fulfilled his regular appointment at Staffordburg Sunday morning and evening. We had a good attendance at Sunday School and a good offering for the Orphans Home, attendance 41 and offering $17.38. All come back next Sunday and try to bring someone with you.

A WALTON LADY SPIT UP ACID LIQUIDS FOR HOURS AFTER EATING

For hours after every meal, a Walton lady used to spit up a strong, acidulous liquid mixed with pieces of half-digested food. She says it was awful. At times she would nearly strangle. She had stomach bloating, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Today, this lady eats her meals and enjoys them. And she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her food agrees with her. No gas, bloating or spitting up after eating. She is also free of headaches now, and her bowels are regular, thanks to this Remarkable New Compound.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Doc Mitchell and I were chewing the rag recently about America's aims in this War.

We agreed the four freedoms are O. K., but a letter from Charlie Jenkins, in Italy, comes a lot closer home.

"Just received a copy of my county paper," Charlie wrote. "Made me feel for a minute like I was back home again with all you folks. And when this job over here is done, I will be back—with everybody and everything just the same, I hope—" just as pleasant and cheery as ever."

Well, we all know the things the boys want left "as is." The corner drugstore; taking a vid to a movie. The right to vote. The right to have a glass of beer if they want it.

Keeping things the way Charlie and the boys remember them is our obligation, here at home.

From where I sit, that's part of what Charlie meant.

Joe Marsh

SALE OF FRANCHISE

"A Franchise for constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Light, Heat and Power Plant in the town of Walton, Kentucky, for a period of Twenty (20) years; with the right reserved to the town to reject any or all bids."

Sealed bids will be received by the Clerk of the Town of Walton until 12 o'clock noon on the 11th day of February 1944, for the purchase of a franchise ordered to be sold by the Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton, to construct, maintain and operate an electric distribution system in the town of Walton for a period of twenty (20) years. The terms of said franchise are set out in an ordinance of the Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton, passed and approved on the 28th day of January, 1944, to which reference may be made for inspection by the proposed bidders.

All bids must be sealed and marked on the outside of the envelopes, "A Franchise for constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Light, Heat and Power Plant in the town of Walton, Kentucky, for a period of Twenty (20) years; with the right reserved to the town to reject any or all bids."

12¢ WORTH OF NITRAGIN INOCULATION

It cost only 12¢ an acre and took only a few minutes to make the difference in the test plots shown above. Inoculation of seed with NITRAGIN not only boosts yields of soybeans, alfalfa, clover and other legumes, it also increases protein content, and helps build soil fertility—adding as much as 50 to 150 lbs. of nitrogen to the acre. It pays to inoculate every planting of soybeans, and other legumes regardless of previous cropping. NITRAGIN is the most widely used inoculant. Get it from your seedman... in the yellow can.

Look for the name NITRAGIN when you buy. FREE BOOKLETS: Write for free booklet of NITRAGIN facts. How to grow legumes, how to inoculate, and how to use NITRAGIN. The Wright Co., Inc., 200 E. 1st St., Milwaukee 1, Wis.

Indian BEEF

LEW BURNETT has returned from Wyoming to southern Texas in 1943, to take a job as trail boss for TOM ARNOLD, owner of the Cross T ranch. On the way he gets news from WILLY NICKLE, and meets four suspicious-looking men. Tom Arnold tells Lew that he is moving with his herd to Wyoming, and that he is to try to make the losses sustained when the bank at Osow was robbed. Tom fears that his son STEVE may be involved. Tom also says that he must deliver three thousand head of cattle to the Indian agent at Ogallala by September 1, or lose a profitable contract. Lew talks to JOE ARNOLD, who is engaged to the foreman, CLAY MANNING.

CHAPTER IV
"I refused and they started making up a herd of their own. Buying at the cheap price now, they'll save fifty thousand dollars to get they get the cattle. They'll be in Ogallala with that herd and I won't be with mine," Tom continued.

"Sure," Lew said, "sure," and a sudden restless impatience gripped him up onto his long legs. "But that's a game you can play, Tom! What's the matter here anyway? If it stampeeds in their deal give 'em one trouble. You've come up through enough trouble to know all the tricks."

Unaware, Arnold said quietly, "I've let Clay handle this."

"Lew's figure sharpened on him. 'If trouble's bound to come,' he said, 'I'd rather settle it now than on the trail. There'll be grief enough later. Does Clay know I'm to trail boss for you?'"

"Not yet," Arnold's dark eyes lifted. He smiled. "I'm glad to know you're still got an edge on you! That's what I've been counting on, and that's a proposition I'm going to make." His gruff bluntness was now. "Now don't get it into your head that this is a gift. I've got my own good and selfish reasons."

Looking down past the man, Lew saw the breathless way in which Joy was watching him, her lips parted, all of her body held very still. And Tom was saying, "I want you to take a share in this Cross T herd. A trade. You've got this land in Wyoming. I've got cattle and no place to range them. I'm adding a thousand head of shes and yearlings to the herd contract. The thousand head will make a start on the new ranch—half for Joy and Steve, half for me."

It was a generous offer, more than generous, all the while he was but with a price that neither of these two understood. Silenced by that knowledge, he stared down into the freight so long that behind him, almost in anger, Arnold's gruff voice burst out. "Well? What's the trouble now?"

"Tom," he said, "I'm sorry. I'll bow your head, all the while he was but with a price that neither of these two understood. Silenced by that knowledge, he stared down into the freight so long that behind him, almost in anger, Arnold's gruff voice burst out. "Well? What's the trouble now?"

But let men come to know the truth as it is in Christ, learn to know the Father, and then let them translate their knowledge of Christ into the needs of their fellow men, and there will be songs of salvation and joy.

One of the greatest of Christ's disciples was concerned with the experience of the disciples rather than the feelings of our Lord. Fundamental in both Christian life and service is a clear understanding of the person and other symptoms, we will not want that food any more or at least not for a long time.

Thus by treating the alcoholic patient with an emetic, it is to vomit it occurs when the patient drinks alcohol. The emetic used is emetine, derived from ipecac.

Dr. Thimman refers to the work of Dr. Voegtlin and Lemere who have used this treatment for six years. They use a solution of 50 grains of emetine, 25 grains of pilocarpine, 25 grains of ephedrine and 10 cc. of water, 0.4 to 1.0 c.c. of which is injected into a muscle 4 to 12 minutes before a drink of alcohol is given to the patient. The treatments are given on seven to ten successive days and repeated once after one, two, three, six, nine and twelve months during the first year.

There were 1,194 patients treated by this method. About 75 per cent of 644 patients treated for less than two years were still abstainers; about 62 per cent of 284 patients treated from two to four years; and 81 per cent of 259 patients treated four or more years were still abstainers.

It is gratifying to know that the results of the treatment of alcoholism is now successful in such a large percentage of cases.

AS ONE SERVICE MAN TO ANOTHER

Of course, I don't get my pay check from Uncle Sam, but I sure am a "service" man when it comes to work in close cooperation with the armed forces. Seems like most of the army, navy and marine corps ride my bus sooner or later. But you're welcome, even if we are crowded to the gunnels, as the sailor said. When I'm hauling you guys in uniform, I feel like I'm doing my bit for the country.

Bill the bus driver

SOUTHEASTERN
GREYHOUNDThis is Your "Battle Flag"
HERE AT HOME

Every patriotic American will want to display this emblem at home—on his front door or in his window. It is the red, white and blue sticker that says you have done your part in the 4th War Loan.

Display your colors now!

DURING this 4th War Loan Drive you are again asked to do something extra to help smash the Axis. Your part is to invest in at least one extra hundred dollar Bond. But don't stop there if you can do more. For remember—no matter how many Bonds you buy—no matter what denominations they are—you get back on maturity $4 for every $3 you invest. And that's on the word of Uncle Sam, creator of the safest investment the world has ever known.

So before you look into your wallet—LOOK INTO YOUR HEART. Your company, the place where you work, has been given a quota to meet in this 4th War Loan Drive. Do your part to help meet this quota. And remember, millions of America's fighters are waiting for your answer, your pledge that you are backing them to the limit.

Let's All BACK THE ATTACK!

RUPTURE

E. J. MEINHARDT, widely known Shield Specialist of Chicago, will again be in Cincinnati, Ohio, at the Gibson Hotel, for Six Days beginning Saturday, Feb. 12th to Thursday, Feb. 17th inclusive, from 1 P. M. to 4 P. M. and 6 P. M. to 8 P. M. daily.

Mr. MEINHARDT says: The Meinhardt Shield is a tremendous improvement—well known for producing immediate results. It prevents the Rupture from protruding in 10 days on the average—regardless of size or location of Rupture and no matter how hard you work or strain. It has no leg straps. (No Surgery or Injection Treatments used). Mr. Meinhardt has been coming here for 15 years. He has thousands of satisfied customers. Ask your neighbors.

Caution: If neglected—Rupture may cause weakness, backache, constipation, nervousness, stomach pains, etc., or sudden death from strangulation.

Men having large Ruptures which have returned after Surgical Operations or Injection Treatments are also invited. When all others fail—see MEINHARDT. He will be pleased to demonstrate to you privately without charge. (Only men invited.) Write only.

This community was shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Mrs. Freda Brown Saturday. She leaves many friends here who sympathize deeply with the husband and children in their sad loss.

Rev. Shirley Spahr has resigned as pastor of the local Baptist Church as he has accepted the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of Cadiz, Ky. He and his wife have many friends here who regret to see them leave.

AMERICA'S FIGHTING POWER

stems from his genius

THIS week America honors the memory of the man whose genius led to the development of an industry that has proven to be one of the nation's greatest assets in its hour of greatest peril.

If Edison were alive today he would be profoundly thrilled by electricity's contribution to America's gigantic war production program—by the endless flow of arms made possible by America's unchallenged leadership in the field of power production.

But back in 1879 when he perfected the incandescent lamp and later in 1882 when he gave the world the first practical central station electric system, he was not thinking of electricity as a producer of materials for destruction. He visualized it as a servant of mankind that would ease man's labors, make goods more plentiful and cheaper, and improve living standards beyond any previous conception in history.

Edison lived to see his dream come true. And when this war is won, electricity will continue its interrupted march of progress, bringing new comforts and conveniences, new benefits to mankind.

For America, birthplace of the electrical industry, has the power to win the war... and the power to take the lead in building toward that better world that is sure to come when peace returns.

History's Biggest Naval Bombardment
Precedes Major Action on Marshalls;
Russians Surge Onward Toward Baltic;
Civilian Fat, Oil Allotments Decreased

Solomons—Marines plod through heavy mud during operations against last big Jap base of Bougainville in Solomons.

MID-PACIFIC:
Japs Crumbling

With stalwart U. S. doughboys pounding at other points in the Marshalls from beachheads they established in the very heart of the islands, Jap forces slowly relinquished their grip on these mid-Pacific strongholds menacing Allied supply lines to the Philippines.

In attacking the Marshalls after the greatest naval bombardment in U. S. history, American troops were put ashore on one of the most important of the islands making up the group. From here, the doughboys trained their guns on the biggest air base and the best submarine and seaplane station in the whole island cluster.

With the memory of strong Jap fortifications at Tarawa in the Gilberts still in mind, the U. S. spared none of the firepower of its navy or air force to smash at enemy installations in the Marshalls before troops clambered ashore. But despite the terrific battering, Japs took up the fight when doughboys landed, again making it no picnic.

TAXES:

Lawmakers Agree

Falling far short of the administration's request for 10 1/2 billion dollars in new taxes, a conference committee of senators and congressmen agreed on raising 2 billion 300 million, to bring 1944 revenue to about $4 billion dollars.

More than a billion dollars of the new taxes would be collected on higher levies for goods and services, new rates amounting to 1 cent for every 5 cents admission charge, 80 per cent of the profit liquor, 80 per cent of beer, 20 per cent on fur, jewelry and luggage, 15 per cent on transportation, and increased rates on club dues, bowling alleys and pool tables. The tax on cosmetics would be raised to 20 per cent.

Air mail rates would be raised to 8 cents, 3 cent stamps would be required on local mail deliveries, and charges would be increased on C.O.D., registered and insured mail, and on money orders.

By abolishing the earned income credit and deductions for payment of federal excise taxes, the lawmakers figured on raising 600 million in additional income taxes. Another 500 million would be raised by increasing the excess profits tax from 90 to 95 per cent.

RUSSIA:

Near Baltic

Churning deeply into Nazi lines, Red troops pressed onto the borders of the Baltic states of Estonia and Latvia, while in the Ukraine 400 miles to the south, heavy fighting continued in fluctuating counterattacks.

Russians surged toward the narrow belts of land making up Estonia and Latvia on the Baltic sea coasts after rolling the Nazis back from around Leningrad and seizing control of the large network of railroads in the area, including the double track running to the north.

Employing upwards of 250,000 men the Reds hammered big dents into the German lines, forcing enemy retreats with the aid of encirclement from the rear.

Having gained ground before German counterattacks 80 miles from the Rumanian border, the Reds struck back both to the east and west of this region, chewing into enemy lines behind intense artillery and tank fire.

LIFE INSURANCE:

Claims Mount

Deaths of men in military service and the effects of stress and strain on the civilian population contributed to a 16 per cent rise in life insurance benefits since 1939.

During the same period, however, there has been an increase of 22 per cent of insurance force to a record of 139 billion dollars, with women recently employed accounting for many of the new policies.

Because of this increase in the total amount of life insurance outstanding, the mortality rate has been about the same as in 1939, and lower than in any year prior to 1938. In 1943, 1 billion 100 million dollars was paid out in claims.

War Casualties

U. S. war casualties so far total 46,186, with 33,153 dead, 33,167 missing, 40,818 wounded and 20,898 prisoners.

Army casualties number 109,434, divided among 17,480 killed, 24,806 missing, 41,533 wounded and 25,615 prisoners.

The navy reported 36,752 casualties, of whom 15,773 were killed, 8,845 missing, 7,985 wounded and 4,283 prisoners.

Of the 2,000 prisoners who died in enemy camps, most were under Japanese control. It was reported.

Baby Smaller

When 6 pound 5 ounce Paulette Mathews was born a year ago in Chicago, doctors held little hope for her life. But Paulette recently celebrated her first birthday, although weighing 3 ounces less than at birth in a case that has baffled physicians.

Twenty-two inches long, little Paulette can only digest a little of formula and water, and she has required so much care that her mother, who has scarcely slept since she was born, the Mathews also have a thriving young son, Ronald, 4.

PRESSURE COOKERS:

400,000 Authorized

Because more and more home makers have taken to canning to avoid shortages of fruits and vegetables in off seasons, the War Production board has authorized manufacture of 400,000 aluminum pressure cookers during the first six months of 1944.

Although 399,000 pressure cookers were made for export last year, use of aluminum was banned in January of 1942. Because of shortage of capacity for fabricating aluminum, none will be available for manufacture of other kitchen utensils.

Under WPF plans, the new aluminum pressure cookers will not be rationed and will be made for sale without restriction. Three-fifths of U. S. families canned last year, it has been estimated, with an average per family of 165 jars or cans.

Monkey Shines

When Private Floyd Steward of San Pedro, Calif., plunged into a watery shell hole in North Africa during a bombing raid and came up with a baby monkey, it was one of the best moves he ever made.

Private Steward's constant companion after that, the monkey found grapes and berries for him when he was lost in the wild country for days; chattered noisily when he and 14 other soldiers were about to drink from a poisoned waterhole, and by loud yelping, directed rescuers to the spot where he had been buried under debris by an exploding shell.

DEBTS:

Consumers Cut Total

At the end of 1943, Americans could look beyond to postwar markets to move possible spending, following reduction of consumer indebtedness by 1 billion, 200 million dollars during the last year because of continued goods shortages.

Installment loans also showed a 25 per cent slump for the year, and charge accounts were cut, but only by 15 million dollars.

At the end of 1943, automobile credit outstanding was one-third of the total of 1942.

Warms Farmers

A 15 per cent increase in land prices since 1942 reflects a threatening speculative spree, Governor A. G. Black of the Farm Credit administration said.

Declaring that farm land in the Central West and parts of the South was selling 20 to 30 per cent above federal land bank appraisals, Governor Black said some buyers were courting disaster if they could not reduce mortgages to an amount that could be carried by normal earnings.

Spurring demands, Governor Black said, are a large number of city people with large incomes, who have been putting their money into farm land.

VETS' AID

It is estimated that 300,000 beds will be needed by 1949 to care for veterans of this and previous wars. As hospitalization is now open to all men and women of the armed forces, neither their mobility in service-connected or not, Brig. Gen. Frank Hines, veterans' administrator, expects to have training camp facilities turned over to him for conversion into hospital accommodations.

Few of the injuries and ailments for which servicemen receive government care are battle casualties.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSONWashington, D. C.
SIGNIFICANCE OF RUSSIAN BLAST

Members of the diplomatic corps who have lived beside Russia and dealt with her diplomats for years point to some significant things about the Pravda report which set the world on its ear about the British negotiating a separate peace with Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop.

The first place, diplomats point out that, had the report been published in Izvestia, it would have been much more serious. Izvestia is the organ of the Soviet government, and anything appearing there is taken to be the official view of the Kremlin itself.

However, Pravda, organ of the Communist party, is one step removed, and anything published in it can be interpreted as close to but not necessarily representing the views of Stalin.

Thus, it was Pravda which dropped a ton of editorial bricks on the unsuspecting, well-intentioned head of Wendell Willkie, hitherto considered Russia's best friend. After the rebuke came after Willkie had discussed the Polish boundary question—in a manner quite sympathetic to Russia.

However, the Russians chose to rebuke their best friend as a warning to President Roosevelt and Secretary to President Roosevelt and Secretary to President Roosevelt and Secretary to President Roosevelt.

Therefore, remembering that Russian diplomatic moves are usually aimed obliquely at something on the other side of the billiard table, here the diplomatic corps' explanation of the latest Pravda thrust against the British.

For about two years, it has been no secret that the British have hung back regarding a second front in western Europe. It is also no secret that, right down to the Tehran conference, Churchill pulled for a Balkan front or almost any other front except a western front.

PUTTING RUBBER ON SPOT

Stalin is a man who never forgets and, even if no friction had occurred at Tehran, he would have continued to be suspicious about British intentions of a second front. In view of the two years of second front debate. And on top of Tehran, plus Churchill's long stay in Africa, Stalin's suspicions may be boiling again.

Therefore, point out the diplomats, what could be more adroit than to put the British squarely on the spot by subtly accusing them of talking to the Nazis about a separate peace?

In other words, after the Pravda article, the British now have to prove to more possible spending, following reduction of consumer indebtedness by 1 billion, 200 million dollars during the last year because of continued goods shortages.

It's complicated, but the Russian mind is complicated, and Russian diplomacy even more so.

SOFTENING CASUALTY MESSAGES

The war department has received many letters recently from ministers and private families, suggesting that, instead of sending casualty messages by telegram to be received families, they be sent to a committee of pastors in each community, one of whom would then deliver the message and seek to soften the blow of the tragic news.

So far, however, the war department has taken the position that it should continue delivery of the casualty messages by telegram to military messenger boys. Army officials argue that delivery by a clergyman would cause confusion and delay, and a clergyman might not be available at the time, or he might lack proper and immediate transportation.

Also, the army argues that a casualty message has a high priority, which means that its transmission is expedited, and this might be offset by any delay in receiving and the message had to pass through the hands of a clergyman.

CAPITAL CHAFF

When diplomats run out of liquor, that's a story. Carlos Campbell of the Chilean ambassador burst into the office of Chilean Ambassador Michels, saying, "Don Rodolfo, please lend me a case of wine for tonight. I'm having a party!" "I can't do it," replied the ambassador. "I have no wine myself!"

Food and Agriculture Organization Aims at Expanded Production, Increased Trade Within Countries Involved.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, United Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When the President introduced his second bill of rights into the State of the Union message to congress and skillfully linked the past and future with it, he set up old arguments among the elite of Washington's cracker-barrel set.

When "Old Dr. New Deal" was set aside as the guardian of American welfare, some folks hereabouts insisted that he had passed on considerably extending his practice later—that his friend, Franklin D., was planning on a "World New Deal."

Like all smoke, it signals a fire somewhere.

There is no doubt that even though the realistic Mr. Churchill and the realistic Mr. Stalin didn't see eye to eye on everything as they looked at each other across the green table at Tehran, we have reason to believe that both are pretty well sold on what they each think can be done in the way of a little international "welfare work" which would raise the decibels which measure the hum of business in their respective countries.

President presented to congress the various human "rights" he visualized, as you recall, and there will be more specific data concerning them which he will submit to the legislators later, either just that a business man would use on it. Believe it or not, the men who are figuring out free lunches and the production programs to make them unnecessary hereafter are doing it scientifically, and even if you don't like the word, on a "businesslike" basis.

Little has been said of this permanent food organization of the United Nations. You hear about UNRRA. It is supposed to take care of what might be called "strategic feeding"—that is, taking care of the people in countries the Allies recognize (hungry men and women are not hard to anyone). The motive is less altruistic than military.

But you may not have heard of the work of the FAO—that's an entirely unofficial abbreviation of the Food and Agriculture organization which Gove Hambridge, the agriculture administrator of the department of agriculture made up himself. He was appointed one of the secretaries of the commission appointed at the conference in Hot Springs, Ark.

Work 'Going Well'

Hambridge says the work of this FAO is going well. It has drawn up the plans for this job of permanent feeding. Not "free" feeding permanently, but a plan for "family buying"—family of nations buying. Naturally there is plenty of chance for differences of opinion but Hambridge puts it this way:

"Pa wants a certain kind of engine. May be his eye on the upholstery. She prefers a certain body color. Junior—she's thinking about the gadgets on the instrument panel. But the main thing is—they all want a car. They end up by getting one that isn't quite what anybody expected—but one that's durable, and a good buy, and gets them where they want to go."

Each one gives up his own pet ideas to get a car that may be serviceable for the whole family.

"And that's what will happen," says Hambridge, "with the Food and Agriculture organization. The latter commission has been working out a constitution—a broad plan of operation, showing what the organization will do and how it will do it, and a general budget. It's not what the work will cost. Along about March, probably, they will have these plans ready to submit formally to the 400th governments. If there's quick approval—the organization should be set up and ready to go not too long after that."

Two things FAO is aiming at: expanded production within the countries involved, and increased trade between the countries involved.

Some countries, for instance, just can't produce enough of the right kinds of foods to feed their people properly; others can produce certain foods—like wheat, for instance—only at very great cost.

The FAO, its members say, aims to get away from the old isolationist idea that prevailed almost everywhere before the war—with every country trying to meet all its own needs which ended up with a smacking big depression and a whopping big war. What the FAO can do to prevent such world catastrophes, according to Hambridge, remains to be seen.

That is what this very silent committee, or commission or whatever you want to call it, is doing—making an attempt at a prophylaxis—an attempt to cure the disease instead of the symptoms.

Life on rough gravel roads is about 40 per cent less than on smooth concrete pavements. This was proved by tests conducted by the Iowa State College.

Soap, it develops, is to be a growing factor in launching motor transportation. It has been estimated that 100 million pounds of soap will be required for one year's production of synthetic rubber.

ORDINANCE NO.—

An ordinance providing for the sale of a Franchise by the town of Walton, Kentucky, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Distributing System therein.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE TOWN OF WALTON, KENTUCKY, DO ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1.—That the town clerk

advertise in two successive weekly issues of the Walton Advertiser next preceding day of sale, that he will on the 11th day of February, 1944, up to twelve o'clock noon, receive sealed bids for a Franchise to be clearly described in such advertisement as "A Franchise for constructing, maintaining and operating an Electric Light, Heat and Power Plant in the town of Walton, Kentucky, for a period of Twenty (20) years; with the right reserved to the town to reject any or all bids."

Section 2.—That the town clerk

(1) "Each person desiring to bid for the franchise offered for sale under KRS 96.020 shall first deposit with the proper officer of the city, cash or a certified check equal to five per cent of the fair estimated cost of the plant required to render the service. The deposit shall be forfeited to the city in case the bid is accepted and the bidder fails for thirty days after the confirmation of the sale, to pay the price bid and to give a sufficient bond in a sum equal to one fourth of the fair estimated cost of the plant to be erected. The bond shall be conditioned to be enforceable in case the person giving it fails, within a reasonable time, to establish a suitable plant for rendering the service and begin rendering the service in the manner set forth in the terms of the sale."

When bids are so received for such franchise, the town clerk shall hold same, sealed, until the next regular meeting of the board of trustees of the town, when and where all such bids shall be opened and examined by the board of trustees; and if no acceptable bid is received, reject all bids; but if an acceptable bid is found, said board shall so declare by ordinance or resolution then and there adopted, and sell said franchise to the accepted bidder, provided he has fully complied with, or exempted by, said section 96.020 KRS above; and the deposits of all unsuccessful bidders shall be immediately returned to them after such franchise is sold, or all bids rejected.

Section 2.—(a) That the purchase of this franchise shall authorize and permit the purchaser, his successors and assigns, to construct, maintain and operate a general distributing Electric system in the town of Walton, Kentucky, with full right to occupy any or all of the streets, alleys, avenues and other public places of the town as now laid out, or may hereafter during the life of this franchise, be opened and dedicated to public use, with its poles, wires, guy-wires and any other necessary line equipment for the continuous period of twenty (20) years from and after the date of his or its purchase of this franchise.

(b) In the construction of such Electric system, all work in, on, over or under the streets, alleys, avenues and other public places of the town, shall be done in a neat and workmanlike manner; and all surplus dirt, lime and trash created by such work shall immediately be cleaned up, removed and disposed of as directed by the town trustees.

(c) The location of all poles, cross-arms, guy wires and other line equipment shall be such as not to interfere in any way with free ingress and egress over their usual and customary way or ways to any private property; or interfere with the public traffic or pedestrians in the free and unimpeded use of all streets, alleys, avenues and other public places any ways of the town.

(d) The owner and operator of this franchise may, when necessary, trim any trees overhanging the public streets, alleys and ways of the town; but such work shall be done in a reasonable and prudent manner, and with the least damage possible thereto."

(e) The franchise hereby offered for sale is not to be exclusive; and the town of Walton may at any time during the life of this franchise, offer and sell another franchise for same purpose.

(f) The purchaser of this franchise, his successors and assigns, shall provide continuous twenty-four per day standard electric service to all consumers of electric current hereunder, unless otherwise agreed, or prevented by an act of God or other unavoidable temporary interruption.

(g) And shall give the town of Walton ample security that all of the terms and conditions of this franchise will be faithfully performed by him, his successors and assigns. And will keep and maintain a general office in the town of Walton, Kentucky, which shall be open at all reasonable hours (except on Sunday) for the transaction of all business between such owners of this franchise and its patrons.

Section 3.—That, in the construction and maintenance of the Electric Distributing System provided for herein, should the purchaser of this franchise, his or its successors and assigns, elect to use underground conduits for installing any part of its electric wires or other equipment, the same shall be done without damage or injury to any of the pipes, meters or other equipment of the town Water System or private property; and the location and installment of same shall be controlled by the town trustees.

Section 4.—That, by the purchase of this franchise, the purchaser, his or its successors and assigns, bind and obligate themselves to promptly pay to the town of Walton, Kentucky, all damages to any street, alley, avenue or other public place or way of the town, or any other property of the town, arising or growing out of any act or omission done or omitted by such purchaser, his or its agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system herein provided for; and, upon notice from the town so to do, shall answer and defend all actions for personal injury or damage to property that may be brought against the town of Walton, Kentucky, for damages suffered by reason of any negligence of such purchaser, his or its agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system herein authorized; and to promptly pay all judgments for such damages that may be rendered by any court against the town of Walton, Kentucky; for such damages; and to, in every way, indemnify and save said town harmless from any loss or damage by reason of any negligence of the owner of this franchise, his or its agents, servants or employees in the construction, maintenance or operation of the electric distributing system provided for in this franchise.

Section 5.—The rates to be charged for electric current by the purchaser of this franchise, his or its successors and assigns, until and unless changed by order of the Public Service Commission of Kentucky, shall be as follows:

Residential Lighting Rates
First 12 KWH for $1.00
Next 36 KWH at .06c
Next 60 KWH at .04c
Next 75 KWH at .03c
Additional KWH at .024c
Minimum Billing $1. per month

Commercial Light Rates
First 12 KWA for $1.00
Next 138 KWH at .06c
Next 300 KWA at .04c
Additional KWH at .03c
Minimum Billing $1. per month
5% added if not paid on or before 10th day of month.

Section 6.—That, Rules 13 - 14 - 15 - 16 - 17 - 18 - 19 - 20 - 21 - 22 - 23 - 24 - 25 - 26 - 27 - 28 and 29 and all existing amendments thereto promulgated and established by the Public Service Commission of Kentucky, are hereby made a part of this franchise as if copied in full herein, and the purchaser of this franchise, his or its successors and assigns, shall be governed thereby as to all rates and service charged or rendered by them.

Section 7.—That, the purchaser of this franchise shall, before the sale thereof is awarded to him or it, pay to the town of Walton, Kentucky, in addition to the amount bid for the franchise, all costs and expenses incurred by the town in the preparation, publication and sale of this franchise.

This ordinance shall be in full force and effect after its passage and publication as required by law.

Passed by the vote of 4 members of the Board of Trustees of the town of Walton, January 28, 1944.

LADY'S STOMACH WAS LIKE A GAS FACTORY; MEALS TURNED TO GAS

One lady said recently that her stomach used to be like a "gas factory!" That is, when she ate a meal it seemed to turn right into gas. She was always bloated, had awful stomach gas pains, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Now, however, this lady says she is FREE of STOMACH GAS and she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her meals agree with her. No gas or bloating after eating. Headaches and constipation are gone. "Oh! what relief!" states this lady. "Why don't other gas and constipation sufferers get ERB-HELP?"

STAFFORDSBURG

Mrs. L. J. Rapp entertained the Homemakers Club on Thursday, February 3rd. Illness kept some of our most faithful members away. The lesson on saving energy as we do our work was a timely topic in these days of stress and strain. Mrs. Kenney as citizenship chairman gave a talk on racial characteristics of the Chinese and Japanese and a short historical sketch of the two peoples. Mrs. Williams told interesting items from her much enjoyed trip to the Farm and Home Convention. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Chester Rapp, Mrs. Della Williams, Mrs. Jno. Shaw, Mrs.

Lee Faulkner, Mrs. Emil Stein, Mrs. Denver Binder and son Randall and Mrs. Jas. Kenney. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Kenney.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall of Georgetown were the guests of her parents on Sunday.

Mrs. Daisy Richardson, Miss Helen Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Helen Ballinger and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kenney went to hear Rev. Nevil White hold his last service as pastor of Emmanuel Methodist Church in Covington. Rev. White a local boy leaves this week to take up his duties as Supt. of the Barbourville District.

Rev. Cardwell filled his appointment here on Sunday evening, but only a small number attended services.

Mr. and Mrs. Stallcup spent Thursday visiting their daughter in the city.

Mrs. Hanna spent Thursday with the family of her son in Latonia, Jimmy Lee being ill. He is much better at this writing.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Jeb Crowell and I took the bus to town the other day and a friend of ours asked us to go with him to his Club luncheon and hear a prominent college president speak. He made a mighty sensible talk on Peace after the War, pointing out in particular that you can't readjust things after Victory's won just by making law! Most countries, he said, will have to work out their post-war problems themselves. To emphasize his point, he reminded us how we Americans once thought we could keep folks from enjoying a moderate glass of beer, by legislation. And how we got fooled, bad. Jeb and I agreed he was exactly right. You can't cram laws down folks' throats, especially if they interfere with their "rights". From where I sit, moderate folks ought to be able to sit down and enjoy a friendly beverage like beer—with a home-cooked meal, in the company of friends, if they want to. I'm a great believer in moderation.

Joe Marsh

Red Cross Drive To Start In Boone County March 1st

On March 1st the largest Red Cross Drive in history will be started in this country, with a goal of two hundred million dollars. Boone County's quota has been set at $8,700.00, and plans are now being made by the County Chairman, Irvin Rouse, to meet it.

When it is considered that Boone County has about 950 boys in the services, and that if ten dollars were collected for each boy, the quota would be more than obtained, it seems it should be done. Surely Boone County would not want any one of its boys to feel there was not ten dollars worth of interest in him at home.

Last year Boone County's quota was $4,300.00, but because of unprecedented responsibilities, due to the War, our quota is more than doubled. This means each individual subscription must be doubled too. Start now to prepare to meet this obligation.

Among other services, your Red Cross helps servicemen with personal problems, sends food parcels to war prisoners, aids service families and disabled veterans, operates service clubs overseas, recruits Army and Navy nurses, handles emergency messages for servicemen and families, collects life saving blood, provides comforts, cheer and recreation in hospitals, makes surgical dressings, and helps when disaster strikes at home.

Second Lieutenant Clifford L. Surface has graduated from Blackland Flying School, Waco, Texas and is now spending his ten day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Surface, his brothers and sister and other relatives and friends.

The many friends of Dr. H. F. Mann regret to learn of the continued serious illness of his father, E. L. Mann of Crittenden.

E. P. DeMoisey

E. P. DeMoisey, passed away Tuesday night at his home in Covington.

Funeral services will be held Friday, 2 p. m. at the Allison and Rose funeral home in Covington. Mr. DeMoisey was a former resident of Walton, and a brother of Rev. F. DeMoisey.

Model Food Store Purchased By Tom Sebree of Parkersburg, West Virginia.

Mr. Tom Sebree of Parkersburg, W. Va., has purchased the Model Food Store from Mr. Chipman and took possession Monday morning, February 14th.

Mr. Sebree has been with Kroger Stores for the past 15 years. He expects to bring his wife and son to make their home here as soon as a location can be found.

Mrs. Breeden, Elden Clemmons and Bobbie Lee will continue to be employed by Mr. Sebree in the grocery.

Million Dollar Tobacco Crop To Be Discussed

Boone County's 1943 million dollar tobacco crop will be discussed in a meeting at Burlington Friday evening, February 25, at 7:45 P. M., according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Russell Hunt, tobacco specialist from the College, will advise with farmers attending the meetings, on ways and means of securing higher yields and higher quality leaf from the 1944 crop.

The county, the past year, produced more than two million pounds of leaf from approximately 2,350 acres. Growers following some of the new fertilizer and production recommendations the past year produced in excess of a ton of high quality leaf per acre. This is a goal planned by leading farmers cooperating in a number of production demonstrations planned for this year.

The meeting on the 25th will be one of planning for improved practice. All tobacco growers are invited to attend.

Real Estate Changes

Mr. and Mrs. Ott Elliott have purchased the home on Chambers Avenue formerly owned by Mrs. Bess Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer Delker, who are now living in the property bought by Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, expect to move to the John Conrad home on Edwards Ave. So. Walton in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. John Conrad have bought the property on High St. from the Laws estate.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Vest of Locust St. have sold their property to Mr. and Mrs. Z. A. Works of Verona.

Rural Youth Day To Be Held At Florence School

This, and following articles, which will be in the news weekly for the next several weeks, will be addressed especially to the Youth of Boone County. We hope that any parents who read this article will call attention to it to their children who are 12 years of age or older.

Realizing that the world of tomorrow will be run by the young people of today, it is the sincere desire of many leaders of this County that we give to the youth of this County all the advantages possible, both spiritual and material. Realizing also that all material gain and wealth and prosperity comes from the earth, which is the Lord's, there must be a direct connection between things spiritual and things material. In order to create this feeling of mutual understanding, fellowship, and unity among the young people of our County, a number of the leaders of the County are endeavoring on Saturday, March 25th, to gather all the young people of this County together at the Florence School beginning at 9:30 in the morning, for the purpose of holding a Rural Youth Conference, at which time we will discuss the following subjects under competent and trained leadership:

1. The Spiritual, Cultural, and Physical advantages of living on a Farm.
2. The Priceless Heritage of the Farm Youth.
3. Rural Life versus City Life.
4. Cooperation of Federal and State Agriculture Agencies as a means to a Democratic Way of Life.
5. Means toward a Good and Happy Life on the Farm.
6. Conservation and Wild Life.
7. What the Farm Youth Needs and Wants.

Under these headings each young person will have opportunity to express himself or herself as to what they feel would be the best solution to the subject.

We ask for sincere cooperation of every organization in our County,—the Church, the 4-H Clubs, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Reserves, the High-Y, the Parent-Teacher Associations, the Home-Makers Clubs, the Utopia Club, the Schools, and all other organizations that are interested in giving our Youth a better understanding and encouragement in facing the world of tomorrow. Let us not forget the date—Saturday, March 25, the time 9:30 A. M., the place, Florence School.

Young folks—this is for you! The cost—nothing. So let's talk it up.

William Theodore Webster

William Theodore Webster passed away at the home of his sister, Mrs. Claudia Scholter, Walton Ky., Friday, February 11th after a long illness.

Services were conducted from Chambers and Grubbs funeral home Sunday, February 13th at 2 p. m. with Rev. A. K. Johnson in charge of the services. A solo was rendered by Mr. Barnes, accompanied at the piano by the Olivia Willis. Burial was in the Walton Cemetery.

Mr. Webster is survived by his mother, Mrs. Fannie Webster of Independence; four sisters, Mrs. Claudia Scholter, Walton; Mrs. Mary Hogan, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Lulu Sturgeon, Covington, Ky.; and Mrs. Martha Redmond, Covington, Ky.; three brothers, Harvey Webster, Crittenden, Ky.; Foster Webster, Independence, Ky.; and Arney Webster, Suman, Ind.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the arrangements.

William Gideon Kite

William Gideon Kite, widely known resident and civic leader of Waterloo, Ky., died at his home Wednesday, February 9th, of a heart attack. Mr. Kite, who was 70 years old, was a director of the Citizens Deposit Bank of Grant, Ky.

He was born and had lived all his life in Boone County. For a number of years he ran a general merchandising business which was founded in 1866 by his father, a Captain in the United States Cavalry during the Civil War.

Mr. Kite, with his son-in-law, O. W. Purdy, developed a fine herd of registered Jersey cattle. He was a leader in the 4-H Club movement and started many farmers on the road to producing better milk and cattle.

Mr. Kite was an elder of the First Christian Church of Bellevue.

He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Jeanette Lea Purdy, and her four children, Jean Keyes, Nellie Johanna, Leta Elizabeth and Byron David Purdy.

Funeral services were held at 11 o'clock Saturday at First Christian Church, Bellevue. Rev. Samuel Hamilton was in charge of the services. Burial was in the family cemetery at Burlington, Ky.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Boone County 4-H Home Economic Projects Organized

Organization of 4-H Home Economics projects for 1944 is almost completed, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Eleven 4-H clubs have groups of girls taking clothing, foods, canning and labor projects. Girls in four clubs plan to take room improvement.

Clothing classes have been started in Grant, Verona, Hamilton and Petersburg. Adult leaders selected by the local club will meet weekly with project groups until the close of school.

Any girl between the ages of 9 and 21 may take one or more 4-H projects. The only requirements of membership are that members complete their project and turn in some type of simple written reports at the end of the 4-H year.

Following are club and leaders who have completed their organization: Grant, True Blues—Mrs. Lillian Scott, Maudie Hinch, Arthur, Mrs. Martha Wolfe, Mrs. Laura Frances Rogers, Mrs. Edw. Rogers and Mrs. Allen Rogers; Hamilton—Mrs. J. C. Acre, Petersburg—Mrs. George Jarboe and Mrs. Hazel White; Verona—Mrs. Walter Kling, Mrs. Lelia Wasson and Mrs. Elena Hamilton; and Constance—Mrs. Thomas Kenyon.

Mr. Geo. P. Nicholson and Mr. Mark Benson were in Ft. Thomas Monday to see their grandson, Charles Benson who was ill in the Army Hospital. Pfc. Benson is stationed in California and was home on a furlough, visiting his wife, daughter Kerene Sue, his mother, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Benson, and other relatives when taken sick. He is improving nicely and expects to return to California.

LETTER FROM NEW GUINEA

The following interesting letter was received by Mrs. Robert G. Robinson of Walton Rural Route 2, from her nephew, Pfc. Walter E. Bugge who is stationed somewhere in New Guinea.

22 January 1944

My Dear Aunt,
Will try to write a few lines this evening to let you know that I am in excellent health and getting along O. K. Hope his finds you and the family well. I suppose you're having lots of cold weather these days. As for the weather here, it's terrific! I don't know what I'll do if it gets any warmer here as I'm down to my "shorts" now! Oh well, I can't complain too much, as this is a lot better than some of the cold climates I've been in. At least I'm not bothered with colds and coughs.

There's hardly any news to write about this time so will try to tell you about the Natives, their customs and the jungle in general.

I know of two kinds of natives; the Melanesians—literally, "black islanders" and the Papuans (from a Malay word meaning "woolly haired"). The Melanesians are generally taller, and also lighter in color, more bushy haired, and less heavily featured than the Papuans. The Papuans are often very short, some actually of pygmy size.

A lot of people think the islanders are cannibals and head-hunters, but they're not—that is, unless you go deep into some of the remotest mountains and swamps. The natives look pretty wild in some places, but most of them are accustomed to government supervision. Many of their old customs remain, of course—some are by no means convinced that our ways are better than theirs. Their life is still a strange mixture of primitiveness and civilization.

Some groups of natives are trustworthy and dependable, others have a tradition of double talk and deception in dealing with outsiders. Some are clean; some are dirty. Some work hard; others

Protein Feed Scheduled For Delivery

Boone County farmers are scheduled to receive their first cottonseed meal this week, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The carload of approximately thirty tons of cottonseed meal was received by forty farmers, and marks the first carload of protein feeds available to local farmers since the start of the winter feeding period. A part of the feed was received about two months ago.

Protein feeds in the form of soybean meal, cottonseed meal and tankage have not been available on local markets for many months. The present delivery is scheduled thru the County AAA Committee from allotments made by the War Food Administration. Farmers who may need additional protein concentrates should file their orders with the county AAA Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ashcraft attended the funeral of Mr. Chester Roland of Owenton, Ky. Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Roland was Superintendent of the Owen County Jail. A splendid young man of only 34 years. He died suddenly of double pneumonia while on the way to the hospital in Lexington.

Lute Bradford will be the auctioneer.

Boone County Exceeds Quota In 4th Bond Drive

At the close of business last Friday night, (Saturday being a holiday) total subscriptions to the Fourth War Loan Drive amounted to $384,066.25, which was approximately $136.00 short of Boone County's quota of $500,000, with Beaver, Berry, Burlington, Petersburg and Hebron-Bullittsville announcing over the top.

All day long Monday and Tuesday of this week the telephone wires were kept busy urging the precinct chairmen and their workers to make an extra effort to raise this shortage. Walton, Florence and Constance announced Tuesday that their quotas had been raised and with some over subscription in many precincts it can be stated that all precincts are over the top and Boone County again met the "Call of our Country".

When the news went out Monday morning that Boone County was short $136,000 of its quota, several business firms of Covington, who are interested in Boone County and who receive business from this section, allocated over $50,000 of their subscription to this county just in case we needed it. The County Chairman also re-allocated a wire from Louisville stating that they had allocated $15,000 to us and were prepared to give us more if we needed it in raising our quota. While it developed that we did not need this money, it was a magnificent gesture on the part of these men who feel an interest in Boone County and its people. By these outside allocations it is now predicted that our County's quota will be exceeded by close to $100,000.

A more detailed report will appear in this paper next week.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lee Sleet, wife of Mr. C. C. Sleet of South Walton were conducted Friday, February 11th, at 11 o'clock at Hughes Chapel, where she was a faithful member since childhood, having lived in that neighborhood all of her life until she moved to Walton.

Rev. Simmerman, a former pastor was in charge of the services, assisted by Rev. Godbey, the pastor, Rev. Dearing and Rev. Bedinger of Walton. Rev. and Mrs. Andrew of the Walton Christian Church sang a beautiful duet, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Olivia Willis.

Burial was in the church cemetery.

She is survived by her devoted husband and loving daughter, Rebecca, teacher in Walton High School and three sisters, Mrs. Amelia Britt, Covington; Mrs. Arl Bedinger, Walton and Mrs. Ann Hind, Chicago; other relatives and a host of friends.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

Short Feed Supply Predicted By Specialist

L. A. Vennes, market specialist from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, is expected to meet in Burlington Wednesday, February 9, to expect less feed per head of livestock in 1944 and 1945 unless good crops are produced this year. Livestock numbers are at record highs and the surplus feed supplies of former years are practically exhausted.

Boone County farmers normally import feed and should make every effort this year to produce the maximum amount of feed needed for their livestock. This may mean considerable adjustment in livestock numbers on some farms.

Dennis Welch, sheep salesman and Mr. Whistler of the Producers Cooperative Livestock Association outlined livestock marketing problems of the Cincinnati Livestock Market in recent months. A special committee was appointed to represent the county at the Cooperative Livestock Marketing meeting in Cincinnati on February 17th.

IT IS not necessary to make our economies so dull that they depress everyone. Let's make them gay and attractive to give us a lift and a bit of a challenge too. This old rocker is an example.

A saw and a wood chisel were used for removing projections and rockers. An old quilt was found for padding and the feathers from an old bolster were packed into a thick seat cushion to raise the seat which has been lowered by removing the rockers. This required a yard and a quarter of ticking. Four and one-half yards of inexpensive chintz in a bold, modern pattern did the rest.

With synthetic tires about to be in general use, experts emphasize again that speed is important in determining tire mileage. The legal limit of 35 m.p.h. has been found to be the best mileage conserving with synthetic tires. It is with tires of crude rubber.

Tire cords lose elasticity as they grow older, which accounts for the blowouts when a well-worn tire strikes a rough spot in the road.

War-time regulations are saving nearly 200 million tires a year for the country's highway transportation system. Converted into tires, this conserved mileage means a lot to the rubber program.

FOOD AND THE WAR

Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes called a meeting of the War Mobilization committee the other day to discuss the vital question of food for 1944. In preparation for the meeting, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones had his staff prepare a lengthy report on food prices, farm labor, machinery and other phases of the farm problem.

This report was distributed before the meeting so that members of the War Mobilization committee would have time to study it, but it soon became apparent that general Judge Jones had not read carefully his own report—at all.

When he began to talk about the drastic need of farm machinery and the restrictions on its production, WPB's Donald Nelson quickly picked him up. Obviously, Nelson had facts of his own to refute it. He pointed out that the only thing getting a higher priority than farm machinery on the war production schedule was the landing craft program, and that the President had ordered landing barges produced ahead of everything else.

"You wouldn't put farm machinery ahead of landing barges, would you?" asked Nelson.

"Well, it won't do 'em any good to land if they haven't got food," replied Jones.

Undersecretary of War Patterson also tangled briefly with Jones over farm deferments. Patterson pointed out that there were 750,000 boys between 18 and 21 with permanent farm deferments because they were farmers.

"This is greater than all the other deferments of the entire country," said the undersecretary of war, adding that, while agriculture should be in a preferred position, it should not be a "haven for draft dodgers."

HOG MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hog farmers all over the country are dizzy over conflicting directives from Washington. A farmer turns on his radio one morning and learns that Washington wants him to slaughter his hogs.

Farmers are thinking of staging a little satire to express their feelings. Entitled "Make Up Your Mind, Washington," it has the following chorus:

"How can a man know what you mean,
Whether a hog shall be fat or lean?
Make up your mind and stick to that,
Whether a hog shall be lean or fat!"

However, the situation is not entirely the fault of the bureaucrats. In normal times, 200 pounds is a good average weight for hogs. The American market likes its bacon lean. But for lend-lease purposes, extra production was required, especially to supply lard for the Soviet Union.

So farmers were implored to feed to heavy weights. Came the corn shortage, and farmers were implored to stop feeding their hogs, and release the corn for shipment to dairy and poultry areas. Each change was implemented by shifts in the federal price supports.

But the hog run became phenomenal. January's slaughter broke all records. Hogs became a glut on the market. Farmers couldn't get near the slaughter houses. They had to keep on feeding. Hogs automatically got heavier, at the rate of 15 pounds a week.

But if they got over 300 pounds, they passed out of the support level, and the packers docked them. Fearing to lose money, farmers jammed their hogs into market channels, and the run became chaotic.

So now Washington has swung back again, and is inviting farmers to feed to heavier weights. The support price has been extended to 350 pounds.

Note: Probably no decision of War Food administration was made with greater reluctance, and the support price will be reduced again as soon as the hog run tapers off.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington real estate agents are evading price ceilings by requiring new tenants to decorate apartments at their own expense. "To heck 'em in their expense," a Washington driver called out. "Push to the back, folks, and get together like you were in church."

JESUS TEACHES TRUE GREATNESS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:33-35; 10:13-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."—Mark 10:45.

Ambition to be great is not wrong—provided one has a proper conception of greatness, and seeks it in a right way. Every one of us should be our very best, not for selfish reasons, but for God's glory. The disciples were earnest and eager to have a place of honor with the Lord in glory, but even in that holy purpose they became selfish and argumentative. Jesus gives several marks of a truly great man.

Greatness Means Being—
I. Not First, but Last (9:33-35).
The way of the world is to seek the place of "No. 1 man"—to be looked up to, honored, and served by all. True greatness takes the last place, the place of a servant; and to God regards that as the first place.

It is not a question of timid diffidence, or self-effacement, but a willingness to take the humble place in order to serve all.

II. Not Proud, but Humble (9:35, 37).
"Great" people of this world have no time for children. Let them be cared for by servants, teachers, anyone at all, but not by their "distinguished" parents.

But Jesus said that the one who set aside human pride and received a child with humility of heart and mind, in His name, He is there! The Lord who gave them life—spiritual as well as physical—and is interested in them; in fact, He is with them and hears when we receive them in His name. He is there!

III. Not Exclusive, but Co-operative (9:38, 39).

John, quick to apprehend spiritual truth, saw in the teaching of Christ on the subject of children the condemnation of something he had done. The man who casts out demons, or who gives the disciple of Jesus a sign of power in His name—that is, with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our group or circle, but he may not speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ, we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. You "and I" may not like one another's appearance, or voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

IV. Not Important, but Approachable (9:38, 39).
Some who think they are great, pride themselves on being hard to reach—protected from the rabble and servants.

The disciples had built up such an idea of the importance of Christ in their own minds. He had never given them any ground for it either by word or deed.

So the man who is truly great follows in the Master's footsteps. He is approachable, kind, has time for simple folk and little children. If that isn't true of a man he is not great—no matter what he may think of himself or what others may say about him.

V. Not a Supervisor, but a Servant (10:42-44).
Christianity is not organized after the manner of secular government (v. 43). Much of the mischief that has come to pass in the church is the result of "running the church" as an organization, when it should be allowed to develop as a living organism.

The way up is down. That is always true in the spiritual realm. The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, yes, to give His very life (v. 45). Shall not those who bear His name walk the same path of humble self-denial?

Anyone who observes with even a little care knows that the church of Jesus Christ is hindered most seriously by the presence of pride and selfish ambition. Some people will not work unless they can rule.

Are there then no Christians who will serve the Lord? Yes, praise His name, there are many, and wherever they are found they are the salt of the earth.

VI. Not Unselfish, but Sacrificial (10:45).
The world is full of people who want to be served. Their little personalities swell with pride and pleasure if someone else cringes and bows, and serves.

There is nothing commendable about being served. The great and good thing is to serve.

The Son of man—Himself the Lord of glory, the One who might have called legions of angels to do His will—came "not to be ministered unto but to minister." His service meant going about doing good even when He was exhausted and worn.

But it meant far more than that, for it took Him to the cross where He gave His life a ransom for us. Are we ready to learn of Him?

I WAS CONSTIPATED FOR MANY YEARS!

Now I'm "Regular" Every Morning!

Constipated? Then here's an unsolicited offer you'll want to read. "I'd been troubled with common constipation for many years. I was taking laxatives and pills all the time, and feeling very weak and run down. I'm a regular, natural movement every morning, which helps me feel my best!" Mr. Samuel D. Blank, 283 East 11th Street, Brooklyn, New York.

What is this amazing magic of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANT? Scientists say it's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANT can really "get at" a common cause of constipation—namely, lack of sufficient "cellulose" elements in the diet. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANT is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements, which help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANT is not a purgative! Doesn't work by sweeping or irritating a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If you have constipation of this kind, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRANT or several ALL-BRANT muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find lasting relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRANT, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

The L&N, also a product of private and Free Enterprise, has contributed mightily in developing southern coal fields, much to the betterment of the Nation, particularly the South. More than half of the L&N's traffic is coal, requiring 37,000 coal cars costing 75 million dollars to transport. And these are but a part of the necessary facilities.

The L&N maintains an organization of experts to assist in opening new coal fields, to render advice on mining operations and to aid both producer and consumer as to the proper selection and efficient use of coal. Inquiries of the general office of the L&N at Louisville, Ky., are invited.

appear to be lazy—until you discover what they think is worth working for.

Dealing with the natives calls for as much local knowledge as possible. This, a person has to pick up on the spot, either by personal contacts with them or through white people who know them well. Even though the natives sometimes seem backward and dumb to us, they are often astounded by our ignorance of appreciating their customs.

Settlements of the native islanders are sometimes perched on piles out in the sea, or placed on offshore sandbanks. These are the salt-water people, whose babies often learn to swim before they learn to walk. Other native settlements are frequently hidden deep in the jungle. The mountain peoples usually place their villages on crags or ridges where guards can look over the country and the steep slopes can easily be defended. Sometimes villages are built up on bamboo stilts or living fences of the twisted aerial roots of banyan trees. Their huts are built so closely together that it looks like one large house.

Most parts of the island is covered with dense rain forest—hot steamy jungle, with eerie green twilight. In drier places, however, there are sometimes stretches of open grassland or savannah. This tropical grass, usually coarse and from 4 to 6 feet high, in the distance looks like wheat. Natives often burn the grasslands as a method of hunting wild game.

The rain forest, with its tall trees, occasional vivid flowers, tangled lianas, and interlocking maze of roots, may seem lifeless at times but it doesn't take a person long to find out that it's teeming with life.

The islands, like Australia, have various kinds of marsupials, that is, pouched animals. There are several kinds of small kangaroos, none of them more than 3 feet high. The commonest ones are tree climbers. There are many types of bats, including the giant flying foxes, fruit-eaters with a four foot wing spread. Rats are plentiful too, some over 2 feet long.

The most striking creatures in this region are the birds. Their voices in the early morning sound like a regular jazz band. There are hundreds of kinds ranging from the big black flightless cassowary, 4 and 5 feet high, whose kick is as dangerous as a stallion's to the beautiful yellow and red plumed birds of Paradise. The feathers of the Paradise birds were once the basis of a wealthy trade, until the government stopped the killing of them to save them from extinction. Around sundown, flocks of noisy white cockatoos circle over roosting trees. There are dozens of kinds of parrots and pigeons. Here in New Guinea, lives the beautiful crowned pigeon, a smoky-gray bird as big as a small turkey and delicious to eat. The megapode or brush turkey, also good eating, buries its eggs in large hillocks of earth.

There are many varieties of snakes, including poisonous kinds. We are warned to be especially careful of sea snakes, usually banded yellow and black. Incidentally, I saw one a few weeks ago. It was about 6 feet long. Some of the lizards look ugly, but are harmless.

Crocodiles of two kinds are fairly common. One is a small freshwater type that lives well up the river. It is considered harmless by the natives. The other is a big brute that likes the brackish water of river mouths, and is feared by the natives.

Most places are alive with ants, cockroaches, flies, mosquitoes, wasps, sand flies and other bugs. Scorpions and centipedes may get into our shoes at night so we usually lay them upside down at night.

Island foods are somewhat familiar to us, such as coconuts, sweet-potatoes, bananas, and pineapples. In place of our wheat and potatoes, most of the natives use taro and yams. Taro is the bulbous root of a kind of lily, and is usually a light purple when cooked. The yam is like a giant potato. Both of these may be eaten roasted or steamed. Sugar cane is widely grown and, incidentally, New Guinea is the original home of this plant. Pigs and chickens can often be bought at the native villages. Pigs are particularly valuable to the natives as they are used in native feasts and ceremonies and sometimes in religious sacrifices.

Here's a few things that makes trouble with the natives: Interfering with native women; entering sacred places without permission; and touching sacred things; molesting gardens, orchards, and interfering with pigs; taking goods owned by natives with compensation; striking or sweating at natives; leaving their homes out of curiosity; and making a lavish display of articles valued by natives.

Well I guess you're either bored or asleep so will close. If you would like for me to write more, let me know and I'll try to take up something that I think would be interesting to tell. Lots of love to you and all the family.

Your loving nephew,
Walter Jr.

UNION

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mitchell and son were in Warsaw last Wednesday.

The W. M. S. of Union Baptist Church called on Rev. Oscar Huey and wife at their home on Lloyd Avenue, Florence, last Wednesday afternoon. Hymns were sung and refreshments were served following a brief but inspirational talk by Rev. Huey on "Knowing One's Self, Heart and Soul." Through all his years of suffering Rev. Huey has remained a devout Christian and teaches all to believe that Gods Will Be Done. His scores of friends and relatives are praying he will soon be given strength to be out and about his Lords work again.

Mrs. Elmer Moe entertained her bridge club last Thursday evening.

Miss Nannie Burkett and Roy J. Burkett were calling on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mitchell last Monday evening.

Mr. Omer Snow of Long Branch Road was visiting his nephew, W. S. Friend and family on Friday.

Mrs. J. A. Huey was visiting relatives in Cincinnati last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Merlith Sheets and daughter were visiting his mother, Mrs. Lucy Sheets last Sunday.

DO YOU WANT HEAVY MOTOR TRUCKING TO CONTINUE AFTER THE WAR?

TO HELP the war effort, Kentucky suspended its law which limits to 18,000 pounds the gross weight of trucks using the State highways. NOW, the trucking interests want the Legislature to pass a law permitting trucks, weighing 40,000 pounds, to use the principal State highways AFTER the war. These trucks, once admitted, could not be kept off the lightly constructed county roads.

Under the present law when the war emergency ends, the 18,000-pound truck weight limit will again become effective. This law SHOULD NOT BE CHANGED NOW because:

1. It does not interfere with the war effort, since trucks weighing 40,000 pounds will be allowed to operate during the war emergency.

2. Highways and bridges are being pounded to pieces. How can we tell now what condition they will be in after the war, or how much money will then be available to rebuild and maintain them?

3. Trucking companies and oil firms are pocketing the added profits from these wartime concessions, for the rates charged shippers and the price of gasoline have not been reduced.

4. It is unfair to permit these interests to continue after the war to capitalize the sacrifices the public is making now.

5. The bigger trucks mean higher cost of road maintenance and greater menace to the traveling public.

Why There Should Be A "Fair Field and No Favors" Between Competing Carriers

1. The railroads in Kentucky pay each year more than $1,000,000 for maintenance of county roads, bridges and city streets. Total gasoline, license and weight taxes paid by common and contract carrier trucks are not more than $650,000 in a normal year.

2. For support of our schools the railroads pay in taxes more than $2,500,000 a year. Common carrier trucks are paying only about $15,000 in school taxes.

3. Annual railroad property taxes in Kentucky are more than $5,000,000. Compare this with only about $35,000 property taxes paid by common carrier trucks.

4. Kentucky is one of few states having no highway debt. Some states have nearly bankrupted themselves in a futile effort to maintain roads for oversize trucks. Nine Southern states owe $750,000,000 on road bonds.

5. It was officially estimated in 1942 that Kentucky's needs for road reconstruction and relocation by 1950 would be $218,000,000 if the State highways (about 17% of all roads in the State) are to be brought up to standards adequate for the heavy trucks.

If You Are Opposed to the "Big Truck" Bill, Ask Your State Senator and Representative To Vote Against Any Such Legislation

The Railroads Are Presenting This Matter To You Because Their Interest and That of the General Public Are Relatively the Same

Sunday School each Sunday morning, a welcome is extended to everyone.

PROTECT OUR HIGHWAYS

We believe it would be a mistake for the Legislature now to change the Kentucky law which provides that after the war the 18,000-pound weight limit on trucks using the State Highways would again become effective.

In order to help the war effort, Kentucky suspended the law limiting to 18,000 pounds the gross weight of trucks using the highways. As a result, 40,000-pound trucks in use are seriously damaging the highways and bridges all over the State.

In our opinion, such vehicles are too large for Kentucky roads, not only because they rapidly destroy the highways but also because they menace all other traffic.

Trucking interests and oil companies now are richly profiting from use of the roads. In order to accommodate heavy truck traffic, the highways must be made wider and built more heavily. Why should the public foot the bill?

It to get an increase in truck weights truck license fees increased, it will probably result in the little trucks paying most of the price for the increase. But the little trucks would be hurt rather than helped by increasing the permitted weights.

Incidentally, how much do the trucking interests contribute toward maintenance of our present highway system? In a normal year the total gasoline, license and weight taxes add up to less than $860,000, according to public records. In comparison, railroads in Kentucky pay over $1,000,000 for roads, bridges and city streets.

Trucking interests pay school taxes of about $15,000, while the railroads pay $2,500,000, the Kentucky Railroad Association says.

Trucking property taxes total $35,000, against railroad property taxes of $5,000,000.

Kentucky is one of a few states not burdened today with a highway debt. Several states have nearly gone bankrupt in a futile effort to maintain roads for heavy trucks. It would be foolish and dangerous for Kentucky to make the same mistake.

INDEPENDENCE R. R.

The many friends of Mr. Lee Faulkner are sorry to learn he is ill at his home with typhoid, we wish him a speedy recovery.

Quite a few people of this community have the grip and some very severe colds. We have been having some real winter the past few days, and we sure feel it after the warm spring weather.

Our Sunday School fell short of attendance Sunday morning.

Mrs. Geo. Klein called on her daughter, Mrs. Chester Ballanger Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Katherine Wharton of Dayton, Ohio is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney.

Miss Wavelyn Riley spent the day Sunday with Miss Wanda Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rapp called on Mr. and Mrs. Emil Stein Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stephens and children of Independence spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Attwood Hoffman.

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR BUS RIDERS'

I'm no fortune teller, but I don't need a crystal ball to predict that a heap of guys in uniform will be makin' joy rides by bus when they get back in civvies. You're learnin' from war travel how much more you see by bus, how lit-de it costs to ride, and how Greyhound covers the country just like a hair net covers a gal's permanent wave. We're crowded now, but are lookin' forward to makin' travelers happy again when you chaps mop up the Axis.

ONE ITEM IN YOUR WARTIME BUDGET...

-- that still sells at pre-war prices!

Other wartime living costs have risen sharply, but electricity is one item in the household budget that is as cheap now as it was at the outbreak of war.

During the past 15 years, regardless of the ups and downs of other prices, the cost of electricity has followed a steady downward trend. Though the average monthly bill has remained about the same, due to increased use of lights and appliances, the average customer of this company is getting about twice as much electricity for his money now as he did 15 years ago.

Today, more than ever, electricity is your biggest bargain!

appetite. The housewife needs to spend more thought during the late winter in planning meals that are both nutritious and pleasing at the same time, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Following are suggestions made by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington.

Once eggs are in the kitchen, it is up to the cook to give a good egg a break—a chance to do its best for food flavor and value. A good egg offers tops among proteins for tissue building and repair, iron for red blood cells, phosphorus and other minerals, good quality fat and three vitamin B's plus vitamins A and D in varying amounts, depending on what the hen was fed.

Three home storage pointers should be followed: (1) Don't wash eggs until ready to use them, (2) Speed eggs to the refrigerator or other cold place without delay, and (3) Store eggs away from strong-smelling foods.

At cooking time, keep in mind that an egg toughens at high and prolonged heat.

While eggs are plentiful, homemakers can again turn their cooking talents to fluffy egg treats for the family such as sponge cake, meringue, and souffles. The temperature of the egg affects the whipping of the white and separation of white from yolk. A chilly egg just out of the refrigerator separates most easily because the white is firm and the yolk less likely to break, but the white whips best after the egg has warmed up to "room temperature." Whites should be whipped stiff but not dry, or until the white will hold up in a soft peak and looks glossy. Salt will help egg whites hold their stiffness. A pinch of salt or cream of tartar added at the start of whipping will give the foam greater volume and stability. Even a small particle of fat on egg beater or egg yolk in the white will prevent it from beating stiff.

Quick Vegetable Soup
Soup for six made with savory vegetables and half pound of beef, cook in just 40 minutes. What makes it quick is using ground beef instead of simmering meat slowly to make stock. Ingredients: one half pound ground beef; one tablespoon fat; one half cup chopped onion; two teaspoons salt; one fourth teaspoon pepper; one bayleaf; six cups water; one cup green beans (fresh or canned); one cup sliced carrots; two cups medium chopped cabbage; one half cup chopped celery and leaves; three and one half cups tomatoes. How to Make: Brown ground beef in fat. Add onion, cook 3 minutes. Add salt, pepper, bayleaf, celery and leaves, water, green beans (if fresh), carrots, cabbage. Cover, cook until vegetables are tender. Add tomatoes and green beans if canned, the last 15 minutes of cooking. Making of this vegetable soup can be varied by substituting vegetables on hand.

Melasses
Old time cooks generally used more melasses in their cooking than is used today. Several old melasses favorites have been almost forgotten. One is melasses sauce for hot puddings, which was made with melasses, lemon juice, salt and butter, and tasted something like the more familiar butterscotch sauce. Another old-timer was melasses pie which had a cornstarch custard filling. Indian Pudding is a slow baked combination of cornmeal, melasses ginger and salt. Have you tried gingerbread waffles served with applesauce?

Real Estate News

Forest S. Thompson, Proprietor of The Mutual Realty Company, Williamstown, Kentucky, reports the sale of the George Griffith farm located on Route 36 or Stewartville Road and in the edge of Williamstown, Ky. to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kenney, Mt. Zion, Grant County, Kentucky.

This farm contains 100 acres of highly improved land, having an ultra-modern Stone House and many other good improvements. It is a very popular farm for it has changed hands many times in the last few years at popular prices. Mr. and Mrs. Kenney is to be congratulated on obtaining such a nice home.

Any news from home is bound to please our soldiers and our sailors but the news they want to have most is the news from our production front and news that we are winning our fight against inflation by our savings and investment in War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

"There's a Fighting Fleet, too!"

RIGHT you are, Sailor! Fighting fleets are rolling on the Southern Railway these days!

Fleets of freight trains...loaded with guns, jeeps, tanks, planes, and munitions of every sort...with the raw materials to make more...with food, clothes, coal and oil...with everything needed by a nation at war.

Fleets of passenger trains...carrying troops in solid trainloads toward the war fronts...men and women in uniform, going back home on precious furlough trips...government officials and civilians traveling on essential war business.

Yes, these are fighting fleets...fighting the vital home-front battle of transportation. And winning it, too!

Thanks to the loyal cooperation of our shippers and the friendly understanding of our patrons, the Southern's trains are playing an important part in speeding the day of Victory.

When Peace comes, these same fleets of freight and passenger trains will "Serve the South" by hauling the rich commerce of a greater, stronger Southland...more efficiently than ever before because of the priceless lessons we're learning today.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

That must've been a mighty interesting party they gave in Louisville, a while back, for the folks that are running the different rationing boards.

It's a thankless job, naturally. Why a man might even have to turn down his best friends when they want a few extra points or something!

But they've done a mighty fine job—fair and square—and our folks appreciate their unselfish efforts to give everybody an even break.

People seem to understand that fair rationing is all for the nation's best interests.

It's a kind of Self-Regulation program like the brewers—the wholesale and retail beer dealers—are carrying on.

They are seeing that the laws of Kentucky governing the sale of malt beverages are enforced in the letter and the spirit—that retail outlets maintain high standards of operation.

From where I sit that, too, is a far-sighted piece of work in the public interest.

Meetings Planned To Sign Up 1944 A. C. Farm Plans

Meetings have been scheduled in all communities, to sign up the 1944 A. C. Farm Plans.

The 1944 Farm Plans include a report of crops and livestock raised in 1943 and intended to be raised in 1944. The soil-building practices that will be carried out in 1944, will be listed and orders for limestone and phosphate will be taken.

The supply of phosphate is limited to about one-fourth the amount of last year. The supply of limestone has increased over last year, and is available as grant of aid. There has been some increase in the 1944 soil building allowance.

Cooperators are urged to attend these meetings, so that this important work can be done at an early date.

The schedule of meetings is as follows: Beaver, Wed., Feb. 23 at 8:00 p. m.; Sleet's Store; Petersburg, Thurs., Feb. 24 at the Bank; Grant, Fri., Feb. 25 at the Bank; Verona, Sat., Feb. 26 at the Bank; Hamilton, Mon., Feb. 28 at the School; Walton, Tues., Feb. 29 Bank Basement; Florence, Wed., Mar. 1 at the Bank; Hebron & Constance, Thurs., Mar. 2 at the Bank; Burlington, Fri., Mar. 3 at A. C. Office; Union, Sat., Mar. 4 at the Bank.

All meetings will start at 9:00 a. m. and close at 3:30 p. m. (C. W. T.).

New Furniture Store

Covington has a new furniture store, the Madison Furniture Store having opened for business this week, occupying two large rooms at 432 and 434 Madison Avenue.

The store is under the management of a widely experienced furniture man, who promises a line of new and better-grade clean furniture at reasonable prices. This issue of The Advertiser carries an opening announcement of this new enterprise.

WASTE PAPER REMINDER

"Keep this publication." Do not burn or destroy it. Sell it or give it to a salvage organization or a charity. It is needed for victory.

Kenton County Tobacco Growers To Study Production Problems.

Mr. Russell Hunt, Field Agent in Agronomy and tobacco specialist, from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington will meet with Kenton County tobacco growers to study production problems for 1944.

Meeting to be held at Independence Court House Friday, February 25th at 1:30 p. m. Central War Time.

Tobacco Plant Bed Management, Control of Wildfire and Angular Leaf Spot in Tobacco, the use of fertilizers, root-resistant varieties and other timely information on the production of burley tobacco will be discussed by Mr. Hunt at the meeting according to County Agent, C. A. Wicklund.

Miss Wallie Morgan Seriously Ill at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

The many friends of Miss Wallie Morgan of Nicholson regret to learn that she is seriously ill in the St. Elizabeth Hospital in Covington.

Miss Morgan has been a patient sufferer for many years, confined most of the time to her bed. A lovely christian character who has many friends throughout this community. She has written the Nicholson news for the Advertiser for many years.

Mrs. Laura Morris of Phoenix Hotel is improving at this writing, she has been real sick.

Col. S. W. Waterhouse

Col. S. W. Waterhouse, U. S. Army Medical Corps, Scarsdale, N. Y. died February 19, 1944, in Palm Beach, Florida, with a heart attack.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Marie Waterhouse and two sisters, Mrs. R. O. Hughs and Mrs. D. E. Bedinger.

Home-Warming Party

The Maithland L. Baker's home at Morning View was the scene of a lovely home-warming on Saturday night when a number of Verona friends surprised the Bakers. After the good wishes were extended and the gifts opened, a "switch-in" supper was greatly enjoyed by the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Baker and Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Walter King, Mildred and David; Mr. and Mrs. James Pennington, Jean, Betty and Marvin; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin L. Wasson; Mr. and Mrs. Will Waller, Marion and Billy; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wilson.

Boone County Utopia Recreation Program Success

The "Special recreation program sponsored by the Boone County Utopia Club at Burlington last Thursday evening was attended by more than sixty people. The program was considered a full success by all attending.

Rural supervised recreation among the older youth is considered one of the important needs, according to the Utopia Club members and many of our local leaders.

The folk games which featured an important part of the Thursday evening meeting are only one phase of a well rounded recreation program. Basketball, baseball and the many other community and county contests are all important phases of the work hard and play hard recreation program that help build strong community and county pride and spirit.

The Utopia Club plans to sponsor a second recreation program featuring many of the old fashioned folk games at their Utopia Club meeting to be held Thursday, April 20. The purpose of the club is to train local leaders to develop these programs in their communities. The Club extends a hearty invitation for all who are interested, to attend and to take part in this meeting.

Pvt. Samuel W. Howard, formerly of Fort Bragg, North Carolina is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Howard of North Walton.

Mrs. Lolla Coppage and children of Union were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Berkshire on Wednesday.

Protect Home Cured Meat

An ounce of prevention will save the pounds of cured meat, according to the report given at the Home Cured Meat Club this month. Infested meat causes a great loss in money and ration points to owners of home cured meats. Every pound of meat ruined by insects is the same as giving a pound to the enemy.

Eliminate breeding places of meat-house pests. Brush and scrub thoroughly all places where meat has been stored. Keep insect out of meat storerooms as they can fly and carry mites. All home-cured meat should be cured and wrapped before spring. Wrap each piece separately and securely in heavy greaseproof paper. All folds of paper should be sealed with paste or gummed tape. Wrapped meat should be placed in a closely woven cloth sack and hung in the meat house so that pieces do not touch each other. The exposed side of cut hams and shoulders should be covered with melted paraffine to prevent mold.

Subscriptions In Bond Drive Amount To $586,759.25

Total subscriptions in the 4th War Loan Drive amount to $586,759.25. Of the above amount Boone County citizens subscribed $511,792.25 and outside allocations to Boone County amount to $75,000.00 which makes the grand total of $586,759.25, on a quota of $500,000.00. The drive continues until the 29th of this month for Series E, F and G Bonds. We know the people of this County feel good over this accomplishment and will be ready to do it again when the next drive starts which will probably be in May or June.

The County Chairman desires to express his appreciation for the splendid cooperation given him by the Proctor, Postmen, their workers and the Postmaster. This county in making the above results possible.

Remember the Free Red Cross Rally at Florence School, Monday, February 28 at 8:00 p. m.

This year, with service flags in windows of nearly every home, Red Cross means much more to Americans. As depicted in this reproduction of a 1944 Red Cross War Fund poster, many windows also will display the symbol of participation in the cause of Mercy and Humanity—the Red Cross.

World Day of Prayer To Be Observed February 25th.

Christian women of Walton are cordially invited to a prayer service in the home of Mrs. C. W. W. at 3 p. m. Friday, Feb. 25th. This is in cooperation with all the churches of Walton, and with many churches and communities around the world.

Each of the three churches in Walton will be represented on the program. If you cannot attend in person, offer a prayer wherever you are, for whatever is needful among men today.

E. H. Mann

E. L. Mann, 86, former resident of Piner, Kenton County, where he was prominent in Republican politics died Wednesday night, Feb. 23 at his home in Crittenden, Grant County. Mann at one time served as Kenton County road supervisor and at the time of his death was a member of the Kenton County Fire-Insurance Board. He was a member of Adams Lodge, IOOF, for nearly 50 years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Louise Mann; three daughters, Mrs. F. D. Cooke, Atwood; Mrs. S. S. Rich and Mrs. H. E. Powers, Charleston, W. Va.; three sons, F. W. Mann, East St. Louis; Dr. H. P. Mann, Walton, and E. J. Mann, Charleston, W. Va.; seven grandchildren, Mrs. Virgil Brews, Mrs. William Stewart, Mrs. George Strecker, Capt. Robert E. Cooke, Lt. Wayne A. Rich, Lt. A. Powers and Pfc. Bryce Mann; two stepdaughters, Mrs. H. S. Mann and Mrs. H. W. Craig, and three great-grandchildren.

Services were held Saturday, 11 a. m., at the Goshen Christian Church, Piner, with burial in Independence Cemetery.

Dearing-Walker

The wedding of Sgt. Edward R. Dearing, son of Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing of Walton, who is stationed at Camp Walters, Texas, and Miss Lena Walker of Jackson, Texas, was solemnized at the Army Chapel, February 12th at 7:45 p. m. Sgt. Kluehs was best man and Miss Mary Carter bridesmaid. The wedding party entered from the Chaplains study as the wedding march was being played. A friend in Sgt. Dearing's company sang, "I Love You Truly."

The bride wore a blue and gray suit with white crepe blouse, white gloves and carried a carriage of gardenias. The bridesmaid was dressed in powder blue with pink accessories, and carried American beauty rose buds. The altar was decorated with silver candelabra with white tapers and white gladiolus. After leaving the church a reception was held at the hotel, where several of their friends make their home.

The happy young couple left for a short wedding trip, expecting to make their home near the camp on their return. All good wishes are extended to these fine young folks.

Sam Adams of Aurora, Indiana, formerly of Boone County, has received word of the death of his nephew, Lieut. Randal B. Adams, who was killed while on duty in the Marshalls, he was stationed aboard an Airplane Carrier, and was the only child of Dr. and Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams of Washington, D. C.

The Value Of Getting Together

This is the second of a series of articles leading up to the Rural Youth Conference which is to be held at the Florence School March 25th.

The greatest value that we receive from getting together is the inspiration that comes to us when we meet and mingle with each other. There are no "Self Made Men." While many have had the sense to overcome difficulties in order to attain a certain goal, some one, some time in that person's life gave him the inspiration to fight for that goal.

"There is a time we know not when, A place we know not where That marks the destiny of man, To glory, or despair!"

As a group of young people are brought together, one life may touch another in such a way that the ultimate destiny of one is changed.

If we are to be a happy and wholesome individual, there is the numerous phases of our nature that must be developed. We recognize as the most important of the following: the physical, the mental, the social, and the moral or spiritual. Each of these may be divided into other characteristics that should be developed. We cannot be the person we should be and neglect any of the above parts of human nature. A person may be a physical giant, but if he is not developed mentally he is an undesirable. He may be strong mentally and not developed socially or spiritually, and therefore be an undesirable.

The Youth Rally takes into consideration the complete individual and will strive to weave all of this into one central idea—a happy contented rural life.

Boone County Farmers Grow New Tobacco Variety.

Experiment Station 4-A, a new root-resistant tobacco variety is being grown by a large number of Boone County farmers this year for the first time, according to the County Agent's office. This variety develops few suckers, grows fast, produces a heavy yield and is more root resistant than Experiment Station No. 16, that has been the most popular root-resistant variety grown in the county.

Mr. Russell Hunt, tobacco specialist from the College will discuss the new 41A tobacco variety in a meeting to be held at the County Agent's office in Burlington on this Friday evening, February 25 at 7:45 P. M. Mr. Hunt will also discuss new fertilizing and other leaf production practices that are giving growers the highest incomes. All tobacco growers are invited to attend the meeting.

Red Cross Rally To Be Held At Florence, Feb. 28th

On Monday, February 28, at 8:00 p. m. there will be a County Red Cross Rally in the Florence School. This is free to the public, and a most interesting program has been arranged.

Music will be furnished by the Boone County School Band, and a film, "After Pearl Harbor," will be shown. Mr. T. C. McDaniels, of National Red Cross Headquarters, will give one of his usual inspiring messages, and a record will be played by Service Men, telling the value of the Red Cross to them, will be played.

This will give the public the opportunity to learn why Boone County has been asked to raise $870.00 in the drive starting March 1, and everyone is urged to be present.

No doubt, this meeting will explain more fully than any other medium could, the increased demands on the Red Cross, due to the War, which has made necessary this greatest drive in history. You will become conscious of what this Organization means to Service Men, and will learn more of its functions, which include the securing of blood plasma for use in battle injuries, maintaining field directors and staff members who work among soldiers at home and over seas, operating service clubs, aiding families of Service Men, sending food, clothing and letters to prisoners of war, recruiting Army and Navy nurses, enlisting Nurses Aids, teaching home nursing and first aid, making surgical dressings, and many other benefits both to Service Men and civilians.

To be sure Boone County's quota will be met in this Drive, the following quotas have been assigned: the various precincts based on their assessed valuations: Beaver, $335.43; Bellevue, $342.92; Bullittsville and Hebron, $773.80; Burlington, $1,191.61; Carlisle, $311.71; Constance, $486.08; Florence, $1,960.47; Hamilton, $288.51; Petersburg, $477.96; Union, $705.89; Verona, $429.26; Walton, $1,395.37.

Birthday Party

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stephenson of South Main St., entertained Monday evening, February 14th with a party in honor of the 13th Birthday of their son, Joseph Edward.

Those enjoying this occasion were: Tommie Johnson, David Hankenson, Len Dixon, Donnie Rice, Johnny Maddox, Bobbie Hall, Jamie Pruett, Tommie Pruett, James W. Smith, Jane Thornton Vest, Gene McElroy, Joe Glenn, Gilbert Glenn, Marshall Stephenson, Jimmie Stephenson, Buddie Rouse, Jimmie Isabelle, Gerald Dixon, Marjorie Carpenter, Geraldine Strimpy and Mayhugh, Maids St. Clair, Billie Scott and Ruth Dearing.

Mrs. Stephenson was assisted by Mrs. Sam Hudson in playing games and performing the refreshments. All enjoyed a delightful time together.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Mann and daughter, Mrs. Jean DeJarnette were entertained with a 6 o'clock dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeJarnette of Lakemore on Friday evening, Mrs. Jean DeJarnette, visited until Saturday evening.

Ceiling On Used Farm Machinery Sold At Auction

"Because many farmers need to replace or add to mechanical equipment they require to produce this year's crop, the Office of Price Administration is endeavoring to keep prices for used farm machinery sold at auction in line with established prices for dealers, S. J. Yeary, Price Specialist of the Lexington Office, announced this week.

The Office of Price Administration has set ceiling auction prices on nine of the larger-type farm implements, which comprise some 60 per cent of the total dollar volume of sales of used farm machinery sold at auction. Mr. Yeary said. These items are combines, corn binders, corn pickers, farm tractors, (except crawler types), motor or tractor operated hay balers, hay loaders, manure spreaders, side delivery rakes, and combinations of these listed items with other items of farm equipment designed for mowing, threshing, or the combination is sold as a unit.

Ceiling prices for these items are not to exceed 85 per cent of the original f. o. b. factory list price for machinery less than one year old and not to exceed 70 per cent where the machinery has been used for a year or more.

To help enforce the regulation, Chester A. Bowles, head of the Office of Price Administration, has asked all auctioneers to see that established maximum prices are not exceeded and that a deservingly purchaser gets the machine in cases where several bidders offer the maximum price.

Mr. Bowles also called attention to the requirement in Maximum Price Regulation No. 133 that every auctioneer shall file a notice of every public or private auction sale of used farm equipment at least six days before the sale. These notices should be sent to the Lexington District Office.

In spite of difficulties in enforcing this regulation, the Office of Price Administration has found that for the most part auctioneers are willing and eager to cooperate. Mr. Yeary said.

Local Walton Boys Taking Training at Great Lakes, Ill.

New recruits at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, are two Walton, Kentucky boys.

They are now receiving instruction in seamanship, military drill, and naval procedure. Soon they will be given a series of aptitude tests for determining whether they will be assigned to one of the Navy's service schools, or to immediate active duty at sea.

Upon completing their recruit training, these men will be home on a nine-day leave. They are: William C. Piner, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piner, 28 Locust, and Delmos Sandlin, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sandlin, Route 2.

Annual Poultry School To Be Held At Burlington

The Annual Boone County Poultry School will be held at Burlington on Wednesday, March 23, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. J. E. Humphrey, Field Agent from the College, and local poultrymen will assist in the discussions on war time production problems.

The school this year will be divided into two parts. The morning program starting at 10:00 A. M. will be devoted to commercial and large flock production problems. The afternoon program starting at 1:00 P. M. will be devoted to special farm flocks and home food supply problems. Poultry properly handled is one of the most profitable sources of farm food supplies and farm incomes. Poor practices however, quickly developed into unprofitable situations. The school will attempt to bring the best ways of developing and keeping the farm flock on a paying basis. All who are interested in poultry are invited to attend.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally U. S. motorists need 30 to 35 million new replacement tires a year. In 1942 and 1943 combined, only about 17 million tires will have reached vehicle owners through retailing outlets.

Korsol is "Plasticized polyvinyl chloride," a B. F. Goodrich rubber-like material that before the war was used in more than 300 different products. Korsol has now gone to war.

Wheel alignment means much to tire mileage these days, with so many old cars in service. Frequent checking of camber and toe-in, and wheels will prove a rubber and mileage saver.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW REASON

Washington, D. C. COMPLAINTS OF "WASTED MANPOWER"

The fathers' draft has brought on a new series of complaints about "wastage" in the armed services stationed in the U. S. A.

Pending a call to action, a feeling of idleness and waste became a demoralizing factor. The men on the home front generally suffer most from the age-old service disease of "just waiting around."

The type of thing that happens in the waiting period is illustrated in a confidential survey made at the Naval dirigible station at Lakehurst, N. J., which brought forth the following facts:

1. The navy uses 100 to 115 men to handle a blimp when it lands, whereas Goodyear handles the same blimp with 15 civilians.

2. As at many shore stations, draft usually consists of 24 hours on, then 24 hours stand-by (which means waiting around to see if anything happens), then 24 hours liberty. Then this is repeated. Many men complain that the 24 hours of loafing at stand-by could be used for some constructive work.

3. More than 1,000 civilians are employed to recondition ships at high rates of pay, while enlisted men who could do the job and need the training lie around.

4. A high wire fence, guarded by armed sailors, surrounds Lakehurst. Then, inside the fence, a marine guard the outside of each hangar. Then, inside the hangar, two civilians also stand guard.

5. The Lakehurst commissary, which handles about 100 customers per day, is staffed to handle about 1,000. It has 10 clerks, 2 commissioned officers and 1 cashier. Any civilian groceryman plus an assistant could easily handle the whole business.

Multiplying Lakehurst's wasted manpower by the navy's many other shore stations and it runs into thousands of men.

Note: The men themselves are not to blame. Most of them chafe at inactivity, want to see action.

Effect on Men. One significant indication of how gluttoned the navy is with manpower is in the boot-training camps, designed to transform a civilian into a sailor. This training used to last three weeks. Now it has been running four months or more. And after finishing this boot training, thousands of men lie around for months in OGD's (outgoing units) awaiting assignment to a school or other activity.

In the past year, also, many enlisted men came to the conclusion that navy schools are being maintained mainly for the purpose of keeping them occupied.

Slump in Draft Quotas. Most significant fact about the manpower situation is that, all last summer, the army and navy were getting less than the quotas men they requested from the draft boards, but did not complain. Few people outside the government realized that, but even in May, the fathers' draft was under vigorous discussion on Capitol Hill, the army and navy were not complaining about the failure of draft boards to fill the quotas.

During the first months of 1943, draft boards overfilled their quotas. But in April, they began to slump off. In that month, the army-navy asked for 334,000 men but actually got only 299,000. This would not have been significant if it had occurred in one month only. But in May, the services asked Selective Service for 303,000 men, got only 264,000. However, there was no complaint from either the army or navy.

Again, in June, the services asked for 320,000 men, but got only 283,000. In July, they asked for 355,000 but got only 299,000, only slightly more than the June figure. Despite the fact that the quotas requested by the army and navy had been increased.

In August, the army-navy request dropped to 269,000, and the draft boards supplied only 221,000 men, a scant 75 per cent of the number asked for. In September, the army-navy quota was 313,000 men, but they got only 214,000 or 70 per cent of what they asked for.

However, at no time did the armed services make any protest. They seemed content to coast along, with what the draft boards were giving them.

This was all during the period when the army-navy was under serious discussion and when the administration was taking a vigorous stand that fathers had to be drafted.

What the answer is, no one quite knows. Highup army-navy officers probably know but won't talk. However, the Truman committee may ask some point questions.

TO YOUR BODY HEALTH

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union. STIFFNESS AND PAIN

There are intelligent men and women who have pain or "aches" in their muscles or around the joints who think that, as they approach middle age, they must expect to be a little stiff and continue to have the pains.

What is the nature of the pains and stiffness and tiredness in different parts of the body?

It is a chronic inflammation of the white fibrous tissue of the body and of the joints.

Dr. Barton says that fibrosis is a disease of the joints, where there is no "stretching" of the tissues, thus being unlike muscle tissue which stretches and relaxes like elastic. This white fibrous tissue forms the tendons which attach muscles to bones, it covers the muscles themselves, it forms ligaments around joints, covers bones, and it is the tissue under the skin keeping them in firm bonds. It could almost be described as a hard covering for the tissues.

It can thus be seen why the pain can be practically anywhere in the body and why it was formerly called muscular rheumatism.

What causes the inflammation of this fibrous covering tissue? Just as other tissues—muscles, nerves, blood vessels—can become infected, so can this fibrous tissue. And it can also be caused by other infections in the body due to injury, rheumatic fever, cold and influenza. The most frequent places affected by the inflammation are in the muscles and the fibrous tissue about a joint.

In the "muscular" type there is lumpiness, stiffness, and pain in the joints. Morning stiffness is the commonest symptom, as patient is extremely stiff and may require considerable movement before stiffness disappears. There is usually no swelling present.

In the Mayo Clinic's issue of Medical Clinician of North America, Dr. Frank H. Krusen, whose description of fibrosis is mentioned above, states that the best treatment for fibrosis during or after the removal of infection is heavy massage which breaks down hard nodules or lumps of tissue and further treatment is by heat, special friction massage, and stretching.

This is an ailment where a qualified physiotherapist or masseur can obtain excellent results.

Removing Bad Teeth May Cure Arthritis

The first thought in a case of chronic rheumatism or arthritis is to find the cause, which so often is infected teeth or tonsils. After the cause is found or thought to be found, the problem arises as to whether the infection should be removed immediately or the patient's condition should be improved before the infected teeth or tonsils are removed.

Dentists and physicians are now agreed that if at all possible, the patient should be placed under observation so that the symptoms can be put under control by rest, diet, and medical treatment.

I have spoken before of a boxer afflicted with rheumatism in joints of lower back whose symptoms were attributed to two "bad" teeth. His physician sent him to his own dentist who refused to remove the teeth and suggested that the physician look elsewhere for the cause of the symptoms. The patient went to another dentist, the teeth were removed, the odor from them being curiously bad. As the rheumatic pains became very much worse, it showed that the teeth were the cause of the pain. Fortunately the boxer was in good condition and was able to withstand the shock of the extraction and the increased pain. The severe pain disappeared in two days and all the pain and stiffness went away on my face.

The point then is that as the physician is the one who must take responsibility for results of removal of infected teeth, he must decide whether the patient needs to be built up to withstand shock and poisoning or whether immediate removal is necessary. The patient must therefore trust the physician as to whether teeth should be removed at all, and if so whether treatment for a time should be given.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What would cause veins to break out not only on my legs but on my face?

A.—Your own physician can give you the necessary advice for this condition. It may be hereditary.

Q.—What is folliculitis?

A.—Folliculitis is an inflammation of the hair sacs or glands of skin. See a skin specialist as the inflammation of these, if they open, takes different form.

4 tablespoons marmalade

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut or rub in shortening. Add enough milk to make thick batter, stirring until flour is well moistened. Drop a spoonful of batter in greased muffin pan, add a teaspoonful of marmalade, top with another spoonful of biscuit batter and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) 13 minutes.

*Pork Chops Supreme. (Serves 4)
4 thick pork chops
1 green pepper
1 onion
4 crackers
Pinch of poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Milk

Grind together green pepper, onion, crackers and combine with oil. Add enough milk to make thick batter. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for an hour to an hour and a half.

Changes of season with their myriad of new fruits and vegetables in season bring with them delightful changes in menus and perk up appetites, but before the new season begins there's apt to be a dullness in menus that puts appetites in a rut. Let's resolve there be no such menu monotony in any home when there are different combinations of old favorites available.

Frequently just a small change in the menu can bring a chorus of cheers from the family. For example, try a crusty fruit bread quickly prepared or a luscious dessert, new and different salad or an unusual way of preparing a meat dish. Don't depart too radically from what's liked by the family, but do make a small change for that desired "something different."

There's nothing especially new in the ingredients for this salad, but they're in new combination—even to the touch of watercress in place of lettuce as background.

Cottage Cheese Salad. (Serves 8)
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 cup pineapple juice
Strips of green and red pepper
1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add pineapple juice and water. Chill until slightly thickened. Decorate mold with strips of green and red pepper. Combine pineapple, cheese, salt and cayenne. Pour into thickened gelatin. Turn into ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Fill center with mixed salad and garnish with segments of tomato and sprigs of watercress.

Here's an old favorite with a new twist:
Carrot Ring with Creamed Peas and Ham. (Serves 6)
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
2 cups grated carrot
Melt butter, blend in flour. Cook until slightly thickened, then add milk and salt. Stir until blended. Add beaten egg yolks and grated carrot. Fold in. Turn into ring mold. Fill with peas. Pour into greased mold, set in a pan of hot water.

Good Combinations: Contrast in foods is an important factor in good menu building. Give your meat just the right vegetable and sauce and salad and the only complaint you will get is that your family doesn't have room for all they could eat.

Browned potatoes and brown gravy go with pot roast. Don't forget a foie gras salad. Dimples are indicated with stew. Mustard pickles and molded fruit salad are perfect accompaniments.

Delicious corned beef brisket is good with cabbage wedges, boiled potatoes and mustard sauce. Baked sweet potatoes are a must with Boston Butt. A dish of applesauce and colorful Harvard beets do the right thing for balance.

A shoulder roast of lamb needs the lightness of new potatoes, brown gravy and fresh sprigs of asparagus.

PETER RABBIT HAS SPRING THOUGHTS

Winosme Bluebird's on the way! He is due most any day.

It was Old Mother West Wind's children, the Merry Little Breezes, that sang this softly as they danced over the Green Meadows and around the Old Peter Patch. Peter Rabbit pricked up his long ears.

"How do you know? Who told you so?" he demanded.

"Nobody told us so; we just FEEL Peter," cried the Merry Little Breezes, and kept on singing as they danced.

"Ruh! said Peter. 'Feeling isn't KNOWING. Perhaps Winosme is on his way, and perhaps he isn't. I hope he is, for that would mean Mistress Spring is on her way, too, and she can't get here too soon to suit me. But I would feel a lot more sure of it if I could see some sign.'"

"Use your eyes, Peter! Use your eyes! There are flowers in bloom already, for we've seen them. What better sign than Mistress Spring is coming do you want?" chimed the Merry Little Breezes.

Peter jumped a foot off the ground. "Say," he cried, "are you crazy? Look at this now! All over the Green Meadow! Do you expect me to believe any such story as that?"

"We don't care whether you believe it or not," cried the Merry Little Breezes, dancing around Peter and throwing snow in his face.

Welcome Robin's on the wing! Very soon you'll hear him sing.

With this the Merry Little Breezes danced away across the Green Meadows toward the Green Forest, leaving Peter to stare after them as they vanished.

Peter jumped a foot off the ground. If quite sure that they really were as crazy as they seemed.

"Of course, I isn't true," muttered Peter. "The very idea of saying that they had seen flowers in bloom when the ground is still frozen and there is snow everywhere! I don't believe a word of it. Peter sat down in a bed of dry warm leaves to think. He scratched his ear with his leg, the way he does when a hard problem is troubling him.

Nevertheless, Peter couldn't get it out of his head that the Merry Little Breezes had seen something he hadn't. Thoughts of the glad spring-began to chase each other through his funny little head. Two or three times he found himself listening for the soft voice of Winosme Bluebird. One after another his neighbors who had been sleeping all winter popped into his head, and he wondered when each would wake up, and if he would be the first to greet them. Then the striped Chipmunk and Johnny Chuck and Bobby Coon and One' Billy Possum and Old Mr. Toad and Grandfather Frog and Spotty the Turtle and Digger the Badger and Mr. Blacksnake and his cousins and Buster Bear. Which one would be the first to rub the sleepy-sand out of his eyes and come out to see what had happened during the long months he had been asleep? Just thinking about them and of the joy and happiness which sweet Mistress Spring would bring with her gave Peter a funny feeling which little by little he recognized as the very feeling that the Merry Little Breezes began to feel that day when Mistress Spring really and truly WAS on her way.

"Ruh!" exclaimed Peter, just as he had before, and shook himself. But he couldn't shake off that feeling. Then he remembered what the Merry Little Breezes had said about signs and about using his eyes. "Ruh!" said he, again. "I guess if there was anything to see I'd see it! There's nothing the matter with my eyes, and I haven't seen any signs of spring yet. Flowers in bloom! The very idea!"

Ration Tokens In Use Sunday
During the three-week period, February 27 through March 20, in changing from the old rationing program to the simplified token plan, two sets of stamps, green and blue will be used for processed foods, and two, brown and red, for meats and fats. The old stamps, brown and green, will be used exactly as in the past at their regular value through March 20. The token plan will be fully in effect on March 21. Beginning then, processed foods can be purchased only with blue stamps and blue tokens; and meats, fats, and oils only with red effective February 27 are valued at 10 points each. All tokens are valued at one point each and will be given for change only when a purchase is made. No more than one token need be given as "change" in one transaction.

To Review Farmer Deferments
Local Selective Service Boards have been ordered to review promptly deferments of agricultural workers because of the sharp curtailment of available manpower for the armed forces. Selective Service has announced, "It is not expected that local boards will defer or continue to defer a registrant as necessary to and regularly engaged in agriculture unless by his own personal and direct efforts he produces 160 or more war units each year." Selective Service asserted, "About 1,700,000 men in agriculture were deferred in class II-C and III-C as of January 1, 1944. Of this total, 400,000 are single men below 22 years of age and more than one million are non-farmers. In all other war production and war supporting activities less than 125,000 non-farmers below the age of 22 were deferred as of January 1."

Notice!

The 1944 dog licenses are now due and every dog in Boone County must have a license. The Boone County Fiscal Court has instructed the Sheriff to collect all dog licenses at once, due to the fact that the Live Stock Fund is more than one year behind in paying the claims for sheep that were killed by dogs. Please obtain this license at once so that you will not have to pay the penalty.

and biennial yellow sweetclover, and of 2 cents a pound for Sudan grass. Western grasses would be increased as much as 50 per cent because of harvesting difficulties, and several grasses appear on the support program for the first time this year.

Less Paper Work To Build
Less paper work for persons who build privately financed housing construction is assured by War Production Board Order P-35-C. This order, announced jointly by the WPB and the Housing Agency, eliminates filing of a detailed list of materials and permits use of materials that will conserve lumber and fuel. A simplified procedure for farm housing, which was excluded from Order P-35-C, was provided in CMP regulation 6, direction 1, effective February 15.

Fruits-Vegetables Set Aside
Canners were directed to set aside increased quantities of canned fruits and vegetables for the 1944 production program. Government requirements in order to meet expanded military needs, WPA has announced. The increases principally are for canned apples, fruit cocktail, peaches, pears (Barlett), lima beans, sweet corn, peas, tomatoes, and tomato juice.

Round-Up
WPA has authorized production during 1944 of 1,400 motor-cycles for essential domestic civilian use, 80 for Canada, 650 for export, and 50 for military use. Use more potatoes in 1944 is the recommendation of WPA following the harvesting of the largest potato crop in history last year. WPA expects limited number of domestic electric ranges to be available for essential civilian needs during the last half of this year. U. S. war expenditures in January amounted to $7,416,000,000, almost 7 per cent over December, and an average daily rate of $285,200,000.

Because of problems in getting feed, U. S. production of last year's chicks in January was 30 per cent under January last year. Total retail sales for 1943 were $63,269,000, an increase of 10 per cent over 1942, according to the Department of Commerce. Boys and girls under 20 who leave home seeking war jobs should carry with them proof of their ages, advises the U. S. Department of Labor.

Cooper may now use labor in the manufacture of automobile radiators, gaskets, fuel and oil lines, brake and clutch lining rivets, and other essential parts, according to WPA. "Small business is more important to the nation today than ever before," declared Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of WPB, and should be given top priority when surplus materials of war are released. Although the points-for-fats plan did not go into effect until December 13, fats collections for December were 33 per cent over November. WPB reports. It war food goals are to be met, all available surplus food must be planted this year. WPA asserts. WPB has reduced the 1944 manufacture of paper towels for home use to 80 per cent of the 1943 base period output. Farmers will have more paper for sale for fertilizer use this year than during the two preceding years, WPB announces. A general retail price reduction to the consumer of Chock salmon is expected to result from establishment by OPA of a 20-cents-per-pound ceiling price for certain producers.

Para-Ski Troopers

When will this war end? Nobody knows, so the Army is continuing its training of Para-Ski Troopers. They're parachute troops who know their way about on skis or any other place in snow covered mountainous country.

A great measure of the success of Russia's victories last winter is attributed to these troops who move with the silence of a snowflake. Our work on the home front is not so hazardous as that of the Para-Ski Troopers but it is important that we perform our daily tasks and make every effort to increase our regular purchase of War Bonds.

GRAPES FOR THE HOME

According to College of Agriculture, Extension Division Circular No. 209, the grape is as easily grown as any fruit in the home garden. It comes into bearing within three or four years after planting. It requires, but little land for each vine; if ground is limited, its branches may be trained over walls or fences which could scarcely accommodate any other useful vegetation. Its enemies are few and can usually be controlled with simple apparatus and materials.

Time To Complete Your Grape Framing

The best time for pruning grape vines is in the early spring. Winter killing is common, which makes it desirable to prune after severe weather is past. Pruning should not be done while the wood is frozen, because frozen canes are brittle and much damage may be done if handled in that condition. Bleeding occurs if late spring pruning is done. Grape growers prefer to prune before bleeding is excessive.

According to the Circular:

Vigorous growth of a newly set vine is promoted by removing all canes but the strongest and cutting that back to two or three buds.

The systems of pruning, cultivation, fertilizers, varieties, control of insects and diseases, and spray schedule is given in detail in the Circular No. 209. Communicate with your County Extension Agents for a copy or write the College of Agriculture for a copy of the Circular, "GRAPES FOR THE HOME."

Second Lieut. John J. Haener, Nephew of Mrs. J. F. Jockey Killed in Plane Crash.

A Memphis and a resident of Aberdeen, Miss., were among 19 Army airmen killed February 12th in the collision of three medium bombers during the weekly review at Greenville, S. C., Army Air Base, the Associated Press reported.

Second Lieut. John J. Haener, 22, observer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Haener, 510 North McNeill and Second Lieut. Paul C. Chamberlain Jr., 20, bombardier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Chamberlain, Aberdeen, were the Mid South victims.

Dispatches said the planes, flying low in formation during a weekly review, touched wings and crashed a few seconds after passing over a bomber group on the field. The planes fell at the north end of the base and flames were seen shooting from the craft before they struck the ground.

All aboard the three planes were reported killed.

Lieutenant Haener was born in Memphis and attended Snowden and Central High School. He attended Memphis State College for a year and spent a year and a half at the University of Tennessee before entering the Army Air Forces in March, 1942. He was a member of Union Avenue Baptist Church.

He received his preliminary training at Kelly Field and his wings at Brooks Field, San Antonio. He received his commission as second lieutenant at Miami.

Beach, Fla., in March, 1943. He later was sent to Greenville for additional training. He had training as a navigator, gunner and radio operator.

Lieutenant Haener leaves his parents, a brother, R. H. Haener, and a sister, Mrs. H. R. Gilbert, Memphis.

THANK GOODNESS

... here's one item that hasn't gone up!

Electricity is an exception among rising living costs

Electricity is one bright spot in these days of rising living costs. Food, clothing, rent, furnishings, almost everything else you buy has gone up — except electricity.

Like your own living costs, our taxes and operating costs have risen sharply since the war, but in spite of this fact electricity was never cheaper than it is today. The average residential customer of this company is getting about TWICE as much electricity for his money now as he did 15 years ago.

Perhaps you haven't noticed much of a change in your monthly bill, because you have been adding lamps and appliances all along, but the saving is there just the same. The dollars you spend for other things buy less and less, but your electric dollar buys more today than ever before.

Savin' bus tires is hard on both you and us

"Shake a leg, buddy, I gotta get back to my ship," says the sailor to me. I was already doing my darndest to hold the bus at 35, which is tough when those land cruisers are built to steam at about 45 knots. The new speed limit cramps your style as well as mine. But rubber has to be saved, so it's just another sacrifice we gotta make to help win the war. We can take it if you can, and we're gonna keep right on givin' you military men the best we got.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YRS.

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disappeared the second day. Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

ON KENTUCKY FARMS

More than a million dollars worth of tobacco was sold by farmers in Morgan county, $50,000 worth having been saved by priming.

It is expected that the hybrid corn acreage in Livingston county will exceed that of last year by 10,000 acres if seed is available. Thirty-eight of the 110 members of the Paducah Graded Milk Producers Association sold their herds during 1943.

In Marshall county more strawberry beds are being treated with fertilizer than usual, in anticipation of a good crop. In Wayne county, it is expected that the average of hybrid corn will be increased from 6,000 to 10,000 acres this year.

Mrs. J. C. Mendor of Simpson county made a profit of $88.58 above feed costs on her flock of 251 White Leghorns in December. R. D. Sullivan of Whitley county saved around 35 bushels of Williams sorghum seed last year.

Everybody has a part in the drive for VICTORY. Good eyesight is of vital importance. Eye strain and defective vision keeps a person below normal, when it is his or her patriotic duty to feel as well and strong as possible. Come in today and have your eyes examined.

In the fat salvage campaign, Warren county homemakers have as their goal for the year the contribution of at least a pound of fat per member. Homemakers club members in Union county are keeping the cookie jars filled at the Morgantown USO. Twelve homemakers clubs in Anderson county report salvaging 225 pounds of fat in January.

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING TO COMMUNITY PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY A FRANCHISE FOR THE TERM OF TWENTY YEARS FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONSTRUCTING, MAINTAINING, AND/OR OPERATING AN ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHTING SYSTEM, AND TO DISTRIBUTE AND SELL ELECTRICAL ENERGY FOR LIGHT, HEAT, AND POWER PURPOSES AND TO USE THE STREETS AND ALLEYS OF THE TOWN OF WALTON, KENTUCKY, FOR THE PURPOSE OF DISTRIBUTING ELECTRICITY WITHIN THE TOWN AND BEYOND THE LIMITS THEREOF AND FOR THE OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE OF SUCH LIGHTING AND POWER SYSTEM.

WHEREAS, at an adjourned meeting of the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton on January 28, 1944, the Board of Trustees passed an ordinance to sell a franchise for the distribution of electrical energy and the use of the streets and alleys in the town of Walton, Kentucky, for the purpose of such distribution of electrical energy, and

WHEREAS, the franchise was duly advertised as required by the said ordinance, and

WHEREAS, on February 1, 1944, the bid of the Community Public Service Company was handed to the clerk of the town of Walton, as set out in the ordinance, at which time the bid of the Community Public Service Company was the highest and best bid;

NOW, THEREFORE, the Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton, Kentucky, does ordain that the sale of said franchise, as advertised, be and is approved, and the bid of the Community Public Service Company be and is now accepted, and approved by the Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton, Kentucky, for and in behalf of said town, and the Community Public Service Company, its successors and assigns, be and is now granted a franchise for the term of twenty years for the purpose of furnishing electric power and light in the town of Walton, Kentucky, together with the rights and privileges to use the streets and alleys of said town for the erection and maintenance of poles, wires, and all necessary equipment for the operation and maintenance of such power and lighting system as set out fully in said franchise ordinance.

This ordinance shall take effect from and after its passage, approval and publication.

Passed and approved by the Board of Trustees of the town of Walton, Kentucky, this 11th day of February, 1944, at this regular meeting.

J. R. CONRAD,

Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the town of Walton, Kentucky.

Grow Greens For Calcium

Loose-leaved varieties of greens should be included in the spring garden to insure calcium in the family menu, according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent. Keep an eye on calcium is the advice given to gardeners and family meal planners.

Greens can be a pretty good number-two source of calcium. Green cabbage and green lettuce, mustard and turnip greens, broccoli, collards and kale are all excellent sources of calcium. Ninety-nine percent of the calcium in the body is used in building and repairing bones and teeth. Milk is the number one source of calcium. Includes as much milk and milk products in daily meals as wartime conditions permit, and waste none.

Now is the time for gardeners to plan a well balanced program for their garden. Greens prove to be one of the first early vegetables from the spring garden.

Insectory Committee Plans News Service.

The Northern Kentucky Fruit Growers Insectory Committee plans a special spray and insect control news service again this year. Fruit growers wishing to secure this news service should list their names at the County Agents Office in Burlington. The Committee met at the County Agents office in Covington Friday, Feb. 11th to make plans for the new year.

This marks the fourth year this service has been available. The Northern Kentucky Committee is a part of the state insectory program, working under the supervision of the College. Field information on apple scab, codling moth and curculio development is secured, correlated thru the state laboratories. Growers are notified of the approximate dates on which to apply control measures in order to prevent losses to their fruit crops.

Trophies Awarded Burlington and Constance Clubs

The Burlington Blue Ribbon and Constance Corncrippers 4-H Clubs scored first place in 4-H Community Club Achievement in 1943 and were awarded the Banks of Boone County Trophies at the 4-H Leaders Conference held at Burlington last Saturday, February 26th. A. B. Renaker, President of the Peoples Deposit Bank of Burlington represented the Banks of Boone County in awarding the trophies to the winning clubs.

Twenty-eight 4-H Club Leaders attended the Saturday's conference. Prof. D. H. Norris, County Supt. of Schools and Chairman of the 4-H and Utopia Council, addressed the leaders on the importance of 4-H Club work in the vocational training of rural youth. E. E. Fish, 4-H Club Specialist, and Ivan Clemens addressed the adult agricultural project leaders on project group organization problems. Edith Lacy, 4-H Home Economics Specialist, met with the Boone Economics leaders on 1944 4-H project discussions.

Leaders attending the Conference were: Mrs. Albert Willis, Mrs. Rachel Pottinger, Mrs. Hush McArthur, Mrs. Howard Arce, R. V. Lents, Mrs. R. V. Lents, John Masters, Robert Baker, Mrs. Lillian Schram, Louis Clegg, Mrs. Vernon Pope, E. E. Fish, Miss Edith Lacy, O. W. Purdy, Bonnie Schram, Mary Catherine Shields, Becham Shields, Ivan Clemens, Mrs. H. R. Forkner, Walter King, Mrs. Walter King, David King, Mildred King, A. B. Renaker, D. H. Norris, Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, H. R. Forkner, O. D. Perkinson, and Mary Hood Gillespie.

There are present 40 adult Home Economics leaders and 26 adult Agricultural leaders in Boone County who are assisting 4-H Club members in the 4-H Club problems. These project group members are enrolled in eleven community 4-H Clubs under the supervision of twenty-two adult community club leaders.

James Lee Alphin Returns From Sea Duty—Member Of Armed Guard Crew.

James Lee Alphin, signalman third class, USN, of Verona, Ky., attached to the U. S. Naval Armed Guard crew assigned to an American merchant vessel, it was announced today by headquarters of the 8th Naval district at New Orleans. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Alphin of Verona. Alphin joined the Navy June 11, 1942.

During his recent five months at sea he visited Cuba, Panama, and Hawaii. He has previously visited ports in England, Africa, and the Mediterranean area. The 19-year-old gunner attended high school in Warsaw, Ky., graduating in 1942. He received his Navy "boot" training at Great Lakes, Ill. Alphin now awaits further assignment as an Armed Guard gunner on a merchant ship.

8,000 Kentucky Baptist People In Simultaneous Meeting March 7th.

A Mass Meeting will be held at Covington, Southside Baptist Church on Tuesday night, March 7th for the Baptist of North Bend Association. All visitors are welcome.

The program is planned to be one of information inspiration and challenge. It is to be presented under the auspices of the Baptist Training Union. The largest possible attendance is urged from all the Baptist Churches of the Association whether they have any Training Union work or not.

State Baptist Training Union Secretary, Byron C. S. DeJarnette of Louisville, announces that this meeting is to be one of many simultaneous Baptist Association Meetings over the State. The statewide attendance goal is 8,000. These meetings are features of this the fourth year of the Fourth Year Promotional Program of Kentucky and Southern Baptists.

One Acre Yields 1912 Pounds Of Burley.

Sam Sleet, progressive farmer in the Beaver neighborhood, averaged 1912 pounds of tobacco per acre for his entire crop. Mr. Sleet set 3.1 acres and sold 5928 pounds of burley for an average of $51 per one hundred pounds. This tobacco was a root rot resistant variety.

Public Urged To Support Red Cross Drive In Boone Co.

"The Red Cross is a wonderful organization. It follows right behind the firing line, and I was taken to one of its Casualty Clearing Stations the first place after I was wounded." So spoke Corporal Wilson Edwards, of Petersburg, when he was home recently after having been wounded in Italy.

You will hear similar statements from all Service Men. General Dwight Eisenhower, himself, said, "consider the Red Cross an auxiliary of my Army, and we simply couldn't get along without it. It is doing a perfectly magnificent job in every way."

If all our Service Men could speak to the Red Cross today, they would say "Thanks." They thank you for the blood plasma that has saved their lives by the thousand, for help given their families in time of need, for more than 500 million bandages made last year, for the nurses recruited to care for them, and for putting a Red Cross Field Director with them wherever they go, to untangle personal problems. They thank you for the coffee and doughnuts served practically on the battle field, for the entertainment you have sponsored, and for millions of articles of clothing and other personal supplies. They thank you, it they should happen to be in prison camps, for the eleven pound food packages sent them every week.

They do not thank you, of course, for what the Red Cross is doing on the home front, because they know little about it. They do know about the hundred thousand Nurse's Aides, without whom our hospitals would be greatly crippled; the Gray Ladies working in the hospitals; the disaster relief ready anywhere in the country for instant response; the First Aid course, the Nutrition Service, the Accident Prevention program, and the Home Nursing course.

Yesterday, March 1, the Red Cross opened its drive for two hundred million dollars and is asking Boone County for $8,700. The amount raised last year, $8,000. These meetings are features of this the fourth year of the Fourth Year Promotional Program of Kentucky and Southern Baptists.

If you are not solicited personally, it is your duty to make your contribution anyway, and it can be done easily by mailing it to the County Chairman, Irvin Rouse, Burlington, or by contacting your local solicitor.

Following is the list of precincts, with their quotas and chairmen: Beaver, $235.42, Mrs. Ruth Greene; Bellevue, $342.92, Miss Kathryn Colic; Bullittsville and Hebron, $773.80, Mrs. Jameson Ayler; Burlington, $1,191.61, Mrs. Jim Smith; Carlton, $211.71, Mrs. John Ryle; Constance, $485.08, Mrs. George Kottmeyer; Florence, $1,960.47, Mrs. Lewis Houston; Hamilton, $289.51, Mrs. J. C. Arce; Petersburg, $477.96, Mrs. Raymond Witham; Union, $705.89, Mrs. Martha Huey; Verona, $429.26, Mrs. G. C. Ransom; Walton, $1,395.37, Mrs. Clayton Jones.

Mrs. Lucy Holtzclaw

Mrs. Lucy Holtzclaw of Walton passed away at the home of her niece, Mrs. Edith Black Saturday, February 28th following a lingering illness. She was 75 years old. Funeral services were conducted from Paint Lick Christian Church Monday, February 28th at 2 P. M., with burial in Paint Lick cemetery.

She is survived by two brothers, Jim Huffman, Big Bone, Ky., and Bert Huffman, Verona, Ky.; one sister, Mrs. Naomi Huffman, Big Bone; four nieces, Miss Anna Dugdon, Mrs. Kate Sparks, Mrs. Edith Black, all of Walton, Mrs. Mary Turner, Marion, Ind., Mrs. May Bartko, Kokomo, Ind. The flower girls were: Mary Kathryn Black, Nella Sparks, Ray Nathan Black, Gladys Dugdon, and Mattie Marie Miller. Pallbearers were: Willis Bekshire, Russell Sparks, Ray Sparks, Dave Miller, Cecil Dickerson, and Mike Binder. Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the arrangements.

Truitt DeMoisey All-Round Man On U. K. Team

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 25—One of the outstanding members of this year's University of Kentucky basketball team is Truitt DeMoisey of Walton. Truitt stands 6 foot 4 and started the season as a pivot man. Then when Don Whitehead was about to leave post, and when Walter Johnson entered the navy, DeMoisey was used at the guard position, so he can be referred to as "the all-round man". For the greater part of the season, DeMoisey has been the understudy of Bob Brannan of Winfield, Kansas, who leads the team in scoring with about a 14 point average. Even playing in almost every game this season and is one of the leading scorers on the squad.

This year's freshmen team has won 13 out of 14 games upsetting such teams as Indiana, Ohio State, Notre Dame, St. John's University, and Illinois. This schedule was made in early Nov. when it appeared that the University would have one of the weakest teams in years. On top of the strongest teams it could have booked, in the middle west, the University added St. John's, last year's Madison Square Garden invitational tournament winner, to the schedule in order to play two games in the east, Carnegie Tech was added at Buffalo also.

Coch Rupp is enthusiastic about DeMoisey and "I have every reason to be," he said. "Naturally, I am proud of the way DeMoisey has performed this year. Considering the fact we have defeated some of the strongest teams in the nation this year with a bunch of inexperienced kids makes me feel that this may be one of the greatest teams we have ever had at the University. Should we be as fortunate in the remainder of our schedule, I know it will be."

Kenton County Farm News

Fertilizer is necessary to High Yield of Tobacco according to Russell Hunt, field agent in Agronomy who met with Kenton County tobacco growers at Independence. Friday afternoon, a large supply of plant food is necessary for the production of high yielding excellent quality burley tobacco. Very little land is fertile enough to produce such crops without application of farm manure or commercial fertilizers or both.

Mr. Hunt also stated at the meeting that farmers could save labor in tobacco by planting not more than 8500 plants per acre instead of larger numbers that have been planted during recent years by tobacco growers.

By planting fewer plants per acre the tobacco grower saves time in tending, harvesting and stripping of tobacco.

Farm Manure is Valuable The better utilization and saving of manure was also urged by Mr. Hunt as well as tobacco stalks. Millions of dollars worth of fertilizer is lost every year by the farmers because they do not take proper care of the manure and make the best use of the manure. According to the Ohio Experiment Station one ton of cow manure that has been properly taken care of is about equal to 100 pounds of a 3-8-10 fertilizer. In some cases it is equal to 100 pounds of 4-6-10 fertilizer.

The College of Agriculture and Home Economics, Extension Service, Lexington, Ky. has prepared a leaflet No. 63 Fertilizing Burley Tobacco that gives information on tobacco production. See your county agricultural agent for a copy of leaflet No. 63.

Postmaster in Army C. F. Clegg, 32, Walton, Ky., postmaster, was inducted into the Army Friday at Ft. Thomas. He served four years as assistant postmaster and six years as postmaster. Mr. Clegg is a district director of the National Association of Postmasters. He is a member of the Walton Masonic and Welfare organizations.

Word has been received here that Pvt. Donald Stephenson is in the hospital at San Diego, Calif., with a sprained back.

Thomas William Rice Funeral services for Thomas William Rice, 58, life long resident of Boone County were conducted Wednesday, March 1st, 2 p. m. at the home in Burlington with Rev. Roy Johnson in charge of the services. Burial was in the family lot in the Burlington Cemetery.

Mr. Rice passed away in his home Monday, February 28th following a short illness. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Grace Rice; one son, Carroll C. Rice of Camp Meade, Md.; one daughter, Mrs. Lauer Smith, Burlington; five grandchildren; and one brother, Chester who made his home with him. Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the arrangements.

Erosion Control Meeting Scheduled March 8th.

Earl G. Welch, Agricultural Engineer from the College of Agriculture will meet with Boone County farmers at Burlington on Wednesday, March 8th to demonstrate approved methods of water conservation and erosion control thru use of mechanical equipment according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The meeting will be held in cooperation with the local Soil Conservation Service District, A. A. Committeemen, and others who are interested in erosion control practices. The meeting will be held at 1:00 p. m. (CWT). All farmers are invited to attend.

Litt Brothers Of Cincinnati Purchase Dixie Dry Goods Store

The business known as the Dixie Dry Goods Co., Inc., of Erlanger, Ky., has recently been purchased by Litt Bros., of Cincinnati from Mrs. Lola Herschling of Ft. Mitchell.

The store will be conducted under the same trade name as in the past, but will become a part of the ten other stores now being operated by Litt Bros., Inc.

Only a part of the present merchandise will be carried as regular stock and therefore the store will have to be cleared of the stock now on hand in order to make room for the new lines which will be on sale soon. The sale of odd lots in all departments will be underway this week, closing out entirely our nice stock of glassware and dishes.

The store when remodeled will have a complete line of infants' and children's wear, ladies' dresses, hostery, underwear and accessories—also men's and boys' pants, overalls, jackets, sweaters, underwear, hats and accessories. The new management invites you to visit the store at your earliest convenience and share in the rare bargains now being offered in order to clear entire stock.

Mr. Berry Johnson has received word through the Red Cross that his son, Ben Johnson was injured when a jeep turned over with him. His spine was fractured, leg broken and ribs bruised and also received. This happened somewhere in Italy, the later part of January. Mr. Johnson is reported to be getting along nicely.

To The Citizens Of Walton And Vicinity

The Red Cross War Fund Drive opened March 1st and will continue through-out the entire month. Walton's quota of $1,395.37 is more than doubled this year, which means everyone will be called upon to give more than the usual one dollar donation.

Remember that the contributions you make for this War Fund Drive will give OUR FIGHTING MEN the best of care and attention, which they so rightly deserve, and the dollar usually given will not stretch to serve all their needs. After all, they are fighting for us, some our own flesh and blood, and it is our solemn and patriotic duty to back these fighting men to the limit of our financial ability.

When one of the Red Cross Workers calls at your door, please give her a substantial contribution. Walton does not want to lag behind in their efforts to help these boys represent families in our community. Let's not let them down.

COME ON EVERYBODY! LET'S MAKE THIS DRIVE A SUCCESS! Chairman of Walton Red Cross War Fund Drive.

Important Notice To Our Subscribers.

On account of the advance in the price of newspaper stock and Government regulations, we are requested to have our subscriptions paid up. By looking at the label on your paper, you can tell when your subscription expires. The advertiser is only $1.50 a year, less than three cents a week. We may soon have to raise the price, so come in and pay your subscription now.

40 Boone County Farmers Attend Tobacco Meeting

Forty two farmers from all sections of the county up and down the county, met last Friday evening at Burlington, heard Russell Hunt, Tobacco Specialist from the College, presented radical new fertilizer recommendations for 1944. Mr. Hunt stressed the importance of producing pounds in preference to quality, to meet the big shortage of smoking tobacco. Both quality and quantity are to be desired but quantity production will probably bring the farmers the most total dollars.

Fertilizer recommendations placed before the farmers the largest yields per acre include: (1) turning under Vetch or Vetch and small grain as a green manure crop; (2) turning under 10 to 20 loads of manure per acre; (3) spreading tobacco stalks now so that they will be used up and disease will be killed by plowing time; (4) covering land with decayed straw or hay; (5) applying from 500 to 1,000 pounds of phosphate per acre broadcast and turned under; (6) applying of 1,000 pounds of complete fertilizer per acre by turning under 700 pounds and putting 300 pounds per acre in the row; and (7) in many instances the side dressing with 200 pounds of ammonium nitrate per acre where abundance of phosphate and potash has been applied. Not one but all of these fertilizer treatments may be applied on most fields in order to secure highest yields. Many farmers following these recommendations the past year secured more than a ton of tobacco per acre. Hunt warned against applying over doses to nitrogen fertilizers without applying sufficient phosphate and potash to give more even quality to the crop.

Plant bed treatment with Blue-stone lime, setting of the crop 3 1/2 feet by 18 inches to save plants, labor and sticks and use of various yielding disease resistant varieties were included in the other recommendations given by Mr. Hunt. He advised that the new 41-A variety being grown by many local farmers would be a more green growing crop in the field but if allowed to mature would ripen fully and would give a high yielding high quality leaf. Experiment Station No. 52 is more disease resistant and is a lower yielding, higher quality variety.

Mrs. John Gault was called to Ashland, Ky. Saturday on account of the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. Mary Kokenodder, who has pneumonia. Mrs. Gault left Saturday evening.

Women's Society Of Christian Service.

The Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church held an all day meeting at the church on Thursday. After a sumptuous repast at the noon hour provided by a covered dish supper, the meeting was called to order in the auditorium by the vice-president, Mrs. J. R. Conrad in the absence of the president, Mrs. Lotta Powers who is sojourning in Bradenton, Florida for the winter season.

After a short business session and program the remainder of the time was given to the guest speaker, Mrs. Frank Bowman of Newport, who is the District Secretary of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Covington District of the Kentucky Conference. Mrs. Bowman was much enjoyed and appreciated.

Attending this meeting were: Rev. and Mrs. Godfrey of Hughes Chapel Church, Rev. and Mrs. D. Bedinger, Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Mrs. John Taylor, Mrs. R. O. Hughes, Mrs. Frank Bowman, Mrs. Sallie R. Miller, Mrs. Mayne Simpson, Mrs. R. E. Ryle, Mrs. D. E. Wallace, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. Julia J. Hudson, Mrs. Wm. Lancaster, Mrs. Earl Robinson, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. Mary Pinner, Mrs. Mary Stephenson, and Mrs. C. E. Young. The close of this meeting a number of the Ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance Union met with Mrs. Bowman to discuss and plan for the work of the local W. C. T. U. since Mrs. Bowman is also the District Secretary of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

cabinet makers of the late Colonial period. The furniture types of their day have become standard, and we have begun to think about the kind of curtains and draperies that were originally used with this furniture.

At the picturesque village of Williamsburg, Va., are often surmised to find Venetian blinds were the fashion long before the Revolution, and the well-tailored canvas blind valance used today was a Chinese invention long before modern times. Yet these were the curtain styles when ladies' gowns were powdered wigs. Valances were made just as we make them today and were latched to a valance board in pretty much the same manner as is shown here.

After washing cooking utensils used for fish, rub with orange or lemon rind to remove any lingering odor of fish.

Work clothes will keep clean longer if they are starched. Factory managers recommend a hard finish because it is safer around machines.

Keep the leather of your shoes soft and pliant. That means polishing your best shoes and greasing or oiling your work shoes with neat's foot oil, castor oil, tallow or wool grease, slightly warmed.

CHEST COLD MISERY

FIRST—rub throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime.
THEN—spread a thick layer of VapoRub on the chest and cover with a warm cloth.
NIGHT AWAY, VapoRub goes to work—loosens phlegm—eases muscular soreness or tightness—helps clear upper air passages—relieves coughing. Brings wonderful comfort and invites restful sleep.

75¢ WORTH OF NITRAGIN

PAID $390 in MY CLOVER FIELD
One farmer writes that he spent 75¢ to inoculate half of 50 acres of red clover with NITRAGIN and got $390.00 worth of seed from the 15 acres he inoculated.

Inoculate all legumes with NITRAGIN

With clover seed at 25¢ and alfalfa 50¢ or more per pound, you can't afford not to inoculate every pound of seed you plant with NITRAGIN. For a few cents an acre, NITRAGIN makes up to 50% bigger yields of richer food and helps build fertility. Tests show it pays to inoculate all legume seedlings of previous crops. NITRAGIN is the oldest, most widely used inoculant. It costs only a few cents an acre... produced in the most modern laboratory of its kind. Be sure you get NITRAGIN for soybeans, alfalfa, clover—other legumes. Get it where you buy seed.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Keep to Low Point Foods on Lunches (See Recipes Below.)

Luncheon Aids

If you don't have the points for traditional staples to make up the children's mid-day lunches, then glance over the suggestions I'm giving you today. They're low on points, good on nourishment, they're high in health-giving vitamins and minerals.

Homemakers with growing children who must feed them at home during lunch, and then feed a very hungry husband at dinner, frequently find themselves low on points for these two important meals. They must be well balanced and satisfying or the family will suffer in days lost at school or at work and that's sabotage on the home front.

Sandwiches are an old stand-by and children look forward to them. To give a well-balanced lunch, they should be served with soups or salads. It is smart to save bits of leftover vegetables from dinner, even if they amount to only a quarter of a cup, and then to use them for a soup for luncheon the next day. Think of the colorful soups that you can create from green peas, spinach and carrots. And as for nutrition, there's there in vegetables without saying!

Creamed Soup (Leftover Vegetables) (Serves 4)

- 1/4 cup pulp (onions, carrots, celery, peas, string beans or lima beans)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter or substitute
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups milk

Add milk and seasonings to vegetable pulp. Blend butter with flour and add to milk and vegetable pulp. Bring to a boil and cook slowly for 4 minutes.

*Cream of Corn Soup (Serves 6)

- 2 cups corn (canned or leftover)
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2 cups milk
- 1 slice onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- Salt and pepper

Place corn, boiling water, milk and onion in a saucepan. Simmer for 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve. Brown flour and butter together. Stir in corn mixture. Simmer 5 minutes. Serve very hot.

When making sandwiches, there's a tendency to fall into the same pattern and create real monotony. New ideas can quickly pep up lunches whether they're at home or in the lunch box. It's easy to achieve variety if you use low-point cream cheese or some of the wedge-cream cheese or some of the wedge-cream cheese flavored with pimiento, relish and chives. These furnish nutritious butter fat too, and you can take it easy on butter for spreading:

Lynn Says

Secret Ideas: The little things you do for food are as important as the big things you do for them in cooking correctly. For example, the bread pudding may be good, but it will be better with a spoonful of spicy apple butter on top, or a dab of grape jelly.

Make your meat casseroles interesting by leaving the vegetables in larger pieces. When you make a biscuit topping, use different types of cutters for biscuits, the bread pudding, diamonds, cloverleafs, etc.

Apple slices fried in bacon add fragrance to your kitchen, and have that hard-to-resist flavor when served with old fashioned griddle cakes.

Crabtree's Idea Might Have Serious Draiback

Old man Crabtree had become a chronic case of "determined to be sick" and had been boring his doctor, young Johnson, with talk of being bedridden for life, death, funerals, etc.

One fine morning he met the physician in front of the drug store and said: "Doctor, I know I'm gonna die before long! Yes, huh, I know it! Feel it in my bones! I think I'd like to be cremated when I die. What do you think of the idea, doctor?"

"Well, Mr. Crabtree," the young doctor replied, "it may be all right, but your wife may complain of your leaving ashes around!"

Red Cross Asks $200,000,000 To Cover Wartime Needs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Confronted with responsibilities of unprecedented proportions, as the war enters its most crucial stage, and with a staggering task ahead in the post-war period, the American Red Cross opens its 1944 War Fund appeal March 1, confident that the American people will respond to the limit of their ability.

President Roosevelt, president of the American Red Cross, Norman H. Davis, chairman and active head of the vast organization, and Leon Fraser, national War Fund chairman, join in urging the people of this country to help Red Cross reach its national objective of $200,000,000 because of the vital part it must play within the next twelve months.

Chairman Davis, in opening the campaign, will stress the fact that with the decisive stage of the war at hand, the Red Cross must assume a greater burden than ever before, and at the same time must provide aid to servicemen being returned in ever-increasing numbers.

Red Cross operations over the entire world during 1943 have dwarfed its activities during the first two years of war.

An even greater burden will be placed on Red Cross services in 1944. Thousands of American men and women are now in Red Cross service with U. S. troops at home bases and overseas. Field directors, hospital, club and recreation workers are with American armed forces in virtually every command. Mr. Davis asserted.

Both in Europe and in the Far East, Red Cross workers have either gone with invasion forces into new combat areas, or have followed within a very limited time.

On the home front, the Red Cross has broadened its service tremendously. Field directors are serving in every sizable military establishment and camp throughout the country, and recreation and social service workers are located in Army and Naval hospitals.

One of the most important and necessary war-time Red Cross functions has been the collection of human blood for plasma. Thirty-five blood donor stations are now operating.

The dramatic story of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service, through which thousands of soldiers and sailors have been saved from death, began in February, 1941, when the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy asked the Red Cross to procure 15,000 pints of blood. Last year more than 4,700,000 pints of blood were collected for the Army and Navy. This year the goal is more than 5,000,000 pints.

With major battles of the war yet to come, the Army has asked the Red Cross to supply many millions of surgical dressings. American men wounded in battle will depend entirely on the vast Red Cross surgical dressing production program.

Numerous other Red Cross home operations, such as Prisoner of War packaging centers, where more than a million parcels for war prisoners are prepared each month for shipment overseas, are supported by citizen-participation in the Red Cross War Fund.

So extensive is Red Cross service during this war that every American citizen can contribute something to at least one of its functions. To continue this gigantic work, all Americans must assume their share of the responsibility of carrying on this far-reaching service.

The $200,000,000 quota will enable Red Cross to alleviate suffering and pain at home and abroad, and to carry on its vast military welfare service.

Leroy Nunnally of Metcalfe county reported a yield of 2,300 pounds of Ky. 16 burley from 1.1 acres.
 In Madison county, 240 bushels of hybrid seed corn have been purchased, Ky. 102 being the favorite.

Urgent Early Food Production Plans.

That food production plans should be started without delay is the urgent recommendation of the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics to the people of Kentucky. With more than 25 percent of the food produced in 1944 going to military forces and Allied Nations, it is important that every farm family produce its entire food supply if possible. Town and city folks, too, should increase the size of their gardens.

Planning for succession of crops, say garden specialists, will assure a variety of vegetables for the family table. From the early garden should come the vegetables for canning. They are of better quality, there are fewer insects and weeds to fight, there is less danger from drought, and the hardest work is done before midsummer. The late garden will provide storage crops.

Now is the time to check supplies and equipment needed for both the conservation and production of food. Waiting until the fertilizer, seed, garden tools, fruit jars, rubbers, lids and pressure cookers are needed, may be too late.

To assist in carrying on the biggest food production program ever undertaken in the state, the College of Agriculture and Home Economics has issued special leaflets which may be had at the offices of agricultural or home agents, or from the college. These include: "Grow Your Own Food," "Your Vegetable Garden," "More Milk from the Family Cow," "Chickens and Eggs for Home Use," "Grow Fruits and Berries for Home Use," "Can Fruits and Vegetables," "Sprays for the Home Fruit Garden," and "How to Raise Rabbits."

RURAL YOUTH CONFERENCE

This is the third of a series of articles regarding the Rural Youth Conference which is to be held for the rural youth of Boone County on Saturday, March 25, at the Florence School. It is for the youth of 12 years of age and over. The purpose of this meeting is to unite the youth so that there will be a mutual understanding and fellowship among them and to present and discuss the problems that confront them at the present time.

One of the problems in cooperation of federal and State Agricultural Agencies as a means to a democratic way of life. When this subject is discussed each person will have the opportunity to express himself or herself as to what they feel and how to work forward to a better solution.

All groups that are interested in the development and education of the rural youth are invited to assist and encourage the work. This country was founded on the democratic principles of life and it should be the desire of the youth of today to help in the development of all activities that will tend to keep it that way.

Again, keep the date of March 25 in mind, and be there—bring your friends.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Edith and Miss Mary Kathryn Beck, wish to thank all the kind friends and relatives for the appreciated kindness and loyalty shown during the illness of Lucy Holtzclaw, and a special thanks goes to Chambers and Grubbs for the nice way they conducted the funeral, also a special thanks to Brother George S. Carroll of the Christian Church for his consoling words.

Mary DeMoisey Dies Suddenly Of Heart Attack

Miss Mary Aileen DeMoisey, age 21, passed away suddenly Monday morning, March 6th from a heart attack, at Hazelwood Sanatorium, Louisville, Ky. Miss DeMoisey had been at Hazelwood the past five months, and was getting along nicely, taking the rest cure. It was thought that she would be able to return to her home by June or July. She was up Monday morning and ate a good breakfast. Mary was a devout member of the Baptist Church and a sweet, lovable girl.

Funeral services were held at the Walton Baptist Church Wednesday at 2:30 with the pastor, Rev. Garrett having charge, with several other ministers assisting. Interment in the Carpenter Cemetery at Richmond.

She is survived by her devoted parents, Rev. and Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey, one sister, Mrs. Charles Alphon of Crittenden, and five brothers: John R., Greendale, Frank, Walton; Bobby, Detroit, Mich.; Truitt of State University and Gene of Lawrenceburg; other close relatives and a multitude of friends.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rev. and Mrs. Burton C. Garrett and family have moved to the Baptist Parsonage in North Walton. We are happy to welcome this splendid family to our community.

Mission Study

Flying Kites Near Electric Power Lines Dangerous

With the kite flying season at hand, Community Public Safety Company again issues its annual warning about flying kites near electric power lines.

"Every year, scores of boys and girls throughout the country are killed or seriously injured flying kites near electric lines or trying to take down kites caught in electric wires," says R. M. Hall, power company manager. "This largely the result of ignorance of the hazards involved, for no child would intentionally risk his life or deliberately cause a service interruption. Therefore we ask the cooperation of parents in seeing that the following safety precautions are called to the attention of their children:

1. Don't use fine wire or metallic string.
2. Don't use wet string or fly kites in damp weather.
3. Don't use metal kite sticks or wire binders.
4. Don't climb poles to get kites caught in wires.
5. Don't poke sticks at tangled kites or try to pull them down by their tails.
6. Always fly kites in open fields away from power lines and busy highways.

"Both fine wire and the tinsel string sold for gift wrapping are conductors of electricity and so string that is wet," cautions Mr. Hall. "When a conductor of this kind falls across a power line, it may result in a fatal shock to the kite flyer, and may also cause a short circuit that will interrupt power service. Children should use only dry cotton string in flying their kites and they should avoid the use of metal or wire in making them. If a kite becomes tangled in electric lines it is best to call our office and let one of our men take it down. In climbing a pole to get a kite a child may come in contact with a live wire in attempting to pull it down by the tail or pole it loose with a stick, he may cause two wires to come together causing a service interruption."

Waste Paper Drive Successful In Boone County

Congratulations to communities having scrap paper drives! In most communities the Homemakers and 4-H have sponsored the drives. Everyone has cooperated by donating paper. The Government is still in urgent need of waste paper and we'd like to have paper drives again around house-cleaning time.

SAVE YOUR PAPER!

Following are weights for some communities: Bullittsville, 550 lbs.; Burlington, 1304; Constance, 555; Florence, 5500; Hamilton and Rabbit Hash, 915; Hebron, 450; Taylorsport, 445; Verona, 2745; Petersburg, 2800; Walton, 3700. Boone County has, in a second "pick-up" collected around 5000 lbs., judging by the size of the load. Exact figures not in yet.

In all communities the school gave good help. Both the Homemakers and Boy Scouts have sponsored drives in Florence. In Walton, the Woman's Club gave valuable help. In most part, was taken from the March Homemakers news letter sent out by Miss Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Miss Gillespie made arrangements with dealers, given help and information, in fact has proven to be the "Key Person" around whom the community chairman have worked.

Paper is one of the chief raw materials from which millions of paper board containers carrying food, ammunition, and equipment to American and Allied forces are made. Our need today for waste paper is greater than ever because of the shortage of pulpwood for making paper. The total amount for salvage is less because the most of that which is going over seas cannot be returned. This is a challenge to every household, every school and every industrial plant.

Anna Pearl Gaines, County Salvage Chairman.

W. M. S. of Walton Baptist Church To Meet March 15th.

The W. M. S. of the Walton Baptist Church will meet in the church Wednesday, March 15th for their regular monthly meeting.

Business session begins at 11 o'clock with Mrs. Wm. Soden, in the chair.

March Meeting Held By Woman's Literary Club.

The March meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club was held in the home of Mrs. E. E. Fry.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. Geo. S. Caroland reading the "Club Woman's Collect." The roll call was answered with a humorous thought. Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker presided over the business session.

The program was opened by an appropriate "Thought for the Day" by Mrs. M. Cloyd Johnson. She based her thought on a scripture from Romans, "We are saved by hope."

A poem entitled "Freedom's Searchlight," by John L. Vest was read by Mrs. W. W. Rouse. Mrs. Sam B. Sleet in her usual pleasing and entertaining manner gave the "History of Jane Todd Crawford."

Following the program the hostess served delicious refreshments to the following guest and members: Mrs. Chas. W. Thompson, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. Geo. S. Caroland, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. A. H. Gaines, Mrs. M. Cloyd Johnson, Mrs. A. R. Johnson, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. J. H. Mann, Mrs. R. G. Moore, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. O. C. Ransom, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet, Mrs. D. H. Vest and Mrs. J. L. Vest.

The April meeting will be at the home of Mrs. C. S. Chambers.

A. C. Johnson of Walton sold to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. May the six room residence owned by Mrs. Mattie Powers.

First Shoe Stamp To Expire April 30

Ration stamp No. 18 in Book One, good for one pair of shoes, will expire April 30, the OPA announced recently.

Shoe stamp No. 1 in Book Four will remain in effect for an indefinite period and another stamp will be validated May 1. OPA said that no estimate can be made now as to how long it will be before another stamp can be made valid after the May 1 issue. Expiration of No. 18 will put Book One out of business. There are no other valid stamps in it.

Morris M. Arnold Graduates From Naval Training School.

Morris M. Arnold, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Arnold and a former resident of Walton graduated February 18, 1944 from the Naval Air Technical Training Center at the Navy Pier in Chicago, Ill. He ranked second in his class with an average of 90 and was appointed an Aviation Machinist Mate Third Class upon graduation. Only 3 men out of 200 in his class received this rating. He is now being transferred to the huge Willow Run Bomber Plant at Detroit. There he will spend the next 5 weeks studying the structure and functioning of the massive four engine Liberator Bomber which is manufactured there. At the completion of his work there, he will be transferred to an advanced Naval Base as Chief Mechanic on one of these giant planes. During his training at Great Lakes, he made the highest grade among 500 men and men. While at the Navy Pier, he served as Company Clerk for his company, which gave him a leave of four nights out of every week to spend at his home at 4851 Sheridan Road.

Mrs. Arnold, who has been making her home with her husband in Chicago during his stay there, will continue to remain there, and carry on her work with the Army Service Forces War Bond Office. She intends to join him at the completion of the phase of his training, when he will be stationed at a permanent base. Mrs. Arnold will be transferred by the Army Service Forces by whom she is employed to wherever her husband may be stationed.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Arnold of Cincinnati, Ohio spent the week-end of Feb. 18 in Chicago attending the graduation exercises of their son Morris from the Navy Pier.

Hugh S. Arnold of Cincinnati, Ohio is leaving this week for Walla, Walla, Washington in the North Pacific, where he will be employed on a large defense job under the construction of DuPont Co. Mrs. Arnold will remain in Cincinnati where she is employed by Wright's at Lockland, Ohio.

Mrs. Annabel Metcalf

Mrs. Annabel Metcalf passed away in Booth Memorial Hospital early Tuesday morning following a long illness.

Services are being conducted today (Thursday) at 2 p. m. at the residence in Independence, with the Rev. Kenneth Bowen, pastor of the Madison Avenue Christian Church of which she was a member, will have charge of the services.

Burial was held in the Independence Cemetery.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Frazer and Mrs. Cover Morgan, both of Independence, four grand children and two great grand children.

Grubbs and Dorsey were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Kentucky Woman's Christian Missionary Societies To Meet.

The Kentucky Woman's Christian Missionary Societies of the Seventh District East, met in their Annual Convention at Falmouth on Tuesday, March 4th beginning at 10 a. m. Miss Wenona Wilkinson who spent many years as a Christian Teacher in China will be the main speaker both morning and afternoon. Miss Wilkinson has a thrilling story to tell of how she was able to help the Chinese people after the Japanese invasion on the 1500 mile trip to West Pres China. You are cordially invited to attend this meeting. Lunch will be served at the church.

Sailor Wounded When Gun Goes Off As He Sets It Down.

Seaman William Stanley Rich, 20 year old, Route 1, Walton, Ky., was shot in the left hand Monday night when a shotgun discharged accidentally as he set the weapon on the floor.

According to Covington Patrolmen Clay Elfert and Harman Case, the sailor was visiting his father at Union, Ky., when the accident occurred. Seaman Rich told police that he had his hand over the muzzle of the gun when it went off.

Seaman Rich was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, by neighbors. The sailor said he was on the way from Great Lakes, Ill. to his new base at Norfolk, Va., and had stopped over for a visit. His condition was reported to be fair.

Former Walton Girl Winner In Clothing Contest.

Miss Elaine Gardiner of Lexington, Kentucky won first prize, a $200.00 prize, in a clothing contest sponsored by the Purcell Department Store of that city. Miss Elaine entered a spring wool suit, which she constructed herself, in the wardrobe, Styles Division of the contest. Any girl lived within a fifty mile radius of Lexington was eligible to enter the contest. The garments were judged on the following: (1) originality, (2) design, (3) color, (4) suitable for girl, (5) workmanship, (6) material suitable for the garment.

As Elaine suit won the first prize it is being mailed to New York where it will be judged among the best garments selected from other states. The girl winning the first prize in New York will receive a $1000.00 bond and a three month trip to New York with all expenses paid. The National contest is sponsored by the Ladies Home Journal and Needle Craft Guild.

LaVerne Ryan and Johnnie Sturgeon of Verona and Leon Pennington of Walton left Friday for Ft. Thomas to begin their training for the Army.

Mrs. Julia West

Funeral services for Mrs. Julia West were conducted from Chambers and Grubbs Funeral Home Saturday, March 4th at 2 p. m. with Rev. R. F. DeMoisey in charge. Burial was in the cemetery of the Beaver Lick Christian Church.

Mrs. West passed away in her home Thursday following a short illness from pneumonia. She was a charter member of the Walton Christian Church, a lovely Christian character and one of Boone County's most progressive farmers.

She is survived by two daughters, Miss Amy West, Walton and Miss Mary West, a teacher in the "Model High School of Lexington, Ky. and one son, Sleet West and a Foster son, Charles Davis of Walton, other relatives and a host of friends.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

New Pastor Begins Ministry At Local Baptist Church

The beginning of the pastorate of Rev. Burton C. Garrett with the Walton Baptist Church was marked by a special union service at the church on Thursday evening, March 2nd.

Members of the three Walton Churches were present to welcome Rev. Garrett and his family to the Christian fellowship and labor of our community. General remarks of welcome were given by Rev. R. F. DeMoisey; welcome by the Methodist Church, by Rev. C. G. Dearing; welcome by the Christian Church, by Rev. G. S. Caroland. Rev. Garrett spoke briefly, cordially and sincerely in response to these expressions of welcome.

The program also included a prayer by Rev. D. E. Bedinger; congregational singing led by Joe Rouse; and two songs by a quartette composed of Mrs. Bryan Rector, Mrs. Jane Johnson, Joe Rouse and Cecil Gaines.

(This is written by a member of another church than the Baptist. He wishes to express the appreciation of other church people of Walton who were given the opportunity of welcoming this new leader and his family. It is sincerely hoped that this may be the beginning of a closer cooperation and unity of Christian work in our community.)

Local Girls Attend G. H. House Party At Georgetown College.

Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, Misses Margaret Percival, Jean Pennington, and Glenna Northcutt spent the week-end at Georgetown College, attending the G. A. House Party. There were 276 girls there with 60 churches represented.

Mrs. Roswell Owens, missionary to Palestine now home due to war conditions, and Miss Minnie Ladrum, missionary to Brazil, home on furlough were the honor-guests. Dr. and Mrs. Mein of Ohio were also there. Among their daughter, Margaret Mein, who is a student in the College.

Several Attend Red Cross Rally At Florence

The splendid attendance at the Red Cross Rally in Florence, February 28th and the first reports of the Red Cross War Fund Drive in progress, point to the fact that Boone County's quota of $8,700.00 will be raised, according to Chairman Rouse.

This does not mean that it will be easy. Our quota is twice that of last year, so our contributions must be twice as large. Each person is responsible for making his contribution. Solicitors have been appointed in each community, but if you are overlooked, you may contact your local chairman or send your check direct to County Chairman Rouse.

One of the functions of the Red Cross is the delivering of emergency messages pertaining to death, sickness, etc. between Service Men and their families. Now with a large number of new men, most of them Fathers, soon to be inducted from Boone County, demands for this help will be greatly increased. Our Service Men appreciate this link with home, which the Red Cross affords. They are also grateful for the things the Red Cross does for them personally, such as supplying blood plasma and bandages, recruiting nurses, providing field hospitals in all areas, maintaining service clubs and canteens where there is always to be found a touch of home even in the most distant lands.

The Red Cross is financed wholly through voluntary contributions. It is our privilege to be able to support this great organization, which is the only civilian group in a position to give such help to Service Men. "Make your gift as large as your heart."

UNION

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Points of Cincinnati was buried at Rice Cemetery at 2 p. m. last Tuesday.

Mrs. W. S. Friend spent last Wednesday with her mother and family in Dayton, Ky.

The many friends of Mrs. Kirtley McWethy were happy to see her out to church Sunday. We hope for her a complete recovery for she is missed by all her friends here.

Miss Mary Hood, 3 Gillispie,

Home Demonstration Agent of Burlington was calling on friends in Union on Friday.

Mrs. Omer Black had as her Sunday guests her son Charles and friend of Cincinnati.

Mrs. C. P. Hedges of Price Pike was at St. Mary's Hospital, Cincinnati on Wednesday to visit her sister, Mrs. J. Points who is confined there since Feb. 27th.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Setters and daughter Bonnie and Mrs. Clarence Norman are now located on Dixie highway, Erlanger. We will surely miss them from our midst.

The R. K. Newman family were hosts to quite a few relatives and friends on Sunday. The occasion being in honor of Pvt. Wm. Feldhaus who is home on a furlough from his camp in Georgia. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Feldhaus of Louisville and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and daughter Marie of Covington.

Several of our young married men were given their pre-induction examinations at Cincinnati last Thursday. Those known to have been placed are as follows: Winston Mason, William Greenup and Chris. Kearne in the Navy and Sherman Friend and Harry Glenn Dickerson into the Army. Since Sherman Friend has already enlisted in the U. S. Marines, he has appealed his case. Mrs. Sally K. Hicks has as her house guests at this time her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Valendingham of Owenton, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Jones were visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Slayback on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Earl Waters and son David Earl spent the week-end with her brother Elmer Noe and family.

VERONA

Take good heed therefore unto yourselves, that ye love the Lord your God.—Josh. 23:11

We are having a good rain at this time.

Rev. A. K. Johnson has returned home after a few days visit with his daughter at Winchester.

The Annie Armstrong Week of Prayer was observed at the church on Tuesday of last week. There were fourteen women present.

Mildred King spent the week end at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kemper attended church here Sunday and brought their son for his first trip to church.

Rev. Spahr preached his farewell sermon here Sunday night.

Rev. Spahr and family go to Cadiz, Trigg, County, Ky. Cadiz is a town of fifteen hundred.

The church is full time and furnishes a parsonage. Rev. Spahr was recommended to this church by men who knew his ability and the possibilities at that place.

The friends of Bro. Spahr and his capable wife showed their appreciation of their work here with a love offering on Sunday morning. May God's blessing be with this good family on their new field.

NICHOLSON

Air Student, Clifford W. Weldon of Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky. spent the week-end at home with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Weldon. Miss Eva Kelly of Georgetown College accompanied Mr. Weldon home for a visit with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. George Kelly.

TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

THIS communication is a reply to the Courier-Journal's editorial of March 2, entitled "No Velvet Glove on this Iron Hand", based upon its front page news story of March 1, concerning the failure of the Senate to pass the bill increasing the weight of trucks to 40,000 pounds.

The purposes of the communication are: (1) to refute the implication in the news item and the editorial that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company controls the Kentucky Senate, which is in effect an insult to those members who recommitment and thus defeated the truck bill by a vote of 21 to 15; and (2) to disprove the claim of the Courier-Journal that the L. & N., by its opposition to this truck bill, was endeavoring to defeat legislation that is in the public interest.

THE ATTACK ON THE SENATE

We assert that there is no justification whatever for the reflection upon the integrity and intelligence of the Senate members. The L. & N., in conjunction with the Chesapeake & Ohio, Illinois Central, Southern, and other Kentucky railroads who jointly act through the Kentucky Railroad Association, having been advised by the truckers' own repeated publications that this bill would be introduced, prepared to meet the issue by presenting the facts to the Legislature and the public. This was done solely by public advertisement through circulars and pamphlets, and argument before the Committee in rebuttal to the like circulars, pamphlets and arguments of the truckers. Thus the Senate reached the same conclusion as that of both houses of the Legislature in 1932, when the original weight limit bill was passed.

In 1934, 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1940, the big truckers sought to increase the limits, but the Legislature of its own accord, and certainly through no domination of the L. & N., defeated such efforts. As illustrative of continued opposition of the public, in the last preceding contest, in 1940, many representatives of the public vigorously resisted efforts to increase weight limits, among others, 75 Fiscal Counts, 20 City Councils or Officials, the Associations of County Judges, Commonwealth Attorneys and County Attorneys, numerous civic organizations and clubs, and many newspapers.

Public Sentiment Supported the Passage of the 1932 Act

The Courier-Journal seeks to give the impression that the 1932 Act was passed, not as a result of public demand, but through the domination of the L. & N. The fact that public opinion almost unanimously supported the bill is shown by the vote of 34 to 1 in the Senate and in the House by 88 to 5. Its enactment was strongly advocated by the Chairman of the Highway Commission. The Courier-Journal approved this law. In its issue of January 1, 1934, it said:

"Legislators should resist vigorously the effort to increase the limitation on weight and size of trucks permitted to operate on State roads."

And on January 6, 1934, it denounced the effort to increase the limits, as follows:

"To increase these dimensions would be an outrage. . . . For ordinary commercial traffic, including farmers, manufacturers, merchants' trucks, the present size limits are large enough. They might even be reduced."

In reflection of public opinion in the matter of big trucks, just before the 1936 Legislature, the Louisville Times said on November 6, 1935:

"There might even be, eventually, public carrier highways, or one-way roads, as a result of popular protests against conditions the public now suffers too patiently."

Surely it will not be contended that the L. & N. then dominated the Courier-Journal and Times, but there would be as much justification for that as there is for the charge that it then dominated or now dominates the Legislature.

A Permanent Increase of Truck Weights Is Not Now Justified

In 1942 an act was passed which increased the limit, but only for the duration. The 40,000-pound limit is in use now, and will be until the end of the emergency. The sole purpose of this bill, advantageous only to the big truckers, is to saddle these increases upon the people after the emergency, regardless of the unpredictable physical condition of the roads at that time and the equally unpredictable funds then available for road construction and maintenance. In view of these unknown factors, permanent legislation as to truck weights and length is, at this time, wholly unjustified.

THE PROPOSED WEIGHT INCREASE IS NOT IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST

In objecting to the bill to increase the weight and size of trucks, we are not opposing the public interest. From the beginning of this controversy we have invariably stated that if we could not show that our view was in the public interest, then we would not ask the public's support.

The Louisville Times recently declared that the sole issue was whether or not the State's roads were strong enough to carry the additional loads. There is also the additional issue as to whether such increased weights are justified in the light of the increased danger and inconvenience to the traveling public.

Damage to the Roads

Upon the issue stated by the Times there is ample support for the proposition that the damaging effect of heavy trucks is alone sufficient to defeat this bill. Such authorities as Major General Phillip B. Fleming, Administrator of Federal Works Agency; Major General C. P. Gross, Chief of Transportation, Service of Supply, U. S. Army; Mr. Donald Kennedy, former President of the National Association of State Highway Officials; and many other state highway officials, have recently stated that the war-time traffic is destroying the highways of the nation. For example, the Chief Highway Engineer of North Carolina said that, "It will take $50,000,000 and three to four years' work to put North Carolina's highways back into the same shape they were before Pearl Harbor." Surely, no one will contend that Kentucky's highways can stand the heavy truck traffic better than highways of other states.

Kentucky Highways Are Inadequate for Heavy Traffic

But looking to the condition, and capacity of Kentucky highways, we refer to testimony of Mr. J. Lyter Donaldson, then Highway Commissioner, at a hearing before a United States Senate Committee in 1942, when the truckers were endeavoring to take the regulation of size and weight of trucks away from the states and leave that entire subject to the Interstate Commerce Commission. His testimony was to the effect that since the Kentucky highway system had not been constructed for loads in excess of 18,000 pounds, only the war emergency justified the State in permitting the use of its highways by heavy trucks. Among other things he said, referring to the State highway system:

"... most of our mileage is too narrow for safe accommodation of heavy mixed traffic. . . . In the words of our chief highway engineer, we have 'several hundred bridges which are not only inadequate, but dangerous' from the standpoint of either of load capacity, width or vertical clearance. . . . Even our best roads are not by any means composed of high-type paving."

As to the country roads, constituting 78 per cent of the highways, he said:

"... no one could reasonably contend that larger or heavier trucks should be permitted on any of them."

As to which he pertinently added:

"... as a practical matter, it would be quite impossible to keep them off such roads if they were allowed on State highways."

Kentucky's Road Situation Is Not Comparable to That of Other States

The inadequacy of the State highway system to permit the operation of heavy trucks is a consequence of the State's traditional policy of building its roads out of current funds. Other States, with greater resources, or by the use of borrowed money, have better and higher type roads. The State of Kentucky has no road debt. Compare its condition with that of our neighboring State of Tennessee, with a road debt of $67,000,000 and of the Southern states generally, with a combined road debt of $753,000,000.

What is the consideration offered to the public and to the State to justify it in assuming the increased cost of construction and maintenance of highways, which would be incurred if those highways were made adequate for oversize trucks? And what is the consideration for the added inconvenience and danger to the traveling public incident to the operation of such trucks?

The L. & N. is a citizen of Kentucky and it believes a good citizen. It has invested about $150,000,000 in fixed property and for the expansion of industry and commerce therein. It pays taxes for the support of the State and local governments, roads and schools. It gives employment to approximately 17,500 persons in Kentucky. Its welfare is inextricably tied to the development and prosperity of the State. Like any other citizen and taxpayer, it has the right to present its views to the public and Legislature on any matters that affect its interests, but it asserts with confidence that it has not taken an attitude on any controversial question which is inconsistent with the ultimate public interest.

Dear Editors:

I do not wish to trouble you with my correspondence, however I want to take the opportunity to thank you for sending me your newspaper. I really enjoy it.

The article in the December issue on the waste of food supply should be stressed more. I can't agree with Mr. Hanson on the soldiers consuming only 1916 pounds of food annually, maybe it is because I am one of those often spoken of (chow hounds). You might ask Mrs. Stephens about that.

Things are as well as could be expected here in the E. T. O. I am just a few miles from Sgt. Campbell, but have been hospitalized for almost two months now and it has been impossible for me to see him. I do wish to see him in the near future.

Thanking you again for your kindness in sending me the paper, I remain,

Your truly,
W. C. Ennis.

LETTERS FROM OUR BOYS IN SERVICE

The following letter was received by Mr. Whitson and Mr. Grover Ransom of Verona from Lt. W. D. Scroggin who is stationed somewhere in Alaska.

Dear Mr. Whitson & Grover:

Finally arrived at my destination after a long, long voyage through the air and by water. I was originally scheduled for Kodiak, Alaska but when I got there and they had a good look at a Kentucky "Hilly Billy" they thought I should get out closer to where things happen. This place bears up to its name (Cold Bay) and I don't mean maybe. The duty I have is to my liking and I enjoy the snow as we have special clothing for it. It is really beautiful when the sun shines (seldom) and there are several active volcanoes I can see daily from my hut. Plenty of good hunting more ways than one.

I have found another Kentucky up here from Harlan County who is in my unit. I have two native Alaska Indians among my assistants and they are good men. Received a promotion a short time ago and am now a full Senior Lieutenant, but you couldn't tell me from an Eskimo in this cold weather clothing. Went to sea for 4 or 5 days and had an exciting time in the North Pacific.

News is limited up here but I could give you quite a bit if not for strict censorship regulations. For that reason letters are limited to the ordinary things and places. But as this is no ordinary place you just have to use your imagination and read behind the lines.

Would appreciate hearing from you both when you find time as Verona seems like a place a long way off right now and I sure will be able to appreciate the sight of her and you folks a great deal more than ever when this game is over.

Will have to close wishing you both the best of luck and my regards to the family and friends.

Your friend,
Bill Scroggin

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russ Announce Finnish Peace Terms; Jap Defense Posts Crumble in Pacific; Allied Bombers Hit Fortress Europe, Blast Nazi War Plants, Installations

Russia—German troops are shown moving back from eastern front in thick, Russian mud. (See Russia.)

EUROPE: Pound Plane Plants

Thousands of Allied bombers roared over Hitler's vaunted Fortress Europe striking at Nazi war industries and defense installations while U. S. and British troops slugged it out with the Germans below Rome.

In an effort to cripple Nazi resistance to second-front operations, and hammering of European industry, the Allies' big heavies continued to pound at German fighter-plane factories, while squads of lighter bombers dived over the English channel to pester at the enemy's network of defense works in southern France.

At the Anzio beachhead below Rome, Allied troops traded stiff blows with German armored forces punching at the northern and western edges of the U. S. and British positions, while both sides brought up reinforcements for the mountain fighting around Cassino.

SOLDIER VOTE: Consider Compromise

Congressional wrangling over the soldier vote resulted in the offer of a compromise proposal under which men and women in the service could use the blank federal ballot, however, they must swear that they tried to obtain an absentee ballot from their state by October 1.

Before any service personnel could use the federal ballot, however, they must swear that they tried to obtain an absentee ballot from their state by October 1.

Proposed by Representatives LeCompte (Iowa) and Bonner (N. C.), the compromise sought to reconcile those who insist on the states' rights supervisory election laws and others who declare that because of difficult battle conditions a simple ballot should be provided.

RUSSIA: Finnish Terms

As it was reported that the Finns were prepared to move as many as 1,500,000 people to Sweden if peace negotiations with Russia fail, Moscow publicly announced its terms to Finland.

Terms included: 1. Internment of German troops and ships in Finland; 2. Restoration of boundaries of the 1940 peace; 3. Return of Allied prisoners; 4. Discussion of partial mobilization of Finnish army; 5. Discussion of Finnish reparations for war damages; and 6. Discussion of control over northern Finnish territory.

As Russo-Finnish peace talks stepped in tempo, the Red army continued its drive eastward toward the Baltic states of Estonia and Latvia.

U. S. Aid

With its great industrial centers of Stalingrad, Kharkov, and Stalin, etc., laid in rubble and its vast agricultural belts overrun, Russia's dependence upon the U. S. for continuing effective resistance against Germany was emphasized in figures released on American aid to the Reds.

Since 1941, lend-lease assistance to Russia included: 7,800 planes; 4,700 tanks and tank destroyers; 170,000 trucks; 35,000 jeeps; 25,000 other vehicles, and 177,000 tons of explosives.

Other assistance: 2,250,000 tons of food; 6,000,000 pairs of boots; 9,000 tons of seeds; 1,350,000 tons of steel; 384,000 tons of aluminum and other metal; 740,000 tons of oil and gasoline; 145,000 tons of refinery equipment, and live-making machinery worth 4,000,000 tons capacity.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SPEEDBOATS: Speeds of more than 200 miles per hour will be possible for speedboats after the war, Gar Wood, noted boat racer and designer, believes. New and lighter metals, more powerful engines, and streamlined hulls will accomplish these remarkable speeds, Wood said. The present record, which he holds, is 125 miles per hour set in 1932 with Miss America X.

VITAMINS: Because of mounting demands, preparations of vitamin A have been placed under allocation to insure equitable distribution. The present rate of consumption will soon eat into the reserves.

IRON ORE: What is termed the "greatest known mass of hard iron ore in the world" in Cape Peak in Brazil, will soon be yielding iron for American and British factories.

MORE MEAT: Ease Rationing

With production of meat at federally inspected plants reported at 1,665,000 pounds for February and with storage plants bulging with meat stocks, civilians' share of the huge supply was increased by OPA's reduction of point values for pork and beef.

Because of the valuation of all stamps at ten points and the use of ration tickets, OPA figured the households will be able to buy about 8 per cent more meat in March and April.

As OPA announced the point cuts, the nation's stockyards reported the second lowest cattle receipts since last July, with predictions that the smaller volume will be felt in consumer channels in coming months. Hog receipts went into their usual seasonal decline.

FARM WAGES: Face Stabilization

Because of heavy bidding for a available agricultural labor, farm wages have been frozen in many states during 1944, especially for truck gardening. W. T. Ham of the War Food Administration's wage stabilization division declared.

Although wage ceilings only were established in California and Florida during 1943 when citrus and asparagus growers competed frantically for pickers, piece work wages paid in other areas tended to draw employees from canneries to the fields.

This year labor will be scarcer and wages will tend to rise on the farm, Ham said. "Growers will be eager to prevent the wages rising beyond reason, and it will be impossible to keep the farms from robbing the canneries of their help and also from pirating one another's employees. I think wage limitations will be imposed in many states."

CIO:

Red, Lewis Says

Organizer and chief of the CIO before pulling out of it because of differences over political policies, United Mine Worker Boss John L. Lewis declared communists were in control of the CIO's membership.

Said Lewis, whose UMW recently applied for readmittance into the AFL after being expelled, "When I was organizing the CIO we grew up . . . But if I had not . . . left Hillman, Lewis and Murray in happier days.

The CIO in 1940 . . . the communists would have been weeded out long before now. Instead . . . BURMA: Break Trap Trapped for three weeks by Japanese units attacking from all sides the fifth and seventh Indian divisions finally were relieved by Allied counterattacks as heavy fighting continued in Burma.

As Admiral Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia forces thrust through the dense mountain jungle along the eastern Burmese border, gains were recorded in the north, where Chinese troops under command of U. S. Gen. Joseph Stilwell fought to open a supply road to Chungking.

By relieving the Indian divisions, the Allies held their footing along the Nyaung-U pass, gateway to southern Burma from India.

U. S. JAPS: Demand Rights

Restoration of their rights as citizens and equal opportunity for service and advancement in the military forces were demanded by Jap-Americans of the Granada, Colo., internment camp.

Asking that they be accorded their constitutional privileges, the Jap-Americans demanded that they be allowed to live and live wherever they choose, with any restrictions of policy including adequate government protection and financial aid. The government also was asked to help distinguish the difference between loyal Jap-Americans and the people of the Japanese empire.

TRUCKS

By April or May production of trucks for commercial use should be in high gear, a survey of Detroit companies reveals. More than 2,600 units for commercial use were made in January, and it is estimated that 3,000 were turned out in February. One big manufacturer stated that he had to produce 12,000 units for a lend-lease contract. Another plant located in Cleveland reported that it built 385 trucks in February for military use and that this would be increased to 600 by May.

Allied Command Aided By French Underground

Quarter of Million Men in France Said to Be Ready, Anxious and Able to Bear Arms Against Germans.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"Arms are what we want, arms, arms, arms!"

My companion leaned across the table and pounded it with Gallic fervor, his black eyes flashing. It was our first meeting for more than a year, and I knew that those eyes fixed on me so earnestly had met the light of the desert sun, for he had fought with the Free French forces under De Gaulle in Africa and had had many an adventure.

He returned for this visit to his temporary home. "We have a quarter of a million men in the French underground, ready, willing, able and anxious to bear arms—only one out of 20 of those has a single firearm, and that means that while 12 men can harass the German forces, as they are doing every day and every night, despite their inadequate help from the outside, 238 others must sit, twiddling their thumbs. They are getting very tired of waiting, but their ennui would leave them if firearms could be put in their hands. If America will provide them, we will guarantee to get them into France, we will guarantee to transport them and distribute them."

It is very difficult to write of that shadowy world, the European underground, for even the few scraps of information which one might piece together make a dangerous pattern which might bring swift enemy reprisal.

There is no question about the efficiency and the effectiveness of this silent army in France. In all the occupied countries of the continent, there is no question about the fact that through it flows a steady stream of information out of the heart of the enemy territory right back to the Allied high command. Today two-thirds of the Croustot factories, once the makers of the famous French 75, lack a vital source of the German arms supply. Have been put out of commission by a group of loyal Frenchmen, according to a story that is now current in Washington.

Few Involved

They did it at very little expense, few men were involved, and not a single civilian life was lost. He did it by blowing up a key dam and thus cutting off the electric power from the (N. K. N.). At least three expensive Allied air raids, long and carefully planned, had failed to destroy this dam.

Not long ago, word came to another group of these French guerrillas that a German munition train was about to move over a certain stretch of track. The bolts were removed and the rails replaced. Then came the word that a German munition train was a passenger train. Immediately men were sent out to flag the passenger train and order it to slow down while other men worked feverishly to put the bolts and the passenger train went safely. Once more, the bolts were withdrawn and before long the munition train was a wrecked and smoking mass. No French civilian had been injured.

Less dramatic is the thankless and difficult task which the French National Committee of Liberation has before it, attempting to work out with the provisional assembly, the machinery for administering the affairs of France as they are taken over by the Allied armies. The committee must labor in an atmosphere of deliberation and enforced delay which the mood of the French civilian has been injured.

The members of the French National Committee of Liberation, with headquarters in Algiers, have gradually achieved more and more authority under the Allies. There have been many obstacles to overcome and the French, of course, feel that they have not been given the free hand which they desired and deserved. However, within recent weeks, it has been evident that the Allies are changing their ultra-conservative policy and it is now taken for granted that representatives of this committee, and later the provisional assembly, which meets in Algiers, and which is made up of persons representing various groups in France, will be given the responsibilities of administering the reoccupied French territory as it is liberated, piece by piece; also of creating the machinery for the final plebiscite which will decide the permanent government.

Great Difficulties

The committee itself works under great difficulties. Many of the members are utterly inexperienced in politics and they have responsibilities much greater than a normal governmental body would have. They must serve as an administrative agency, they must serve as a quasi-legislative body, and they must likewise plan regulations governing procedure in the interim between liberation of France and the time when a free election is held.

The recent meeting of the assembly (February 29) began the long and complicated consideration of the plans for the provisional government.

One typical plan suggested can now be described in some detail although, of course, it is likely to be modified as the result of the discussion in the coming weeks and months, and in its application there-

It covers, roughly, two phases. First, is partial liberation. Just as soon as the Allies have taken over a portion of France and the military organization moves forward, building, which would be placed in French under this plan. Immediately municipal officers would be selected, councils for each urban which might bring swift enemy reprisal.

Finally, the day comes when Allied troops march down the Champs Elysees and across the Seine to the Place du Palais Bourbon. Then the ancient building, which housed the chamber of deputies of the Third Republic, will open its doors to the new assembly. By this time, it will probably be present at least two-thirds of France.

Second Step

Now the second step of the plan, now considered, will be taken.

The assembly will have reached, depending on the populations liberated, some 400 members. Then the provisional government (I use the word "government" in the European sense; we would call it the "cabinet" with an executive head) would be chosen by the assembly. The national committee would cease to be the executive body but would assist the assembly, under this chosen government, to work out the plan for the general election which would decide upon the form of government which France would have.

However, this election could not be held at once for the thousands upon thousands of Frenchmen taken from their homes for forced labor in Germany and elsewhere would have to be repatriated first.

Every attempt is now being made to carry out the preliminary procedures in the spirit, if not exactly in accordance with the letter of the French constitution and law. There are, however, many practical difficulties which arise. Take the question of woman suffrage. Under the French constitution, women are not permitted to vote. However, at present, with most of the men away in the army or as deportees in Germany, the women make up the majority of the population. Therefore it would be desirable for them to cast the ballot in order to get a true representative opinion of any locality.

Meanwhile, the very Frenchman, in and out of his country, is for arms and ammunition, dynamite and the other tools of war. He is in a dilemma with which he believes they can win the war, but communications and assist the invasion.

Medals and Decorations

While a medal is given to everyone who has taken part in a military campaign or war, a decoration is presented for a specific act of gallantry. This distinction is generally misunderstood because several decorations are officially called medals.

America's highest award, the Medal of Honor, is really a decoration.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Doc Mitchell got all his patients fixed up for one night and slipped off to Louisville to see one of the Southeastern Conference basketball games.

"Had the time of my life," he said next day. "Those few hours of relaxation did me a world of good!"

What impressed Doc most was the fine teamwork of our boys from Lexington—and being a Kentuckian, born and bred, he was sure glad to see 'em win.

"I never saw the like," he said. "Why, every time that ball was passed, one of our boys was right there—waitin' to receive it!"

"Well, that's how important teamwork is—teamwork in play, in war, in farming, in law-enforcement—teamwork in industry. The kind of teamwork employed by Kentucky brewers in seeing that licensed beer retailers maintain a clean, wholesome, orderly surroundings at all times.

From where I sit, they're doing a mighty fine job!"

Indian BEEF

HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

LEW BURNETT has been engaged by TOM ARNOLD, owner of the Cross T. to act as trail boss on the drive from southern Texas to Oklahoma on the night of 1872. Tom, with his son and daughter, STEVE and JOY, are moving to Wyoming. Tom must lead a team of horses to the Indian agency by September 1, or a profitable contract. Lew has been engaged to lead the team of horses to the Indian agency by September 1, or a profitable contract. Lew has been engaged to lead the team of horses to the Indian agency by September 1, or a profitable contract.

Against its white light all of the widespread herd stood out briefly, caught in tossing waves, gone too soon for him to locate any rider. Someone was close before he heard the pounding of hoofs. Then the rider was alongside, Jim Hope's high young voice yelling, "Lew!"

"All right," he yelled back. "Any more coming?" "Somewhere. What you want me to do?"

"Go on and stay clear! Don't ride too close." He was alone again, holding his own running pace beside the herd.

The morning star was up, large and yellow, straight ahead, dawn was green in the sky when he saw the first of other bunches coming out of the hills to the north. They were more along the river, north. He felt better. And as those straggling lines converged with his on the flat shelf of the mesa, he saw with each one that dead trail he

Joe Wheat, Ash Brownstone and Charley Storms were the first to join their cattle in. They rode back. He saw that Charley hadn't stopped for his pants but had ridden the night in his long-legged undergarments. They trailed behind the herd. Farther on, when Quarterlight and Moonlight Bailey angled in from the river with their strays, rode up to shape the point with Rebel John. The herd was growing. Ahead, Neal Good waited with a smaller bunch. Four men were still missing, Clay and Ed Splann, Steve and Tom Arnold.

The longhorns' run had taken them far west, and it was not until after two hours of steady, speechless riding that he saw Ovie H. Jackson's camp smoke lift from the junction of the river and its tributary creek.

He searched along the creek's growth for the trampled part where the herd had been. He brought it back. An icy coldness crept over his skin.

"John," he said and pointed, "To better go look." It was a useless horse. Even from half a mile off he knew by the way the animal was standing, crookedly, with a tired patience, that it had broken a leg. Closer, he saw the saddle under its belly. Its head raised a little as he approached but dropped again. He drew his gun and put the muzzle close behind one pointed ear and felt sick as he pulled the trigger.

Dragging tracks led toward the creek. He followed them, steered against a thing he had looked upon before and then he saw the memories. His shot had brought two riders starting out of the distant river trees near camp. He couldn't tell who they were. Then suddenly his horse moaned, spread its legs and stopped. The trampled swath of creekbottom willow lay beyond the low bank. He looked where the animal's ears pointed and in that first moment felt no shock. All of his senses seemed to have gone dead.

In that strangely suspended feeling he turned back, fired his gun in the air and waved the men on from the herd. They looped toward him. When they saw the horse he had shot no one asked for the rider.

He said, "It's Tom," and saw the rider's head nod. The man's work, only set a little more.

The two from camp were close now. Clay and Splann, hurried on by his second shot. It struck him that they didn't look worn out like the rest of the men. Clay puffed in beside him. "Who is it?"

He jerked a nod toward the creek. "Over there." Clay rode over and sat there and took his time about coming back. All expression on his full, ruddy face was veiled by an oddly smoothed-out look. He shook his head. "Tough. I'll go in, Lew, and head 'em."

"No," he said, "not yet." Clay's huge body straightened up in the saddle. "Why not?" His voice carried a new power.

"There's no use," he said. "Not till afterward. We're too far from civilization to go in for a shot now. It will have to be here, right now. Let Joy have some other memory. Where's Steve?"

In a little silence, with his question unanswered, he saw something was coming that had been about him already in his own mind. But he hadn't expected it would come so soon.

Then Clay said, "Steve's in camp. I'm going in. This makes a difference, Lew. A big one. You might as well know that."

"Not one bit!" He swung his horse over close. "What you're figuring is wrong. You're taking up orders till it does." An outraged sense turned him as bitterly hard as he had ever felt. "What a time you've had! He backed off, holding the stare of Clay's blue eyes.

"John," he said, "you come with me." He hung a last look at Clay. "The rest of you stay here. I'm riding on out of hearing. Quarterlight growled. There's a hyena for you!"

TO YOUR Good Health

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

FUNCTIONAL ILLS
I sometimes wonder if we should criticize those who seem always to have none but slight, yet careful examination after examination fails to show any real trouble. The truth of the matter is that many of these individuals really do suffer with the symptoms they describe and are as much entitled to our consideration as those who have these same symptoms due to real or organic disease.

Dr. Barton In these times the majority claim to have to do with the stomach and intestine. Thus Dr. F. J. Gregg and R. R. Snowden of the Pittsburgh Diagnostic Clinic, in the Review of Gastroenterology (stomach and intestine) point out that of 5,000 consecutive patients studied, 2,189 had definite symptoms in stomach and intestine.

Now why did this large number of patients come to this department for examination in this department of the clinic. This would include test meals, X-rays and other methods.

Of the 2,189 cases with stomach and intestinal symptoms, 1,030, almost half, were found to have functional (not true or organic) disease. Now why did this large number or percentage of patients go to the clinic for relief of their symptoms when there was no true or organic disease of the stomach or intestine present?

These physicians readily explain this as their study of the symptoms, physical and laboratory results present in these patients with "functional" dyspepsia as compared with these same factors in those in whom true or organic disease was present, shows there is no characteristic or definite group of symptoms or physical signs to distinguish organic from functional diseases.

It means that any group of signs, symptoms, or disturbances in the stomach and intestine cannot be definitely shown to be organic or functional until there is a complete study of stomach, intestine and gall bladder.

The lesson here is that we should not believe we have cancer, ulcer, or other organic disease of stomach or intestine because certain symptoms are present. Nor should we conclude ourselves free of cancer, ulcer or other organic disease because these or other symptoms are not present. Only a "complete" examination will reveal the truth.

This same lesson may apply to heart, blood vessel, kidney and other parts of the body.

Chronic Indigestion May Be Cancer

In an article in Annals of Internal Medicine, Lancaster, Pa., Drs. I. W. Field and I. Bush divide cases of cancer of the stomach into two groups: Those in which cancer develops in the lining surface of a healthy stomach and those in which the cancer develops on a previously diseased stomach surface.

Because 7 of every 10 stomach cancers develop on a previously healthy surface, Drs. Field and Bush argue that cancer of the stomach may be prevented by early removal of the cancer.

It is difficult to foretell how many of these cases that undergo operation will be alive after five years, but because this fact is not a "made up" fact, and with a successful operation, the patient can go on for many years without a return of the cancer.

The group in which the cancer develops on a previously diseased stomach surface amounts to 30 percent of all cases, and stomach disturbances were present for many years before cancer developed, while in others the growth of the cancer is so slow that it remains in the same place and condition for several years. There are three separate groups of stomach ailments on which cancer develops: (1) gastritis, (2) polyps, and (3) stomach ulcer. Cancer which develops on a stomach surface having one of these ailments has a tendency to grow much slower, is less dangerous, and when discovered early and removed, offers a greater prolongation of life and permanent cure.

If middle-aged, don't delay obtaining treatment for indigestion.

QUESTION BOX
Q.—Can a person suffering with peptic ulcers be cured?
A.—Peptic ulcers can be cured. It is not as serious as nephritis. Most cases are caused by the organism Clostridium bacillus.

Q.—What are the symptoms of an ulcerated stomach?
A.—Main symptom is pain 2 to 3 1/2 hours after every meal. Pain is relieved by soda or other alkali or by food.

JESUS CRUCIFIED
LESSON TEXT: Mark 15:22-27, 29-30. GOLDEN TEXT: He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.

The crucifixion of Christ brings us to that darkest of all days in the history of the world, when wicked men crucified humanity for its sin. The crucifixion of Christ brings us to that darkest of all days in the history of the world, when wicked men crucified humanity for its sin. The crucifixion of Christ brings us to that darkest of all days in the history of the world, when wicked men crucified humanity for its sin.

The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, it is a symbol of the love of God for the world. The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, it is a symbol of the love of God for the world. The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, it is a symbol of the love of God for the world.

What does Calvary mean to us? It means that—

1. The Saviour Died So We Could Live (v. 22-27).

The details of and circumstances surrounding the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspeakable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry, "For me, for me!" How can any believer contemplate the cross and withhold self substance, or service from Christ?

There would be less careless, selfish living if we would go often to the story of the death of Christ and recognize the loving, sacrificial devotion of Christ.

Equally heart-searching is the meaning of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23); he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23); and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here at the cross he meets that one "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that he, being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness" (1 Pet. 2:24).

Note the difference between the two thieves who were hanged with Jesus, for it is the difference between those who face Christ in the cross and those who face Christ in the cross.

One cried out to Him (Luke 23:39), while the other, repentant, had a faith that looked all the way into Paradise (v. 42).

II. The Son Was Forsaken So We Could Be Accepted (v. 29-30).

Awful was the railing and mocking which our Lord endured on the cross. It must have made His devoted, loving heart well-nigh break as He saw the scorn of the very ones He came to save.

This same attitude may apply to that moment when He knew no sin "was made sin for us" (II Cor. 5:21). Bearing the awful load of the sin of the world He knew the Father, agony of being forsaken of the Father. He turned His head away and we hear that saddest of all cries, "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?"

We cannot fathom the full meaning of that hour, we are not able to explain it, we can only accept it and thank God that because He did not spare His own Son, we may be "made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21). He died that we might live. He was forsaken that we might be "accepted in him" (Eph. 1:6).

After the darkness, however, comes the light. He died not as a martyr, a vanquished gladiator defeated in battle; no, there was victory.

III. The Veil Was Rent So We Could Enter (v. 37-39).

The death of Jesus was not the pitiful weakening of a human martyr. Here was the Son of God, crying with a loud voice (v. 37), giving up His spirit to the Father (Luke 23:46), declaring that the work of redemption was "finished."

As a visible indication of that fact, that as a declaration that old dispensation of law had given place to the new dispensation of grace, God tore the temple veil in twain. Only He could have done it. No man could have torn this sixty-foot long, twenty-foot wide, and inch-thick curtain, and note that it was torn from top to bottom. This was the act of God. This veil had hung in the temple to keep all but the high priest out of the Holy of Holies, and he entered with fear and trembling but once a year as the representative of the people.

Now all this is changed. We have now, "brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil."

Therefore, "let us draw near with true hearts and full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:22).

Old Favorites In Wartime Roles Please Family

Apples and cheese are old favorites in this pie. The crust is simple and baked ahead of time. Only a small amount of cheese is required for topping. The pie may be served hot or cold.

What are your fondest memories of home? My guess is that it's the wonderful aroma of baking day in mother's kitchen! Baking is fun and the results are more than gratifying. Not only do you enjoy the food immensely in the process of making, but there's great pleasure in placing a pie, muffins, coffee cake or whatever, that you yourself made, in front of the family. Oven should be checked frequently to assure success in baking. Follow baking temperature and time carefully: they'll help you get good results.

How about an apple pie tonight? Don't say you don't have time because this is as simple as Simon. If you have ready-made-up pastry in the refrigerator, then it will be simpler than ever to whip up this pie and surprise the family.

*Apple Cheese Pie.
(Serves 6)
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
2 to 4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 quart peeled, sliced apples
Baked 8-inch pastry shell
1/2 lb. 1/2 cup grated sharp American cheese
Combine sugar, water and lemon juice in saucepan and bring to a boil. Then add sliced apples and simmer, covered, until apples are soft, stirring occasionally. Arrange apples in baked pastry shell and sprinkle grated cheese over top. Place under broiler to toast cheese topping, or serve without broiling, if desired. Serve pie warm or cold, as preferred.

Save Used Fat!
Since cocoa is now obtainable in limited quantities, perhaps you might like to indulge in that favorite of cakes:

One-Egg Chocolate Cake.
1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
8 tablespoons semi-sweet chocolate or 4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Mix and sift flour, baking powder and soda. Cook 2 tablespoons sugar, water and cocoa for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Cream shortening and remaining sugar together. Add egg; beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients. Add chocolate mixture, milk and vanilla. Bake in small layer cake tins or one square pan in a moderate (350 degree) oven 20 minutes for layer cake; 30 minutes for loaf cake. Frost with Seven Minute Icing.

Save Used Fat!
Tea-Time Cake.
(One Cake 10 by 7 by 1 1/2 inches And 2 Small Loaves)
1 1/2 packages fast granular yeast
1/2 cup tepid water

Lynn Says
Handy Hints: Berries and fruits will keep in perfect condition for days if stored in refrigerator, spread on a platter with a piece of parchment or waxed paper covering them completely. Strong flavored foods stored in the refrigerator should be wrapped carefully, or would you rather have your chocolate pudding taste of onion and your beefsteak of cantaloupe? Try a dash of ginger with chocolate ices. It's delicious. When you don't use all your pumpkin from a can, place it in glass jar, and cover with paraffin.

HOW WELCOME ROBIN NEARLY LOST HIS LIFE

WHEN Welcome Robin said that he had nearly lost his life on the long journey from the sunny Southland back to the Green Meadows and the Green Forest and the Old Orchard, Peter Rabbit was at once all ears and attention. That sounded like an exciting story, and Peter loved stories as well as anyone I know. Welcome Robin looked down at Peter and saw the eagerness in Peter's face, and he just couldn't refuse when Peter begged to be told about it.

"You see, it was this way," he began. "When we birds make the long journey, we sometimes have to cross great bodies of water. As big as the Smiling Pool!" interrupted Peter.

"Did you ever see a drop of water, Peter? Just a single little raindrop?" asked Welcome Robin. "Of course, thousands of 'em. Why?" returned Peter. "Well," replied Welcome Robin gravely, "beside some of those bodies of water we cross, the Smiling Pool would look just about as big as one of those raindrops does beside the Smiling Pool. That's why."

"The first thing I knew, I hit that tower with the tip of one wing."

"As I was saying, we birds sometimes have to cross great bodies of water. Near the shores of some of these, men have built queer houses with tall towers, and in the tops of these they keep very bright lights at night. When you get close to them those lights are as bright as the sun. I don't know what they are for. Sometimes I wonder if they are out there just to kill us birds. You know, you never can tell what men will do."

Welcome Robin paused with a very faraway look in his eyes as if he were trying to understand what those lights might mean. Of course, he couldn't know that they were lighthouses to warn ships of dangerous places. He was silent for so long that Peter grew impatient.

"I don't see," said he, "how lights could possibly hurt you. I should think that they would help you."

"Have you ever looked straight in the face of jolly, bright Mr. Sun?" asked Welcome Robin. "I've tried it more than once," said he, "but I'll never do it again. Why, for a few minutes after I couldn't see a thing!"

"It is just the same way with those bright lights at night," replied Welcome Robin. "On my way up here a lot of us were flying together one dark, foggy night, and started to cross one of those bodies of water. It was so foggy that we couldn't be sure whether we were on the right air-path or not. Then we saw one of those lights and, because it was so foggy, the light wasn't very bright. It had a queer way of twinkling. It would go out and then it would shine again. It was right in our path. As we got nearer to it it grew brighter, but still wasn't too bright. We were flying very fast, and a minute before we reached it it went out and everything was dark. Then it flashed on again right in our faces. It was dreadful. We couldn't see a thing. At least I couldn't. All we could do was to keep flying. We couldn't see the tower it was in at all, and didn't know which way to turn. The first thing I knew, I hit that tower with the tip of one wing. It broke the feathers a little, that was all, but it gave me such a fright that I haven't got over it yet. If I had flown straight into it I would have broken my neck. Some of those with me did. A great many birds do every year."

"But, that was a narrow escape!" exclaimed Peter. "I'm glad you didn't hit it."

"So am I," replied Welcome Robin. "You ought to be thankful, Peter, that you don't have any greater dangers than you have to watch out for. I don't like to think of what might have happened, so let's talk of something else. Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer!"

MORE FARM TRACTORS ARE EQUIPPED with Firestone

GROUND GRIP TIRES THAN WITH ANY OTHER MAKE

WHEN a product wins and holds customer-preference year in and year out you know its leadership is established on merit. On every score, by every yardstick of value, it has met and passed the test of critical public appraisal.

Since Firestone developed the first practical pneumatic tractor tire 12 years ago and put the farm on rubber, farmers have shown an ever-increasing preference for Firestone Ground Grip Tires. Their point-for-point superiority is known wherever farm tractors roll. That's why farmers, today as always, use more Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires than any other make.

GREATER TRACTION

BETTER CLEANING

LONGER WEAR

CARD OF THANKS

We want to thank Chambers and Grubbs and our friends and relatives for their kindness and courtesy to our Brother, J. C. Gaines.

Mr. and Mrs. Geson Garner and Mrs. B. F. Bedinger.

MT ZION

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Lambert and two daughters spent several days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Blake at Catlettsburg, Ky.

Ruth Bingham of Covington spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. Bingham and son.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Lora Wayland. She was the mother of Marion Gibson, and had made her home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lee McGuire and family and Mrs. Corrine McGuire of Covington spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon.

Mrs. Mary E. Carnes has a position in Cincinnati.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Sechrest was destroyed by fire last Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cook were also living there and practically everything of Mr. Cook's was destroyed. This community extends their sympathy to them.

Mr. and Mrs. Glass of near Georgetown have moved to the home of their son, Mr. and Mrs. Ravin Glass and family.

Edward Anderson, Don Bong-

Don't Fly Your Kite Near a Power Line

KITE flying is great fun but danger lurks when kites are flown near power lines. Many a child has lost his life by using wire for kite string or climbing a pole to get a tangled kite. Don't take any chances. Play safe by following these suggestions:

Rules for Safe Kite Flying

1. Don't use wire or metallic kite string.
2. Don't fly your kite with wet string or in damp weather.
3. Don't use metal kite sticks.
4. Don't climb poles to get tangled kites.
5. Don't poke sticks at tangled kites or try to pull them down by their tails.
6. Always fly your kites in open fields away from power lines and busy highways.

If your kite becomes caught in electric wires, call our office. We know how to remove it safely without causing a service interruption.

RED CROSS
Is Bringing Him Comfort and Hope!

Through the tangled bars of enemy prison camps—over sea and jungle to battle-weary, lonesome men on every front—to unfortunates here at home stretches the comforting hand of the Red Cross, with hope and tangible gifts straight from your heart. Man has conceived of no greater agency for the relief of human misery and suffering.

Giving to Red Cross has always been a proud habit of millions of American families—and this year you will want to give more freely to your own Red Cross... to your own sons and daughters in the service. None will be forgotten while your Red Cross is on the job—and it is YOU who must keep it so. So dig deep and be glad. For wherever he is

BOWEL CLEANING POWER OF ERB-HELP MEDICINE

One man recently took ERB-HELP three days and said afterward that he never would have believed his body contained so much filthy substance. He says his stomach, intestines, bowels and whole system were so thoroughly cleaned that his constant headaches came to an end, several pimply skin eruptions on his face dried up overnight, and even the rheumatic pains in his knees disappeared. At present he is an altogether different man feeling fine in every way.
 ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

THE RED CROSS IS YOU

You'd like to help the boy they just brought in to the dressing station, personally. The Red Cross is there instead.
 You'd like, too, to give comfort to that prisoner of war in an enemy camp. The Red Cross can do it for you.
 And the wife and children unexpectedly in need with the soldier-husband away at war—you'd like to help them. The Red Cross takes their place.
 Cigarettes, food, bandages, blood—sympathy, comfort, hope, understanding—these the Red Cross dispenses freely—in your name? for the Red Cross is YOU. The Red Cross is the extension of YOU—everywhere there's need. GIVE TO IT GENEROUSLY.

You Must Have Vitamins A and D

You must have Vitamin A as an aid in protection against infections which are more likely to occur in the nose, throat, eyes, ears and sinuses, when there is a deficiency of this vitamin.
 You need Vitamin D to help the body make proper use of the calcium and phosphorus in your diet.
 If you are not getting enough of these two important vitamins, take a ONE-A-DAY brand Vitamin A and D Tablet every day and insure your normal requirements.

ONE A DAY

VITAMIN A AND D TABLETS

Everybody has a part in the drive for VICTORY. Good eyesight is of vital importance. Eye strain and defective vision keeps a person below normal, when it is his or her patriotic duty to feel as well and strong as possible.

JERSEY STAR BULLS

The Star Bull program is one of the answers to the Jersey breeder's request for a sound, scientific and practical breed improvement program. It provides an authoritative and unimpaired method for evaluating the pedigree of the young improved bull and for indicating his transmitting or breeding worth based on known facts recorded with The American Jersey Cattle Club.

The Star Bull program is of great value to the prospective purchaser of a Registered Jersey Bull.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Judge Cunningham told me yesterday he'd just had a letter from his son, Phil, down in the South Pacific.

"You know, Joe," he said, "despite the bitter fightin' in those Jap-infested jungles, the pecky insects and all that swelterin' heat, the boy seems as cheerful and chipper as ever. Just read this"

He handed me Phil's letter. "The shooting's died down for a spell," Phil wrote, "and it's hot as blazes. Wish I had just one cool glass of that good old Kentucky beer right now."

"And I wish I'd been right there to hand it to him," the Judge said, with feeling.

Yes, from where I sit, the boys who are fighting our battles—and risking life itself in doing so—deserve the things they want. Especially when it's so simple a thing as a moderate glass of beer!

Local Home Food Production Needs Stressed

Home food production including victory gardens have been listed as the major contribution in food production in 1943. Home food production will be even more important this year.

The following goals for farm families have been set for 1944, according to the County Agent and Home Demonstration Agent's office:

Dairy—Two cows, one spring and one fall freshening.

Garden—One-tenth acre of good garden per member of family with at least 15 different varieties of vegetables.

Fruit—72 fruit trees, 200 strawberry plants, 10 grape vines, 100 berry bushes.

Hogs—Two medium sized hogs for family of five.

Poultry—Raise at least 15 chickens and five laying pullets per person.

Many farmers have already plowed their gardens and are making early plans for good crops. Plans should be made immediately for fertilizer, seeds, and other supplies needed for victory garden production. While apparently there is going to be plenty of commercial fertilizer if ordered early, there appears to be a shortage of certain vegetable seeds.

Birthday Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piner of Locust Street entertained on Sunday with a birthday dinner for their son, Wm. Piner who has just finished his boot training at Great Lakes Naval Training Station, and is home on leave. Enjoying this occasion were the honored guest, Wm. Piner, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lancaster, Mrs. Bertha Lancaster and son Bobby of Walton, Miss Ruth Piner, Campbell Piner of Crittenden Route 1, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Ammerman and Children, and Mr. Walmer Jackson of Covington. Mrs. Ruth Lunford of near Piner, Mary Lee Piner and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piner.

Milk Producers Requested To File For January Dairy Feed Subsidy Payment.

Milk producers who have not filed an application for the Dairy Feed Subsidy Payment for January are requested to file by the 31st of March, by April 30. The payment for these two months will be at the rate of 35 cents per hundred pounds of milk, and 5 cents per pound for butterfat, or its equivalent.

Information has been received at the Agricultural Conservation Office that payments will also be made for March and April, and that the rate of payment will be increased to 50 cents per hundred pounds of milk, and 8 cents per pound for butterfat. The payments for March and April will be combined and evidence of sales should be submitted for both months together.

Tentative plans call for a seasonal reduction in rates of payment for the month of May, June, July and August. These rates will be announced later.

Notice To All Truck Owners

All persons who have received allotments of gasoline for trucks from the Office of Defense Transportation, must bring their War Reliance Certificates to their local board not later than April 7th, 1944 in order to receive their allotment for the second quarterly period beginning April 1, 1944.

All those who do not apply before April 10, will be referred back to the Office of Defense Transportation before they can receive their gasoline.

Public Auction

Having sold their farm through the agency of Rel C. Wayman, Covington, John H. and Ethel Fogle, of Rector Road, Richevale, Ky., will hold a public sale Tuesday, March 28, 10 A. M., at which time livestock, farm tools, feed and household articles will be sold.

The sale will also include 8,000 feet of pine lumber, 225 locust rug, antiques, fruit, corn, work harness, canned fruit, etc. Rel C. Wayman will conduct the sale, with Mitchell Hiles, the Falmouth auctioneer assisting.

Local Farmers Produce Needed Hybrid Seed Corn

Boone County is one of the few northern Kentucky counties that has a locally produced supply of needed adapted certified hybrid corn seed, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Corn is one of our most needed war food crops that should be produced with a maximum yield for the land and labor required.

Wilton Stephens, County Tax Commissioner has produced 600 bushels of high quality U. S. 13, one of the most popular Boone County adapted hybrid seeds. Lloyd Siekman, of Petersburg, has done an excellent job of producing approximately 1000 bushels of Kentucky 103, one of the highest yielding, high quality adapted hybrids. He has also produced approximately 300 bushels of Kentucky adapted 203 white hybrid.

Both of the above farmers are pioneer Kentucky certified hybrid seed corn producers, starting in the Utopia Club Members' Cooperative hybrid seed corn production project in 1935.

Kentucky certified adapted hybrid seed in 1943 produced an average of 31% per acre increase in yield over open pollinated varieties. Ten additional bushels of corn were received for every dollar spent for adapted hybrid seed.

The great danger confronting Boone County farmers is buying hybrid seed that is not adapted to the local soil. Each year farmers buy hybrids that are not adapted locally and as a result secure disappointing yields often much lower than would be produced by the old open pollinated varieties. Such a practice results in a waste of labor, land and money.

Kentucky and Boone County adapted certified hybrid corns are:

Yellows—U. S. 13, Ky. 102 and Ky. 103.

Whites—Ky. 69, Ky. 72-B, and Ky. 203.

There has already been a large sale of corn seeds. Farmers are urged to buy or speak for their seeds now. The supply of adapted certified hybrid seeds is limited and difficult in securing seed at planting time should be anticipated.

Carload Of Soybean Meal Approved For Shipment To Boone County.

A carload of soybean meal has been approved for shipment to Boone County and should be received within the next two or three weeks. This soybean meal is being shipped under the government protein oil meal order, and any feeder may order up to a thirty day supply.

Orders for the soybean meal should be made at the Boone County Agricultural Conservation Office, or at Walton & Readnour's, Walton, Ky.

Local Law Maker Highly Commended

The following statement was handed to the editor of the Advertiser by Mr. R. M. Hall, State Representative of the 54th District.

Since there has been quite a bit of publicity concerning the results of the current session of the General Assembly recently adjourned it is the intention of your representative to advise the citizens of the two counties, (Boone and Gallatin) the facts as they were known to the members of the 1944 session.

It is an admitted fact that the present administration was left a cash surplus of approximately $11,000,000 by the preceding administration. The department of revenue anticipated an income of approximately $22,000,000 for the ensuing biennium (July 1944 to June 1946) which added to the surplus now on hand would total approximately $33,000,000. The House of Representatives passed a budget of approximately $88,000,000 for the succeeding two years and the Governor indicated that he would approve same although it did not conform to his exact wishes in some of the details. The Senate modified the bill as passed by the House by writing in the pro-

RED CROSS IS LINK WITH HOME TO SERVICE MEN

All you men who are about to enter the armed forces, remember the Red Cross is your link with home. It can help your family.

If they need advice about allowances, allotments, and government benefits for dependents of servicemen.

If they need financial help before government benefits arrive.

If they are worried about you and want reports on your welfare.

visions that the different departments of the Commonwealth should not spend more than the allotment provided by the budget and explained their action by showing that both Chandler and Johnson administrations had operated under exactly the same provisions. The Senate also wrote into the budget that the cash surplus and above the amount provided by the budget for creating expenses should be invested in War Bonds until such time as the present emergency should end and certain capital improvements could be made at the different State institutions. The Governor refused to accept the actions of the Senate as stated above and the Republican members of the House voted against the budget. The Democrats (50 of 56) voted for the budget as amended by the Senate.

Your Representative was one of the 50 Democrats that voted for the budget. If the above budget bill had been passed and approved by the Governor both the school teachers and the recipients of old age benefits would have received substantial increases in the allowances paid thereon. As it now stands unless the Governor goes to the expense of calling an extra-ordinary session of the General Assembly he must carry out the preceding budget of the Johnson administration and the different departments of the state government will not receive the additional appropriations which they sorely need.

For the sake of the record two letters received by your representative from the Democratic leaders of the House and Senate are reproduced herewith:

"Hon. R. M. Hall
Walton, Ky.
"Dear Coke:

"Now that we have had a few days to 'reconsider' the session just closed, to me it is filled with pleasant memories of our association in any future session.

"I am extremely grateful to you for your courtesies to me and your generous help.

"I look forward to our association in any future session.

"You have made a good representative. You have served with honor and distinction. May I commend you for your efforts. You will certainly receive the commendation of your people.

"With kindest personal regards and best wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,
Harry Lee Waterfield."

"Representative R. M. Hall
Walton, Kentucky
"Dear Coke:

"The willingness of our party to withstand the temptations of rancor, bribery and other means used by a Republican administration in their efforts to get legislation enacted not to the best interest of Kentucky will receive the commendation of all informed members of our party.

"I cannot commend too strongly the staunchness of your stand, and the voters of your district will with pleasure know that we will soon receive that commendation.

"Our association during the session will remain one of my pleasant memories. I trust that we will soon receive that commendation.

Sincerely,
Earle C. Clements."

It is the earnest desire of your representative to support any and all constructive measures and any advice or criticism that you may have to offer will be welcomed at all times.

Verona And Beaver Over The Top In Red Cross Drive

Verona, with Mrs. G. C. Ransom as Chairman, is the second Boone County precinct to go over the top in the Red Cross War Fund Drive. Bellevue reported filling its quota last week.

County Chairman, Irvy Rouse, says, from data now at hand, it appears Boone County as a whole has collected about one-half of its quota of $8,700.00. As the year ends March 31, this means increased effort must be put forth by all precincts.

Each precinct's quota is based on its assessed valuation, which is the fairest way possible. Bellevue and Verona, by their untiring work, have said to their Service Men, "We are behind you one hundred per cent. We appreciate what you are doing in fighting for us, and we are doing all we can to see that you have what comforts are possible."

Service men from the other precincts are looking to their homes to see if they will say the same. We must not fall them.

If you are not solicited, go to your local Chairman with your money, or send it direct to Mr. Rouse in Burlington.

Most of you have more money in your pockets today than you have seen for many years. The high prices received for your crops, and the high wages paid in the factories are the direct results of War. It is BLOOD MONEY. Your boys are out there suffering and dying to win the war for you. The Red Cross offers you the opportunity to return a little of this Blood Money to the boys in the form of comforts obtainable only through the Red Cross. Can you deny this plea?

"Make your gift as big as your heart."

Beaver Over The Top In Local Red Cross Drive

Mrs. Robert Green, Chairman of the Beaver Red Cross War Fund Drive, has done excellent work in the cooperation of her organization and the citizens of Beaver. They have already raised $393.65—their quota being $335.42. This is the third precinct to report "over the top."

Mrs. Green wishes to thank her fellow workers and all who assisted in this drive.

Real Estate Sales

Rel C. Wayman, real estate agent, 623 Washington St., Covington, reports the sale of the 85-acre Horace Pelly farm, Piner, Ky. Mr. Pelly was widely known as a very able auctioneer. He died about two years ago. The sale of this farm required the names of eight families to be listed. The property was transferred to Robert Goer, of Covington.

Other recent sales of Mr. Wayman follows: Ralph Heighman, Valsal, sold a 100-acre farm to Charles Cummins, of Falmouth.

The 80-acre farm of Mary E. Moore, of Kenton Station, to T. M. Landin, of Ryland.

Ten acres, the property of Arnold Jones, Porter Road, to Bud England, of Covington.

The Crescent Springs home of William England to Arnold Jones, DeCoursey Pike.

J. H. Poole's 59 acres on Rectors Road, Kenton County, to William Woods, of Covington.

W. S. C. S. Local Division

On Saturday, March 18th the regular monthly meeting of the Local Division of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church was held at the church. Due to weather and other hindrances the attendance was small. However, a balanced dinner was served covered-dish style, and enjoyed by Rev. D. E. Bedinger, Joe Stephenson, Mrs. C. DeLong and daughter Louise, Mrs. Mary Ann, Mrs. Mary Stephenson, Mrs. W. O. Rouse and Miss Emma Jane Miller.

The business meeting was held and report of the year given, which was pleasing. The program leader being absent, the program was short. Rev. Bedinger who is always ready and willing to lend a hand, filled in with one of his interesting stories. After which he suggested the singing of the hymn "Pentecostal Power." Dismissed by Mrs. DeLong. Place of next meeting open for invitation.

Gaines Edward Huey Passes Examination For Navy Air Cadet Training.

Gaines Edwards Huey, student at Millersburg Military Institute, Millersburg, Ky., with ten other cadets took the Government test in Lexington several weeks ago for future Aviation Officers for the Navy V-5.

Eight of the boys passed, but only three, Cadet Huey, one of these, was to report later to St. Louis for physical examination. Cadet Huey was in St. Louis last week and passed the Government test there.

Spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Lulu Huey and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Edwards, before returning to Millersburg, where he will complete this school year. He may be called in July. He will then enter college for training.

His many friends are proud of the good work he is doing.

Mrs. T. T. Elliot, of Crittenden was a business visitor in Walton Tuesday.

Sheep Parasite Control Successful

All sheep owners who have followed the new county parasite control program report highly satisfactory results, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. He stated, using Phenothiazine, while relatively new seems worthy of being recommended to all sheep owners.

The recommended control program is as follows:

1. Treat all sheep in the flock individually with 12 1/2 gram Phenothiazine tablets or the Phenothiazine drench about April 15th or as soon as the flock is through lambing and before they are turned on a pasture. The drench probably would be preferable but the tablets for most sheepmen are easier to use and probably just as good. The lambs are free from internal parasites at this time. The only other individual treatment would be around next December 1st. A bring gun or a good set of forceps are necessary to give the tablets.

2. Summer treatment—from around June 1st to November 1st—keep available before the sheep at all times a mixture consisting of nine parts salt and one part powdered Phenothiazine. Experimental work indicates that the worm eggs passing from the sheep having access to this mixture do not hatch out giving hope to the possibility that all internal parasites may be eliminated from the farm in a few years.

Plans for a special feeder to keep the weather from the mixture is available at the county office.

Profitable sheep production without a good parasite control is practically impossible. Approximately fifty per cent of the sheep owners in the county are expected to practice the above treatment this year. The largest handicap to the above program is the cost of the Phenothiazine and it is hoped this can be remedied.

U. S. ASKS FARMERS TO PLANT 16,000,000 ACRES MORE THAN LAST YEAR

Standard Oil Helps in Program To Keep Farm Machinery "Fit and Fighting."

"Foods Fights for Freedom," and even American farmer has been asked to do his share in planting and cultivating the 16,000,000 acres that are needed over last year's record total.

With farm labor short, every piece of farm machinery must be kept in the fields working, if this goal is to be reached.

"Our organization," says W. Barton of Erlanger, Ky., local agent of the Standard Oil Company, "felt that we could best serve this program by helping the farmer keep his tractors, and farm machinery in fighting trim, and free from rust and dirt. Our drivers have been trained to assist you in caring for your farm machinery, and preserving its life. In addition, each tractor operator can secure from our driver a free War-time Maintenance Manual that will help you keep your farm machinery 'Fit and Fighting.'"

We hope our farmer friends will take advantage of this service, and call on the Standard Oil man for any service he can render. In keeping their tractors, tractors and machinery on the job."

Farm Machinery Survey Planned In Boone County

A survey of all power machinery that may be available for custom work as blowing, discing, and seeding is being made according to Will Smith, County Farm Laborer. Most farmers with a normal season, will probably be able to get their spring plowing and planting done. However, if a late season results as was encountered last year, large amounts of custom machinery work will be necessary.

Last year custom machinery operators and neighborhood cooperation were the largest contributing factors in getting our war food crops planted and harvested. One hundred farmers last year reported to reports from neighborhood leaders, who owned tractors assisted in emergency work. If a complete report could have been secured, this number could have been higher.

Farm labor needs can not be evenly distributed throughout the year as is the case with industry. The rush periods are usually the limits to maximum production. Labor saving devices and labor saving equipment are necessary if our war food goals are to be reached in the face of increased labor and machinery shortages. One man with a tractor and equipment can do five times as much work as a man with a team. Two or more men working on many jobs such as stacking hay, housing tobacco and many other jobs can do considerably more than each man working separately.

Maximum food production demands that farmers cooperate more fully this year, not only in the countywide machinery survey, but also on a neighborhood basis. Contribution to the war effort will be the only reason most farmers will use their machinery for custom work in 1944.

The loan of farm equipment available for emergency and regular custom work will be made available at the County Agent's office in Burlington.

MRS. LORA OSBORN

Funeral services for Mrs. Lora Osborn of Franklin, Ohio, will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. at the Walton Baptist Church. Rev. R. F. Demouley will have charge of the services.

Mrs. Osborn is a sister of Elmer and William Breeden.

JUNIOR G. A. HOLD MEETING

The Junior G. A.'s of Walton Baptist Church held their regular meeting at the church on Wednesday, March 15th. Those present were as follows: Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Nathan Northcutt, Bonnie Clemons, Jo Ann Elliott, Ruth Ann Isbell, Louie Isbell, Betty Northcutt, Wanda Caldwell, Ann Powers, Sharon Graft, Alva Marie Flynn, Patty Johnson.

New Postal Rates Effective Mar. 26

On and after March 26, 1944 there will no longer be letters for local delivery a 2 cents. The new rate will be 3 cents an ounce. Letters as letters going out of town. Air mail letters for delivery in the United States, which now go for 6 cents an ounce will be raised to 8 cents. There is NO CHANGE in air mail postage to letters for Service Overseas, that was in the Service Overseas, that remains 6 cents for one half ounce. Money order fees, C. O. D., insured, registry, and parcel post charges will be higher.

The regular 3-cent postage for out of town letters has not been changed.

Youth Conference Set For March 25th.

The Youth of Boone County will hold an all-day meeting at the Florence High School, Saturday, March 25.

The program will be served at the Florence High School. Publicity Director, James J. Gilpin, of State and Game Division, will be present with moving pictures of wild life and soil conservation. Come and enjoy the day with your youth.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Authorities expect that Latin-American countries will contribute 35 to 40 thousand tons of crude rubber during 1944. In 1941 the U. S. and Canada used 800,000 tons of rubber, and current requirements are larger.

The Quartermaster Corps has developed a rubber and canvas Army boot for tropical wear. The sole contains both crude and reclaimed rubber, and is not affected by jungle moisture and soil.

Over seven billion passengers were transported by motor bus in 1942, compared with about four and a half billion in 1940, reflecting the commitment of passenger car use by rubber conservation.

LEW BURNETT has engaged by TOM ARNOLD, owner of the Cross T, to act as trail boss on the drive from southern Texas to Ocala in the spring of 1945. Tom, with his son and daughter, STEVE and LUCY, will be making the trip. Tom must deliver 100 longhorns by September 1 or lose a profitable contract. Lew expects that the Indian River, which flows into the Gulf of Mexico, so that their Open A herd can arrive first at Ocala. Lew expects on the trail. The herd is stamped. After a night of running, the herd is rounded up, but Tom Arnold has been thrown by his horse and killed. CLAY MANNING tells Lew: "This will make a big difference."

CHAPTER X

"Let him bark," Quartermaster said. "It'll take more than that." But Clay's meaning was clear enough. With Tom Arnold gone and Steve and Lew were the Cross T owners. And since Steve wore the pants he could take charge. Clay could put the herd on the move.

From the river bluff he saw the water had dropped a number of feet. It was still high, but the churning flood was gone. Long red sand bars were uncovered out in the middle.

No matter what happened, the longhorns had to go on. He made an immediate plan for that. Then near camp he said, "You go in, then, and get tools from the cook's wagon. Don't be seen if you can help it. Go on back ahead of me."

He pulled in and waited until Quartermaster rode out of the trees with a canvas bundle under his arm. Only Steve was there when he arrived. His head turned at the sound of the horse's hooves. He saw Clay, took much time were smooth and rosy and he seemed all at once, in this moment, too young for what was coming. "Lew," he said, "where's the others?"

"Up the creek, Steve. Joy here?" "Ashley."

"Then come on with me." The thing he had to tell him made him quietly think. Even Steve's quick, "Say, I've ridden enough! Can't you let a man rest?" didn't change that. He was again going. "Come on. This isn't work. Something's happened."

He saw the high color drain away and rush back. With no talk then Steve got up and walked to his horse. But out of the trees, looking straight ahead, he asked, "Dad?"

"Yes, Steve." Lew put out his hand and he had been years when he and that boy were like brothers, and Tom Arnold had been a father to them both. It seemed to him that now, at any time, the unexplainable barrier between them ought to be down. His hand touched Steve's arm. It jerked from him as if he had struck a blow. He did not finish what he wanted to say. He was using inside him a desolate lonely feeling came crowding back.

He held deliberately to a slow walk up the creek, letting the men get most of their work done. There was no need for the boy to look at the trampled thing they had found. The grave on a little knoll close to the bank was already being covered. They were mounding it over with rocks. Afterward, with that finished, they made a bareheaded circle waiting for someone who could talk.

Someone coughed and the little group moved. No one had spoken. That brief moment was gone.

"Clay," he said, "you go in now. Let Joy know. You and Steve."

He had seen Steve and Spinn off with the horses apart from the little group around the grave, and it seemed a kind of rank insult, the way the man stood at the grave, by rolling a cigarette, watching them and blowing out his gusty breaths of smoke.

As Steve and Clay got into their saddles and started toward camp Spinn reached up for his own horn to follow them.

He called the man's name, walking toward him fast. Close, he said, "You. You stay here."

The heavy arm came down from the horn and hung loose. Spinn turned himself around with a ponderous deliberation. "You talkin' to me?" His dusty fabled beard hid all expression. Then a quick hard mockery glittered in his pale eyes. "Maybe," he said, "I don't hear you any more. New owners make a new boss. You thought of that?"

He knew a certain end was coming, that he'd held back so far on the trail. Quietly he said, "There'll be no change. There's something here you must understand. The wayward end he wanted down him on. 'If you can't take it like that you can ride out.'"

He saw the instant way the pale gray eyes sharpened. Spinn's voice dropped low and oddity dropping. "So you figure it's that easy?" "I've done my figuring," he said. "That's all."

This big man was no hot-headed amateur when a definite time came. He could see the veiled coldness behind the drooping lids and the slack readiness that slid over the huge body. Then some thought loosened the bearded lips in a half grin.

"All right," Spinn turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle horn.

He understood this man's kind too well. He knew the move was false even as the arm rose and so was ready when that hand curved suddenly downward to the holstered gun.

His own holster flap was buckled. In that fraction of a second he wasted no time in trying to loosen it. He grabbed left-handed at the dull steel of Spinn's rising weapon and threw all of his weight behind a blow of his right fist upward against the bearded jaw. It rocked the big head. But the man was solidly planted. He felt the gun's hammer rise in his palm and hooked his thumb around it. It snapped with no explosion and he hardly felt the metal's sharp cut in the flesh of his thumb. For the hatred damned back in him so long had released something savage and cruel. He threw his fist again into a body blow. The gun came free into his hand with his thumb still blocking the hammer. He swung it, lashing across Spinn's face. It half turned the man around and he brought the heavy weapon barrel once more against the side of his head. That dropped him forward onto his knees.

Standing back, he was aware then of the others who had come running up. He heard Quartermaster's voice. "What's he done?" He answered without turning. "Spinn's quit. It's through." He released the gun's hammer and shook away the blood. Behind him Jim Hope blurred out as high and

He grabbed left-handed at the dull steel of Spinn's rising weapon and threw all of his weight behind a blow of his right fist upward against the bearded jaw. It rocked the big head. But the man was solidly planted. He felt the gun's hammer rise in his palm and hooked his thumb around it. It snapped with no explosion and he hardly felt the metal's sharp cut in the flesh of his thumb. For the hatred damned back in him so long had released something savage and cruel. He threw his fist again into a body blow. The gun came free into his hand with his thumb still blocking the hammer. He swung it, lashing across Spinn's face. It half turned the man around and he brought the heavy weapon barrel once more against the side of his head. That dropped him forward onto his knees.

Standing back, he was aware then of the others who had come running up. He heard Quartermaster's voice. "What's he done?" He answered without turning. "Spinn's quit. It's through." He released the gun's hammer and shook away the blood. Behind him Jim Hope blurred out as high and

He understood this man's kind too well. He knew the move was false even as the arm rose and so was ready when that hand curved suddenly downward to the holstered gun.

There was another reason also he had for moving now. Times like this work was better than anything else. He didn't want Joy or the men either, with an idleness to go back over what had happened. Now the shock still held them in a numb way. Throwing themselves into the job of crossing would ease the bad hours that were bound to come.

Joy stood at the end of her wagon, both arms rigidly down at her sides. Clay had just stepped back from her. He didn't locate Steve. She drew her head up and raised her eyes to Clay's. "I'm all right."

He seemed to look far down in them and see all of this girl's quiet courage and something else in her steady gaze, unreadable to him.

Then Clay was at his side. His hand took her arm. "Honey, you'd better rest." His blue eyes turned with a hot stare. "That goes for the whole camp, I figure. Any objections, Lew?"

He saw where Clay was leading. The challenge was thinly veiled. "Not if I know it!" Clay jerked his glance to the girl. "Joy, this is up to you. You don't have to go on."

"Clay!" She stared at him with a suddenly lost look. "What are you doing?"

"Joy," Lew said, "never mind. We're all of us on edge. It'll be all right." He moved to Clay's side and put his hand on his arm, his fingers covering the hard grip of his body. He dug in Clay and walked him, the grip digging in. They were beyond her hearing when the arm jerked free.

He halted. "Clay, damn your soul, don't speak without answering now. His own life had been bitter and twisted enough at times so that he could know the bounding torment of another's mind. He had the understanding without knowing what was behind it. This is plenty hard for her," he said. "You haven't made it any easier. What's the matter with you, Clay? I'll tell you one thing. You needn't hide so much mystery. Spinn's quit."

"Quit?" Clay turned and was suddenly right in Clay's face. "You mean he pulled out himself?"

"Well, no," he said. "I freed him. We had a run-in. He walked, watching that desperate, driven look set across Clay's face. "Spinn will go to the Open A. I know that. What does it mean?"

There was no hot violence that he had expected in the answer. "It means," Clay said, "you've played hell." He swung his broad shoulders and walked away.

Lying there with the midday sun bright upon its surface and the green grass stretching away beyond the north shore, the Red looked as inviting as a man could want. But a trail had been made. He had learned that himself in the way all men had learned it, by grief. Yet he felt that now was the one time to cross. A man shouldn't drop to the high water to drop to normal level. Flood had scourged the river to its hardpan bottom. Later, when the current slowed and the water silt would pile up. That made your quicksand, the dreaded despatch for cattle.

Wheeling from the bank, he saw Clay in camp arguing with the men around him. But Quartermaster was there. Clay wouldn't get far with old Rebel John. Off on the flat the pooled longhorns lay laid down, resting, Moomlight Bailey and Jim Hope were grazing the horses apart from them along the creek.

He called a yell into camp and saw the men start toward him, all except Clay and Steve. And then, waiting for the riders to come out, and with that sign of Clay's growing rebellion so clear, his mind went to a thing he had not thought of before. Tom Arnold had said for him to look in an old account book that Joy's wagon carried if anything happened. A company's speculation held him, but afterward it was the rush of work he did not think of it again.

Riding on toward the horse herd, he could see the dead-tired heaviness of his crew. Yet there was no complaint and there would be none. "We'll get across and camp," he promised.

The horses had no fear of the river. Under pressure of the riders strung out behind them they raced to the water and plunged in, sending muddy geysers higher than their heads.

He pulled off on the bank and watched them closely, seeing the food touch their lips but come no farther than that. It was safe, enough, he thought, to cross the wagons.

When his wife brought them out of camp he saw Clay and Steve with Joy, driving for her, his shape stiff and set. Without a word for help he turned down the slippery bank.

DENTISTRY AND DIET

It is known that there is not one person in a thousand who has perfect teeth—that is, absolutely free from decay. Thus when we read of a whole town without a single toothache here or there, it is a miracle.

Dr. Barton, of the American Dental Association, Anna de Planter Bowers, M.A., Harrisburg, chief department of health, states that studies at Pennsylvania State college and University of Pennsylvania dental school prove that diet is the big factor in preventing tooth decay.

Referring to Hereford, Texas, it is pointed out that analyses of foods grown there "show an astonishingly high content of phosphorus, one of the most vital of all soil minerals. Wheat, the chief food product, contained 60 per cent more than normal. Carrots contained 50 per cent more, cabbage and lettuce, 40 per cent. The calcium (lime) contents of foods also was high."

We are apt to think that people with high incomes have better diets than those with low incomes. It is not always true. The studies proved that most of the private patients whose diets were studied not only had good incomes but were college graduates. Moreover, they were interested in their health and teeth as evidenced by their quarterly and semiannual visits to the dentist.

Referring to St. Vincent's Home for Mothers and Children Under Four, "each child receives a full quart of milk plus what is used in cooking, and four teaspoons of cod liver oil a day; which insures liberal intakes of calcium, phosphorus and vitamins A and D."

The fact that certain foods—dairy products, fruits and vegetables—prevent decay of teeth does not mean that brushing the teeth is not important. Brushing the teeth regularly prevents decay of teeth when on one's own. Clay's Word were obeyed. Man would learn that—

1. He Should Recognize His Fellow Man's Value (Matt. 12:11, 12).

Property values are so well to the front in the thinking of all, that it requires no argument to convince anyone that a sheep that has fallen into a pit should be rescued. But the thinking is that the man who would run for help to rescue a sheep in that predicament hardly cast an interested glance at the drunk in the gutter, or lose a few minutes sleep over the girls who are going to hell by way of our countless taverns.

The plain fact is that we do not regard a man as more than a sheep. Many a neighborhood has been stirred to angry rebellion over the poisoning of a pet dog. But at the same time the poison men and women—all for a small license fee.

The man who loves his fellow man knows that—

2. He Should Sacrifice for His Fellow Man's Good (Rom. 14:10-13).

Paul here states a high principle of Christian consideration. He makes clear that man is his brother's keeper and must do nothing which will tempt his brother to do that which will harm him.

III. Man Should Honor Himself (1 Cor. 6:19, 20).

Man is told not to think more highly of himself than he ought to think (Rom. 12:3), and that is good counsel. But at the same time he ought to think as highly of his own being as God does. He should recognize that—

1. His Body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 6:19).

The Bible teaches that the moment a man believes in Christ his body becomes the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit. Thereafter, man must never take that body in any place (such as a tavern) to do anything or partake of anything (like alcohol) which would offend the Holy Spirit of God.

2. He Belongs to God (v. 20).

Men have been given a free will by God. He has given them the right of self-determination. They do not abrogate God's right to man's devotion and love.

The fact that we are free to choose should make us the more determined that the right choice should be made—that we shall glorify God in our bodies, which are His.

Does it mean that on a moment's thought to tell us that the violation of that body (and every bit of scientific evidence proves it to be a violation) by the use of alcohol is not only a general disease, nervousness and other causes.

Q.—Can I enjoy good health after an operation for fibroid tumors, or is it better to have them removed?

A.—Yes will be all right after the operation. The fibroid tumors are not cancer and can be removed readily.

Q.—What is pruritus?

A.—Pruritus is just the same given to itching. It can be caused by many general diseases, nervousness and other causes.

Lesson for March 26

THE SACREDNESS OF LIFE (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT: Gen. 1:27, 28; Matt. 12:11, 12; Rom. 14:10-13; 1 Cor. 6:19, 20. GOLDEN TEXT: Know ye not your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit—1 Corinthians 6:19.

A high and ennobling concept of the value of human life is an important element in Christian thought. The Word of God always regards human life as sacred—a gift of God to be used for His glory, never to be exploited for gain or destroyed at will.

This important truth needs constant reiteration in a social order which is so shortsighted and sinful that it will permit the destruction of human life as a necessary part of the production of alcoholic beverages. The lesson has a real application to the liquor problem.

1. God Honored Man (Gen. 1:27, 28).

It should be of primary interest and concern to discover what the Maker and Lord thinks of His creature. He knows what is in man and if we learn of Him we may come to evaluate man aright. It is well to note first that when God made man He made him in His image (v. 27).

The teaching of Scripture makes it clear that this image was not anything material or physical, but rather a likeness of personality. As God is personal, moral, intelligent, Being, so is man.

How tragic then that man will not only reject that grace, but will subject His God-given personality to the destructive influence of alcohol.

2. He Gave Him Power and Authority (v. 28).

This is the very thing man is seeking, and here we learn that the only One who has a right to give it—God Himself—bestowed it upon man.

Having dominion over the entire earth, man is in a place of responsibility, not only for his own moral choices, but for the welfare of others. Think that over as it relates to the ever-growing liquor problem.

Yanks' Problems OverseasOne of the very important functions of the American Red Cross is the direct communication it affords between the fighting man and his people back home. Here Red Cross Field Director John L. Barnes (left), of White Plains, N. Y., gives a message to Sgt. William J. McDonald, Jr., of Mamaroneck, N. Y. Picture was made in Sicily outside a straw Italian hut with the rear headquarters of the 1st Division near Mt. Etna.On Masera Island, up in the Pergan Gulf, where there is not a single tree standing and the wind blows across the island ceaselessly,
Red Cross field men brought fishing tackle, books and writing paper to service men. Most welcome gift from the Red Cross was clippers for hair cutting—the boys had been without a barber for months.In Persia, a Red Cross field Director was able to locate a soldier's mother whom he hadn't seen for 25 years.In Africa, Red Cross field men saw in Army planes, hitch-hiked in supply trucks, bumped in jeeps over bumpy roads, traveled by train, and blazing sand storms and glaring sun to help men with personal problems and emergency communications, and to deliver magazines and books, cigarettes and chocolate to isolated posts and bases.In Italy, Red Cross field men accompanied the troops in on the invasion barges.In India, a sergeant was sentenced to the guard house for disorderly conduct. His officer couldn't understand the boy's behavior. He was a nice kid—had never gone to places before.The officer asked the Red Cross Field Director to see him. The Red Cross man discovered a very worried boy. His wife had not been receiving his allotments, she wasn't well and needed an operation. She thought the soldier must have cancelled his allotments and a misunderstanding had arisen between them so that she was no longer writing him.The field man got in touch with the Red Cross chapter in the boy's home town immediately. It took care of her, finished her operation and saw that she had adequate funds to provide for herself until the allotment again came through.When the Red Cross man explained what had happened to the soldier's Commanding Officer, the latter promptly released the boy from the guard house. From then on the boy was all right. His worries were over, and the Army had gained a good fighting man.All over the world, in every theatre of war and active battle front so the American Red Cross field men—helping soldiers with major and minor personal problems, bringing them recreational items such as magazines, books, comfort articles, athletic equipment and re-establishing their contact with home. These men share the conditions and hazards under which the soldiers fight.
They also share their lives. They are on call day and night whenever they are needed.G.I.'s overseas have many problems. Often home seems very, very far away. With the Red Cross there at hand wherever he may be, the soldier knows he can always get in touch with home—that he need never feel alone with problems he doesn't know how to solve himself.More than 5,000,000 service men passed through Red Cross field men's offices last year.On the mud clogged roads of Italy through the far jungles of
New Guinea to lonely desert posts,
Red Cross field men take your place beside your boy. In order to continue this service, the Red Cross

MORE ELECTRIC POWER HERE

MEANS MORE FIGHTING POWER HERE

One Kilowatt-hour Out of Every Two We Deliver Helps Back the Attack

REFLECTING the stepped-up production tempo of a nation geared for war, 52% of all the electricity distributed by this company goes to industries essential to the war effort and to military establishments.

Since June, 1940, when the national defense program got underway, our industrial power sales have more than doubled. Today, we are supplying almost as much electricity for war-time industrial and military use alone as we supplied for all purposes as recently as 1936.

And although this tremendous increase in the use of electricity for war purposes has been piled on top of record residential consumption, the demand has been met with a minimum use of vital war materials for additional facilities and despite a heavy loss of skilled employees to the armed services. There has been no loss of production by any industry on our lines due to shortage of electricity, and there has been no curtailment of essential electric service on the home front.

Eire Is Faced With Further Isolation; Allied Bombers Smash Axis Targets; Ready Knockout Blows at Luftwaffe; Local Boards Cut Draft Deferments

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Burma—With Jap shells popping overhead, Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell (center, right) and Chinese-American troops take cover in deep ravine in north Burma. (See Far East.)

IRELAND: Faces Isolation

Because Ireland lies so hard by Britain, the latter has always looked upon it as sort of a necessary adjunct of Britain's defense, and long and bitter have been the controversies between the two countries over the question of its sovereignty. Last ruffled through Britain's economic blockade of Ireland from 1932-'36, relations between the two countries have become troubled again, with the U. S. joining Britain this time in demanding that Ireland stop the German and Japanese representatives, charged with carrying out espionage activity against Allied forces in the British Isles for the invasion of Europe.

Following Premier Eamon de Valera's refusal on the ground that the Axis diplomats were being watched, Britain banned travel to Ireland, and promised to further isolate Ireland from all outside connections.

FAR EAST: Racing Weather

As Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Chinese and American troops fought through Burma's rugged northwest clearing a route to embattled China, the U. S. announced it has stocked up more than $100,000,000 of guns, munitions and tanks in India for eventual shipment to Chiang Kai-shek.

In Burma, General Stilwell and British-Indian troops to the south sought to strengthen their foothold along the mountainous western border as a springboard for future attack before the merciless wind-rainy monsoon season sets in, to continue until fall.

In announcing that the U. S. has piled up $40,321,000 of guns, $77,871,000 of munitions and $42,137,000 of tanks in India for shipment to China upon the opening of routes, Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley said that of total lend-lease aid given thus far to Chiang Kai-shek, about $104,000,000 was for aircraft, machinery, medicines, services, etc.

EUROPE: Luftwaffe Target

With Allied forces massing in the British Isles and Axis chieftains predicting the early invasion of western Europe, U. S. and British aircraft kept up their heavy raids over the continent, aimed at knocking out the German Luftwaffe.

By beating down Nazi fighters and blowing up their aircraft factories, the Allies hoped to decrease opposition to landing operations and resistance to bombardment of other Axis industries.

In Italy, the Allied air force was equally busy, smashing at the Nazis' defense installations in southern France, and at railroads and highways up and down the length of the peninsula, used to supply embattled enemy troops at Anzio and Cassino, where bottomless mud slowed ground operations.

PACIFIC: No Rest

Ringed on all sides, Jap troops in the South Pacific were given no rest by U. S. forces slowly pulverizing their defensive outposts in the Philippines and Asiatic mainland. Desperate enemy attempts to unloose the doughboys' hold on Bougainville were repulsed after a day of savage fighting, and U. S. troops landed behind Jap lines in New Britain, wiped out remnants of the force driven back when the Yankees took Wilaumez peninsula, to the southwest of the battered Nip base of Rabaul.

Even in mid-Pacific the Jap found no rest. U. S. naval and marine bombers plastering their holdings in the eastern Marshalls and Carolines, from which they can pester Allied shipping.

GAS RATIONS: West Cut

Because of expanded farm and highway needs, gas rations for all "A" card holders west of the Allegheny mountains were cut from three to two gallons per coupon, the reduction being accomplished by extending the validity of the coupons from 7 to 10 days.

Effect of the OPA action was to take away one of the three gallons on the "A" coupon allotted for essential driving, and bring westerners' "A" rations to the same level as in the 17 eastern states.

Cut in the "A" coupons does not affect holders of "B" and "C" coupons, who will be able to obtain additional ration allocations for occupational driving to offset the reduction in the "A" card values.

GREAT BRITAIN: Coal Strike

With the British government assenting to most of their demands, Wales' 100,000 coal miners went slowly back to work, as the threat to war production diminished.

Piece-workers' demands that their rates be raised to allow them to earn over the $20 minimum wage recently granted to all British miners, was one of the conditions met by the government. Also met were claims to special allowances for work in excessive dust and water.

The strikers also rebelled at the government's order that all miners buying coal cheaply in the fields would have to pay .30 weekly for the privilege.

WOMEN SERVE: Enlistments Up

Since the navy lifted its ban against sailors' wives entering the WAVES, recruitments have risen to over 1,000 weekly, compared with 800 weekly last fall, and the service now looks confidently toward attainment of its goal of $2,400 by the end of 1944.

With soldiers' wives always permitted to enlist, the WAC has been recruiting about 800 women weekly, and present strength is estimated at 70,000, with a total force of 220,000 authorized.

With wives of enlisted personnel eligible, the coast guard's SPARS have about 7,100 on active duty along seaboard and inland waterway installations, and expect to boost the total to 8,800 by July 30.

With 5,000 men pilots now available for ferrying duties, congress debated continuing the Wasps, women's airforce service.

WAR PRISONERS: In Timberlands

To help relieve the acute labor shortage in the northern timberlands of Michigan, the army has allowed use of German war prisoners to fell trees and cut them to size for paper mills.

Under the 1929 Geneva convention on treatment of war prisoners, the Germans are paid 80 cents a day by the government, but the contractor employing them must give the U. S. treasury the ordinary going wage for each one.

Once members of Gen. Erwin Rommel's vaunted Afrika Korps, the prisoners are well versed in the rights under the Geneva convention, and still confident of Adolf Hitler, some having decorated their barracks with pictures and drawings of the Fuehrer.

OIL RESERVES

Vast reserves of petroleum still exist in the United States and the resources of Alaska have scarcely been tapped, according to geologist Wallace Pratt of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. He said that in Texas alone from which nearly half the nation's petroleum comes, the "proved" area constitutes less than 1 per cent of the total area of the state in which it might be reasonable to expect oil deposits.

The nation, he continued, is far from the end of its resources.

Anti-Fascists in Italy Lack Uniform Program

Immediate Circumstances Necessitate Allied Cooperation With King and Badoglio As Leaders of Only Unified Group.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

How can the Allied governments, the Allied armies, sworn to defend the cause of democracy, continue to deal with Italy's Fascist king and Marshal Badoglio and refuse to recognize the anti-Fascist conference of political parties recently organized at meeting held in Bari, Italy?

The so-called "Junta of the Committees of Liberation" named following the Bari conference, telegraphed members of the British house of commons a message which contained this passage:

"Here Fascism, at first confused and fearful, has taken courage. It has assumed a mask and has rallied around the crown. Affecting a friendship which is too recent to be sincere, it has attempted to distort the judgment of our political and military officials. Once more oppressing our people as it has always done, it is putting all manner of legal and illegal obstacles in the way of any genuine popular initiative which tries to render more efficient and serious the contribution of liberated Italy to the war against the Germans."

Addressing the Bari conference, Italian Sen. Benedetto Croce had said:

"It is a fact that the waning prestige of the king and the lack of confidence in him prevent the king himself from rallying an Italian army; he himself, fearing the opposition against his person, has prohibited the formation of an army of volunteers. Many young men who came to me from German-occupied territory full of enthusiasm were forced to disband, disappointed in their hearts, because they did not find anyone to rally them and give them the opportunity to fight."

Those statements seem forthright and fair. After reading this, it was not surprised when a fairly important person said to me:

"The Allies are lined up with the Fascists in Italy. Is that what we are fighting for?"

That seems to me a typical attitude and one that the average man reflects when he considers the so-called "deals" the American government has made, the arrangement with Darian in North Africa, for instance. Think of the abuse heaped upon the state department in that case—the deluge of fiery "liberal" criticism at home and in England, the wrath of De Gaulle and the rest of the French anti-Vichyites.

Bitter Reaction

And then, when on the tenth of last month it was announced that our famed AMG, the carefully trained, objective military government provided by the Allies, had taken over the civilian administration of liberated Italy, had turned over the government in these provinces to the Germans had been driven, to the Badoglio government, what a deluge of bitter and cynical comment was hurled at the Allied leaders.

Is there any explanation? Can there be any excuse for the United States government, loudly anti-Fascist and violently against all forms of authoritarian government, playing ball with the little king and his satellites who danced to the tune of Mussolini?

Well, there is another side but because of the delicacy of the situation, it cannot be set forth officially.

I am permitted to state it without attribution, quoting no source, but assuring you, that to the best of my knowledge and belief, it represents the reasons behind the policy of the Allied leaders.

First let me quote from the guard-ers remarks of Winston Churchill before the house of commons in February:

"The sanest and safest course for us to follow is to judge all parties and factions dispassionately by the test of their readiness and ability to fight the Germans and thus lighten the burden of Allied troops. This is not a time for ideological preferences for one side or the other, and certainly, we, His Majesty's government, have not indulged ourselves in this way at all."

And he might have added, the American government, the American army, is equally uninterested in ideologies.

Another point Churchill made should be noted for later comment: "Should we succeed in the present battle and enter Rome—as I trust we believe we shall—we shall be free to review the whole Italian political position and we shall do so with many advantages which we do not possess at the present time."

One more Churchill quote before I try to present the American viewpoint:

"I should be sorry, however, to see an unsettling change made at a time when the battle is in its climax, swaying to and fro. When you have to hold a hot coffee pot, it is better not to break off the handle and you are sure that you can get another equally convenient and serviceable, or at least that you will find a dishcloth handy."

So much for the shadowy outlines of the defense. Let me give you now, from my notebook, in the order in which I took it down, the story as told to me by one "who ought to know."

"At the Bari conference, there were a number of parties which seemed to agree, but they failed to offer a concrete program or one that there was any firm guarantee would receive unified support. In fact, we cannot agree, we must know. There is no definitely established leadership among the anti-Fascists."

"We know there is no future for leadership under the king and Badoglio. But we must operate in the present, not the future. At present, there is but one unified group, small but large, loved or hated as it may be, the Italian government which surrendered to the Allies, under King Victor Emmanuel."

Must Be Realists

"We have to be realists now, and what is more, military realists. As Churchill said, what the Allies need are Italians ready and able to fight Germans. Such a group exists. Italians are fighting side by side with Americans and British. Although the Italian fleet has not been called to action, it surrendered without resistance. The Italian officers on duty are still loyal to the symbol (the king) to which they made their oath. We are perfectly willing, we are anxious, that they choose a new democratic symbol. But until they do get a new symbol to which the majority of Italians can adhere, we are not going to throw away the old."

(Churchill's coffee pot.) So much for what seems to be the Allied viewpoint with my added unofficial, but none-the-less I believe, authentic, interpretation. But there is something more that no official would dare whisper. It is the problem which the Allies know they are going to face in every re-occupied country. Italy is a sample. It is something unpleasant but something we must face.

I understand that the Italian people in the liberated regions have not been inimical to the Americans. But they are resentful. They are hungry. They cannot understand why these strong young soldiers, who have freed them, do not feed them. The trucks go by loaded with munitions and supplies. Some food has been distributed. Not enough. To feed all the people would mean halting military operations while the Germans made hay in the sunshine of our charity.

The present Italian government has still some discipline over the people; it is brutal, perhaps, but effective. A new government which really expressed the people's will today would have to demand food, would increase the pressure on the Allies for supplies that they cannot spare while they are fighting for their lives. That is another realistic, military reason for the policy of the Allies.

Is there any, that is something that the Allies can expect to face as more and more European territory is liberated. The liberated people that they do not receive resentment that they do not receive wipes out the gratitude for the moment that military men can spare. Armies cannot be idealistic.

And armies or governments at war which support them cannot worry about ideologies. It is too bad. But it is likewise only too true.

BRIEFS... by Baukhage

Civilians will get more coffee, chocolate and cocoa in 1944 than in 1943, according to the War Food Administration.

Because more batteries are needed for walkie-talkies, bazookas, signal lights and other war equipment, there is little chance for an increased supply for civilians this year, according to the WFB.

Ten thousand new passenger automobiles and 7,500 new bicycles will be available under rationing to civilians in March—the same quotas as those for February.

Nearly 40 per cent of all vegetables grown for fresh consumption in the United States last year came from Victory gardens, the War Food Administration has reported.

SNOW BISCUITS
2 cups sifted flour 1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast
1 1/4 teaspoons sugar 1/4 cup lukewarm water
1/4 teaspoon salt 1 tablespoon melted shortening

Sift together flour, sugar and salt. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Add to dry ingredients. Add melted shortening. Dough will be soft. Turn out on floured board and knead dough quickly and lightly until smooth and elastic. Roll out 1/4 inch thick. Cut with floured biscuit cutter. Place on greased pan. Let rise until doubled in bulk, about 30 minutes. Bake in hot oven at 425° F. about 20 minutes. Makes 16 two-inch biscuits. Serve hot with home-made jam, jelly or preserves for a supper dessert treat!

5 WARS

Smith Bros. has served the public since 1847. In that period America has fought five wars. Only during wartime has there ever been any shortage of Smith Bros. Cough Drops. Our production now is war-reduced but we're distributing it fairly to all. Still only 5¢. A nickel for the best!

FOR FRESH FLAVOR AND EXTRA MILDNESS, IT'S CAMELS FOR ME!

IN THE ARMY they say:

"FRONT AND CENTER" for come here

"SIDE ARMS" for cream and sugar

"CAMEL" for the favorite cigarette with men in the Army

"BEANS" for commissary officer.

* FIRST IN THE SERVICE ***

With men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, the favorite cigarette is Camel. (Based on actual sales records.)

HIGHLIGHTS... in the week's news

SHIP-BUILDING: New warships will be added to the U. S. fleet at the rate of a dozen a day during the remainder of the year, Secretary of the Navy Knox stated. This figure is for seagoing vessels only, and does not include small auxiliary ships and landing craft. By the end of the year the navy will consist of more than 3,000,000 men, he added.

AXIS WEAPONS: Japanese and German artillery and small arms are inferior as compared with American equipment, tests of captured weapons reveal. About 600,000 pieces of ordnance have been tried in firing and other tests at the seven U. S. army arsenals. It was found that the Japanese rifle is inaccurate at ranges over 350 yards, in contrast to the American Garand.

You Must Have Vitamins A and D

You must have Vitamin A as an aid in protection against infections which are more likely to occur in the nose, throat, eyes, ears and sinuses, when there is a deficiency of this vitamin.

You need Vitamin D to help the body make proper use of the calcium and phosphorus in your diet.

If you are not getting enough of these two important vitamins, take a ONE-A-DAY brand Vitamin A and D Tablet every day and insure your normal requirements.

Tobacco, Food, Feed, Interests Farmers In 1944

Food, feed and tobacco are foremost in local farmers' plans for 1944, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Few farmers plan to expand their livestock numbers and many are planning to adjust livestock in relation to feed supplies.

Home food production is a major plan for all farmers. The outstanding job of last year will be repeated in 1944, probably with greater consideration to the actual needs of the family. Commercial vegetable growers are working under many handicaps but indication are that they will do an excellent job.

Feed for livestock is presenting one of the greatest farm problems in the County. Farmers are confronted not only with a machinery and labor shortage but are unable to buy much of the feed that was normally imported into the county. This means that our farmers this year are going to have to grow both more hay and more corn.

Tobacco is the most important cash crop produced in the county from the dollar value. The government is asking that more tobacco be raised. Farmers have in general expressed their desire to grow the full allotments requested.

The 1944 production problems presents one of the most difficult problems that local farmers have ever had to face. They are, however, shouldering 100 percent of their war jobs and pushing off into one of the most important food production years in history. They will be called upon to cooperate with neighbors in emergency jobs, exchange work with farm machinery, hire inexperienced labor and to do many jobs without the needed equipment best suited for this work.

FARM BUREAU AND WOOL POOL MEET

The Boone County Farm Bureau and the Boone County Wool Pool will meet at Burlington on this Monday, Court-day, April 3. The Wool Pool will meet at 1 p. m. The Farm Bureau will meet immediately following the Wool Pool Meeting.

Both the above meetings are important farm meetings. All interested farmers are urged to attend.

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN REV. AND MRS. GARRETT

Wednesday night after prayer meeting a large number of the members of the Walton Baptist Church surprised their new pastor and his wife by giving them a miscellaneous shower.

Meat, chicken, a large quantity of different kinds of groceries as well as glassware, cooking utensils, towels, sheets and many other useful articles, also money. A most pleasant evening was spent together. Rev. Garrett and Mrs. Garrett appreciate these gifts very much, but above all, the spirit which prompted the giving.

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Mrs. H. C. Hobgood, Disciple of Christ, missionary to Belgian Congo, Africa, will be the guest speaker on the program of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Walton Christian Church, on Thursday, April 6. The public is cordially invited to hear her address, will begin at approximately 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Hobgood and her husband have pioneered in much of the work in Central Africa which has been a major field for the Disciples of Christ. Mrs. Hobgood is a sister of the Rev. T. H. Alderson, former pastor of the Walton church.

TWO SHORT COURSES IN SHEEP SHEARING

To help farmers who must shear their own sheep, because of the labor shortage, the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics will give short courses in shearing at Lexington on April 5th and 6th and at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton, April 11th and 12th.

EXTENSION ASSOCIATION COMMITTEE MEET FRIDAY

The Boone County Extension Association Committee will meet at Burlington Friday evening to review the program of work planned for 1944, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Ten local community and four county-wide commodity agricultural improvement programs are planned.

The County Extension Committee will review the planned programs and will advise on methods of coordinating and carrying them out on the most effective county-wide basis this year. The Committee consists of chairmen of the local programs and representatives of the various county agricultural organizations.

Three Precincts Reach Quotas

At the time this was written only three Boone County precincts had reached their quotas in the Red Cross War Fund Drive. Beaver, with Mrs. Ruth Greene as Chairman, being the third to report "Over The Top." Bellevue came in 7th, with Vernosa second.

Reports are not complete, but it appears that Boone County has raised only a little over one-half of its quota of $87,000. The drive ends March 31, and it is now up to each of you to decide whether or not you have given every penny you can.

You are familiar with the aid and comfort only the Red Cross can give to Service Men and their families, at a time when, because they are fighting for you, they are not able to help themselves. But do you realize that the duties of the Red Cross are now eleven times those of peace time, and that with the decisive battles of the war yet to be fought, still greater demands will be made on it?

The soldier bleeding on the battle field has given his all for you. Are you SURE you have given your limit for him?

34 LOCAL BOYS TO SERVICE

Eleven of our boys are leaving for the Navy and 23 for the Army next Tuesday, April 4th. Among the ones from Walton besides William Jarrell are: Ward Rice, our genial mail carrier; Harold Edward Callen, Wilbur Lee Strouse, Glenn Laws, Aubrey Eckler, Fred Winkle, Melwood Floyd, Harry Glenn, Dickerson Chester, Fugate, Roy Chapman and Robert B. Denny.

NITRATE BOOSTS TOBACCO WEIGHT

James Lester, a farmer in Lyon county cooperating with the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics at Lexington, applied ammonium nitrate to some of his tobacco last year. Upon cutting, he found that 18 of the plants weighed a pound each, while the same number not treated weighed only 12 pounds, W. E. Netherlands, assistant county agent, reports that there is increasing interest throughout the county in soil improvement.

FARM AGENT SETS UP AMBITIOUS PROGRAM

Here are some points in Farm Agent William B. Howell's program in Henry county, Kentucky: Increase hybrid corn growing at least 2,000 acres, which should add 20,000 bushels; increase the quantity and improve the quality of hay by growing more alfalfa, sowing a little more korean lespedeza and using soybeans as an emergency hay crop; sowing oats on korean lespedeza fields for spring grazing and also for grain; growing more small grain for winter pasture, especially balbo ray, and treating 4,000 or more late lambs with penothiazine, which should mean several thousand pounds more lamb.

EASTER BAKERY SALE

The annual Easter Bakery Sale conducted by the Ladies Aid Society of Walton Church will be held this year in the front office of the Community Public Service Co., in Walton, beginning at 10 a. m. Saturday, April 5. Those who may wish to place orders in advance for cakes, pies, etc., may do so by calling Mrs. Ora Fry, phone Walton 568.

Wedding Anniversary To Be Celebrated April 16th

The 50th Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Rouse will be celebrated at their home on South Main Street April 16th. All relatives and friends are invited to join this gathering.

4-H SWINE CHAMPION RECEIVES MEDAL

Robert H. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Smith of Union, has been awarded the Gold E. Wilson Gold Medal Award for County and District 4-H Swine Champion for 1943. The medal was received at the office of the County Agent the past week.

ADVISORY TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE APPOINTED

A County Livestock Marketing Transportation Committee was appointed by truckmen and farmers attending a county meeting at Burlington last Tuesday evening. The Committee is composed of four truckmen and four farmers. Sam Ryle, Burlington, was appointed chairman of the Committee. William Markburg, Florence; J. R. Gross, Walton; and Conner Carroll of Big Bone, are to represent the truckers; and Al Rogers, Grant; H. E. White, Burlington; Tom Ross, Big Bone; and J. C. Bedinger of Walton are to represent the farmers, on the Committee.

The O.D.T. has frozen all commercial truck routes and services to their present territory. The local Committee will deal only with livestock marketing transportation problems and will serve only in an advisory capacity to the area advisory committee which in turn, will be responsible for contacting the Office of Defense Transportation.

Speakers on the Tuesday night transportation meeting program were Elmer Hinkle and R. W. Wiggins of the Area Advisory Committee and Mr. Sanders of the Cincinnati O.D.T. office.

4-H GIRLS TO CONSERVE REPAIR, PLAN FAMILY'S WARDROBE FOR DURATION

Stressing the wartime need of clothing conservation, repair, and wardrobe planning for the entire family, the National 4-H Clothing Achievement Activity is being continued for the fourth consecutive year in 1944.

Four-H Club girls in this state now enrolled in a clothing project are eligible to compete for county, state, and national awards provided by the educational bureau of the Spool Cotton Company. These include gold plated medals to county winners, a all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress, Chicago, next December to the state champion, and twelve $200 college scholarships to the national winners. Full information may be obtained from the county extension agents.

Kentucky's state winner last year was Margaret Campbell of Russellville.

WILLIAM W. JARRELL GOES TO NAVY TUESDAY

William W. Jarrell, who has been associated with this paper for the past year and a half expects to leave April 4th for service in the U. S. Navy.

Mr. Jarrell has made many new friends during this time, besides the host of friends of long standing who regret to see him leave our community, but are proud to have young men like him to join the ranks, to fight for American principles. The very best of wishes go with him.

PRE-ESTER SERVICES AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Services of inspiration and worship have been planned for several nights of Passion Week, April 2-9, at Walton Christian Church, according to the Rev. George S. Carland, pastor.

The public is cordially invited to attend these special services, at 8:00 p. m. each evening.

Tuesday, Service of Inspiration, the Rev. Spencer Mitchell, Carthage, O., Christian Church, speaker with special music by the Carthage Girls' Octet.

Wednesday, Hour of Prayer, remembering our Men in the Armed Forces.

Thursday, Candlelight Communion Service.

Friday, Good Friday Service.

METCALFE COUNTY SHEEP PROFITABLE

Phillip and Robert Depp, who farm 200 acres in Metcalfe county, Kentucky, say sheep is one of the best-paying enterprises. For several years they have had an average of $15 a ewe from the sale of lambs and wool. Their lamb crop average almost a lamb and a half to the ewe. These farmers follow the practice recommended by R. C. Miller, sheep specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics, of buying northwestern ewes and crossing them with native rams.

Mr. Thompson is employed by the U. S. Treasury Department and has been transferred to Cincinnati from the New Orleans branch.

Visit Of Income Tax Man April 12th And 13th

Collector of Internal Revenue S. R. Glenn announces that a deputy from his office will visit Burlington on April 12 and 13, 1944, for the purpose of assisting individual taxpayer in preparing their April 15, 1944 declaration returns. Mr. Glenn says that the new Revenue Act is in many particulars different from the laws previously in effect. Special attention is called to the group of taxpayers who will be required to file their declaration returns by April 15, 1944.

The collector says that the many changes made cannot be explained in a short notice, but that his deputy is familiar with the law and is being sent here to be of real service to the taxpayer. The service is absolutely free. Collector Glenn urges the taxpayers of this county to see the deputy and let him help them with their income tax problems.

NOTICE

Beginning April 12th I will not have office hours on Wednesday afternoon nor evening.

BALL GAMES FOR BENEFIT OF RED CROSS

New Haven and Walton High School Basketball teams will play two games at the New Haven school Friday night, March 31st. Beginning at 8 P. M. This will be the fourth time these teams have played together this year. Of the three games played New Haven was winner in two of the games, Walton taking the other. Much interest is being shown in this game. Be sure to see these two interesting games and help boost your Red Cross fund.

Rural Youth Conference Revealing

The Rural Youth Conference which was held last Saturday, March 25, at Florence School, revealed many interesting facts. The program consisted of Registration from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., devotions led by Rev. Elmer Kidd, Pastor of the Florence Methodist Church, which was followed by a one hour's discussion period from 11:00 to 12:00 o'clock. These discussion groups were led by such of our County leaders as Judge C. L. Cropper, Supt. H. D. Norris, County Agent H. R. Forkner, Secretary of the A. A. A. John Crigler, County Nurse Elizabeth Lowry, and Jim Gilpin of State Conservation Bureau. At 12:00 o'clock a well-balanced and tasty lunch was served in the school cafeteria by the Florence Parent Teachers Association. At 1:00 o'clock the conference reconvened for a half hour of instructive motion picture shown with a forty-five minute period of illustration by the Florence Parent Teachers Association. At 1:00 o'clock the conference reconvened for a half hour of devotions led by Rev. Noble Lucas, Pastor of the Church of England.

The program closed with a forty-five minute period of illustration by the Florence Parent Teachers Association. At 1:00 o'clock the conference reconvened for a half hour of devotions led by Rev. Noble Lucas, Pastor of the Church of England. The program closed with a forty-five minute period of illustration by the Florence Parent Teachers Association. At 1:00 o'clock the conference reconvened for a half hour of devotions led by Rev. Noble Lucas, Pastor of the Church of England.

Several observations have been made: 1. That the young people of our county have a sincere desire for broader vision and knowledge of what the State, the Church, and the School has to offer them in the trying days ahead; 2. That there is also among the various leaders of our county, both political, religious, and educational, a sincere interest in the help and working together to give to our young people all that is possible; 3. This conference produced among our young people a higher respect for leaders of the County in all lines of endeavor; 4. This conference would not have been possible without the great advantage which this County has that many do not realize, and that is a decided Christian and cooperative leadership; 5. That the young people of this County do not want only entertainment. Of all that were involved in following the Conference the outstanding interest was not in the fun they had but in what they learned, especially in the discussion groups, in which they had an opportunity to express themselves; 6. This Youth Conference pointed out a fact that many have been thinking of but nothing has been done about, that there is a definite need in our County to give to our young people interest in the high nature of both in the field of religion and education to direct their thinking in worthwhile things and in the building of character.

In conclusion we may say that the outstanding benefit of such conferences in which the youth of our County mingle with trained leadership of the County is going to regain that lost sense of neighborliness which the County has cherished and profited by throughout its whole history. Or to put it another way, at this Conference we saw the "Golden Rule" in action.

SPECIAL DRILLS TO SPREAD FERTILIZER

Two new kinds of drills to place fertilizer under the furrow slice are to be used in Grant county this year, notes Farm Agent Robert Hume. Alva Ramsdell was the first farmer in the county to build a fertilizer drill for attachment to a plow. It can be used on any type of hillside or other type of plow, and Mr. Ramsdell intends to use it also on a ratoon plow for side dressing. Plans for making this type of drill may be had from county agents. O. L. Mitts purchased a plow-solo drill to be attached to a two-gang tractor plow.

Noted Warsaw Man Passed Away Recently

George Washington Sisson, eldest son of George Marion and Sarah Mary Sisson was born in Gallatin County, Kentucky, February 22, 1862 and died March 21, 1944 being at the time of his death 82 years and 27 days of age. He was married to Mary Ross Seaver in 1889. To this union was born eight children. His wife and two sons, Frank, who gave his life in World War I and Henry preceded him in death several years ago. The surviving children are: Mrs. W. H. Sutton and Mrs. Victor Satchwell of near Warsaw, Mrs. Omar Altha of Beaver Lick, Mrs. Orbia Baker of Rising Run, Robert Sisson of Charleston, West Va., and Miss Clara Sisson who lived at home with her father until the time of his death. He also leaves four brothers, Amos, Allen, and Benjamin of Sugar Creek and T. V. Sisson of Covington. Four sisters, Mrs. Lucy Ryle, Mrs. Mattie Souders and Mrs. W. B. Ambrose of Gallatin County, and Mrs. Dora Webber of Vallejo, Calif. Another sister, Mrs. Laura Rowlette, Owen County, died several years ago. In addition he leaves several grandchildren, nieces, nephews, cousins, and a host of friends to mourn his passing.

In early manhood he united with PaintLick Baptist church. Strictly honest and upright himself he always tried to instill these qualities into the lives of his children. Wise in counsel and sincere in judgment he commanded the respect of all who knew him.

A good man who will be greatly missed in the days to come has gone from our midst.

Services were held from the Paint Lick Baptist Church by the Rev. A. M. Smith on Thursday, March 23rd at 2:00 p. m. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Arrangements were in charge of C. L. Carlton and Son.

Those attending the funeral from out-of-town were: Mr. and Mrs. R. Sisson of Charleston, West Va., Mrs. Buford Stewart of Chicago, Ill., Clarence Rowlette of Ashland, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rowlette, Mrs. Jane Young and daughter and Mrs. and Mrs. Kenneth Herndon and daughter of Owen county, Mrs. H. Stoneking, Mrs. Chester Caldwell and Mrs. Birdie Ryle and children, Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Mr. and Mrs. Alred Robbins and daughter of Boone county.

Advices Check of Of Pressure Canners

Check pressure canners now to be sure they are ready for the busy canning season ahead, caution food specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Doing it now will permit manufacturers to do repair work at the factory, if it is necessary, before they start new canners.

That the pet cock and safety valve may be kept clean by drawing a string or narrow strip of cloth through them, with occasional soaking in vinegar, is one of the suggestions given in the folder, "Take Care of Pressure Canners," available from home demonstration agents, or from the college.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Thompson and son, Joe, arrived here from New Orleans, La., last week, and are spending awhile with Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Jockey of North Main street.

VISUAL EFFICIENCY

ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS

A man or woman with impaired eyesight is seriously handicapped. Socially and in business life, defective vision is always a liability. If you need glasses or are wearing a pair that is unsuited to your particular needs, an early visit here is earnestly advised.

INDEPENDENCE

"Did you ever stop to see what percentage of your church members come into the church, from the Church School and how many from other types of activities. The farmers are getting very anxious to see a few spring days. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. August Bruns of this community extend their sympathy in the sad bereavement of their dear son, Raymond, of Latonia, but formerly of this community. Ray as he was usually called lived in Latonia with his wife, Bernice Coleman, Bruns, and two sons, Harold and Howard.

Ray had undergone a very serious operation at St. Elizabeth hospital, about ten days prior to his death and was doing nicely, but early Sunday morning he was stricken with a heart attack and passed away very suddenly.

His funeral was conducted on Tuesday afternoon at the Swindler Funeral Parlor, in Latonia, in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends, with Rev. Neville White, an our cousin of Mrs. Bruns, officiating. Burial at Independence cemetery. The entire family have the sympathy of their many friends of this community and Latonia.

We had a good attendance at Church School Sunday, and the children are getting a fine donation for the Easter Offering for our Orphan Home and we do appreciate and thank every one who donated. We know it will be a great help to those orphan children.

We missed Mr. Ralph Lewellyn from our Sunday School Sunday as he has been called to the Navy and is now stationed in Virginia. May we all pray for our soldier boys that they will get back home soon and we can have a blessed sweet peace.

Larry Ray Richardson, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Lybrian Richardson is doing nicely from a tonsil operation this last week at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. George Klein entertained Sunday in honor of her sister, Mrs. Will Tuenhopel, of Wisconsin, other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballanger and Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Mann and son, Jimmie Reed.

Miss Hope Keeney of Lexington spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney. Mr. and Mrs. Will Gedkar called on her mother, Mrs. Lou Richardson on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Binder, Mrs. Joe Sweeney and Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Ballanger called at Good Samaritan Hospital Sunday afternoon to visit Mr. Joe Sweeney who is a patient there. Mr. Sweeney has a nervous trouble but is in a fair condition. We hope he will be able to come home soon.

THANKS TO ALL

As Chairman of the Verona Red Cross drive I wish to express my sincere appreciation to all who had a part in putting this drive over, especially my co-workers, Mrs. Elizabeth Boyer, Mrs. Gertrude Brewster, Mrs. Mattie Orr, Miss Lizzie Vest, Mrs. Pattie Walker and Melvin Wasson, also the Verona Graded School, who without regard to self or personal convenience, devoted their time and efforts to assure the success of this drive.

—Mrs. Blanche C. Ransom, Chairman.

UNION

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hedges, of Rice Pike, spent Saturday through Monday in Louisville as guests of relatives and friends.

Mr. James R. Bristow, an employee of the Brighton Screw and Mfg. Co., of Cincinnati, has been suffering from a severe cold at his home here. We wish him a speedy recovery for we know him to be a very conscientious war worker.

Friends who visited Mr. John Fimmel at St. Elizabeth hospital last week report that he is much improved and hopes to come home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Tanner and daughter, Janice, are now located in the Omer Black apartment. We welcome them into our midst.

Word was received by Mrs. Viola Friend, one day last week that her second brother to enter service, has been promoted to Sergeant and can be reached at the following address: Sgt. Tom Denton, ASU 35788217, 185th General Hospital, APO 9826 in care of Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

W. S. Friend who has been sick for two weeks with a stomach ailment, was glad to have his old friend, Russell Brown of Spring Valley, Ohio, and his father, Mr. John Friend of Beaver, to see him Sunday.

Now's the Time to Check Up on Your Refrigerator!

If your refrigerator is not operating perfectly, have it checked by a competent serviceman NOW. Don't wait until hot weather arrives. Repairs take longer these days because of manpower and parts shortages. If you wait until the rush season, you may find yourself temporarily without refrigeration just when you need it most.

Follow These Tips—For That "Ounce of Prevention"

Defrost whenever frost reaches thickness of one-quarter inch.

Wash interior, including freezer, with weak baking soda solution each time you defrost.

Wash exterior with mild soap and warm water. A thin coating of wax will help protect finish.

Wipe grease from the door gasket promptly. Grease deteriorates rubber.

See that gasket makes tight seal. Do not open door oftener than necessary and always close it quickly.

Cover all liquids and keep defrosting tray dry to retard formation of frost on freezer.

Don't set control for colder temperature than necessary. Use fast freezing sparingly.

Keep unit compartment clean. Do not let dust accumulate on condenser coils.

If an open unit model, check to see that belt is not worn and fits properly.

Oil open unit models periodically as per manufacturer's instructions. Sealed unit models need no oiling.

Place refrigerator in coolest part of kitchen where there is plenty of room for ventilation.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Lieut. Homer Lee Osborne of Camp Stewart, Ga., is spending his ten day leave, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Osborne, before leaving for Fort Benning, Ga. Lieut. Osborne is with the Anti-Aircraft branch of the Coast Artillery.

His parents had not heard from him for several weeks, so were greatly delighted when he "walked" in on them a few days ago. Mr. Cris Moore, with the OPA at Lexington was a pleasant visitor at the Advertiser office Tuesday afternoon.

Galen Berkshire of the U. S. Merchant Marines is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Berkshire after having spent four months overseas. He has been in Africa, Italy, Sicily and Corsica.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Vernon Noel of Dayton, were business visitors in Walton Tuesday. They are spending a short time with Mrs. Noel's mother, Mrs. Mary Wilson of Glencoe.

Mrs. Ernest Hartman sold an extra fine veal calf at the Stock Yards last Friday. The calf was not quite six weeks old, weighed 225 lbs. and brought $36.00. Its mother is a Guernsey and is giving over 5 gallons of milk daily.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Doan and daughter, June entertained Friday night with a birthday dinner for Mrs. Doan's sister, Miss Mary Ransler. Other guests to enjoy this occasion were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ransler, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Maze and daughter, Sue Ann, of Florence.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Finnell were calling on Mr. Finnell's brother, John Finnell, who is ill in St. Elizabeth Hospital, Sunday.

Women's Society Of Christian Service

The Circle No. 2 of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church was entertained for the March meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Carlisle.

In the absence of Mrs. Bruce Wallace, the president, the Vice-President, Mrs. Fay Connor presided during the business session. Mrs. Lucile Brakefield was program leader. Members and guests included Mrs. Fay Connor, Mrs. Lucille Brakefield, Mrs. Lucille Hudson, Mrs. Mary Stephenson, Mrs. John B. Walton, Miss Emma Jane Miller and the hostess, Mrs. Carlisle.

Walton Col. Home-makers Club Meets

The club met Wednesday, March 15th at the home of Mrs. Estill Sleet in Richwood. Members present were Alice Poore, Mrs. Martha Jones, Anna P. Ross, Mrs. Jas. Ingram, Anna Mae Sleet, Mrs. Ribert Sleet, Kathryn Ingram, Mrs. Jas. Riddell, Mrs. Logan Norris, Mrs. Virgil Sechrets, Adeline Sleet, Mrs. Birdie Blue, Mrs. Joe Howlett, Mrs. Elmer Ross, Mrs. Alan Gaines, Mrs. W. W. House, Mrs. Hubert Baker and a new member, Mrs. John Sleet, and the hostess, Mrs. Estill Sleet.

Roll call was answered with questions. Each one missing his question was fined five cents. Mrs. Robert Sleet gave a report on "Land Scape Study." Alice Poore is gathering funds for the Red Cross. The lesson was given by Mrs. W. W. House.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, April 19th at the home of Mrs. Hubert Baker at Verona.

Paul, Thomas and Willie Hendrickson, brothers, and members of a 4-H club in Adair county, sold a litter of seven pigs for $232 and three lambs for $53, and now own $200.00 worth of war bonds. They also helped grow a good home garden.

Mrs. John Hamilton spent the week-end with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Tony Bagby of Independence.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Hull Outlines U. S. Foreign Policy, Emphasizes International Cooperation; Nazis Surrendering Ukraine Foothold; Congress Studies Simplified Tax Form

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Burma—In Burma even children smoke, as Pfc. Wayne Martin, Los Angeles, Calif., passes cigarettes out to young natives as U. S. troops enter Kachin.

FOREIGN POLICY: Outlined by Hull

The concern of Americans in the light of the diplomatic jockeying in Europe, U. S. foreign policy was outlined by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, with emphasis on world political and economic cooperation.

Said Hull: "Some international agency must be created which can—by force, if necessary—keep the peace among nations in the future."

Political differences which present a threat to the peace of the world should be submitted to agencies which would use the remedies of discussion, negotiation, conciliation and good offices.

A dispute of a legal character... should be adjudicated by an international court of justice.

After calling for abolition of stifling world trade barriers, Hull declared for stabilizing currencies for the smooth flow of goods and services, and offering financial assistance to countries to enable them to obtain resources for maintaining their business and agricultural life.

RUSSIA:

Near Hungary

Falling back under the advance of Russian armies, Nazi troops retreated to the long shadows of the Carpathian mountains in Hungary, guarding central Europe, while farther to the southeast, other German forces were surrendering their last foothold on the rich mineral and farm land of the Ukraine.

In backing up to the Carpathians, the Germans abandoned additional territory in prewar Poland, while their withdrawal to the southeast brought the Russians closer to the Rumanian border, from which the population was being evacuated.

The Nazis' remaining toehold in the Ukraine was being steadily loosened as the Russians slashed deeply into their lines all along this front, threatening the German units with encirclement from the rear.

TAX FORMS: Plan Simplification

The nation's 50,000,000 taxpayers who heretofore wrestled with this year's income tax form won't have to do battle again in 1945, if congress acts favorably on Rep. Robert Doughton's legislation for simplified tax payments.

Under Doughton's plan, 30 million Americans earning less than $5,000 yearly in wages and salaries would simply file a copy of their withholding receipt, and the treasury then would figure whether they owed more taxes or were entitled to a refund.

People receiving less than $5,000 in wages and salaries but more than $100 in other income would file a simplified statement.

The present normal and surtax would be combined into a new surtax and raised to 20 percent of the first $2,000 of taxable income, and although the victory tax would be abolished, a new normal tax of 3 percent would be imposed on net income over $500. All exemptions would be set at $500 per person.

All exemptions would be set at $500 per person.

HIGHLIGHTS... in the week's news

GUARDS: Members of the Coast Guard Temporary Reserve, an organization established by the navy to guard factories, are being mustered out. Civilian patrolmen will protect the plants in the future.

SHOTGUN SHELLS: The WPB may release about 25,000,000 shotgun shells for sale to civilians early in April, according to information obtained by Senator Maybank.

U. S. EMPLOYMENT: Total number of persons employed in the United States has declined to the lowest point in two years, at 50,200,000 at the end of February. Last July the total was 54,600,000. The all-time peak was in August, 1942, with 54,900,000 people at work. Most of the reduction is accounted for by withdrawal of women from temporary jobs.

PACIFIC: Action Widespread

From the Marshall Islands to Burma, the whole Pacific front was aflame, with Allied forces pounding against the Japs' stubborn outer defenses.

In mid-Pacific, U. S. battleships and bombers plastered the enemy's isolated holdings in the eastern Marshall, while farther to the southeast, U. S. army divers ripped Jap shipping moving troops and supplies along the New Guinea coast for fighting in the rugged country around Madang.

With one side and then the other trying to hold off the other before the rainy monsoon season sets in in Burma, Allied troops launched an airborne offensive behind Jap lines in the north, but the enemy struck back with a full scale offensive to the south, aimed at snipping U. S. and British supply lines radiating from India.

SHIPYARD FRAUD: FBI Nips Scheme

It still takes a long, long step to keep ahead of the FBI.

Charged with falsifying work records so as to draw higher pay, 34 employees of the Bethlehem Steel company's Sparrows Point, Md., shipyard were arrested by the FBI and accused of defrauding the government of sums amounting to a million dollars yearly.

Allegedly in operation for five years, the scheme involved welders, who were said to have paid the men checking their work $1 or more per day for altering the records, enabling some to make as much as $15 extra per day.

More than 700 welders allegedly were involved at the shipyards, where total employment exceeds 8,000, and 24 tankers and cargo ships were turned out last year.

LOCKER PLANTS: Increase Use

Due to an expected expansion of 25 per cent in war gardens this year, 10 per cent increase in frozen food locker plant capacity for 1944 is foreseen.

So widespread has become use of the locker plant, operators predict a 50 per cent expansion in facilities during the year following the war, with increasing use in big cities.

Originally designed as a rural device with 10 per cent in communities of 5,000, locker plants are most numerous in the Midwest, though their popularity has spread to New England, the South and Far West.

Business-Finance

Mail Order

Because of shortages of merchandise, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., America's No. 2 mail order house, was unable to fill orders for $105,000,000 in 1943. Cost to the company in handling the orders, moreover, approximated $100,000,000, a loss of $5 million in earnings for the year to $20,677,008. Average number of employees is 78,000.

Rails

Ordinarily a small item in peacetime, special freight rates to the government on goods moving over land granted to the railroads may cut rail's wartime earnings from $300 to $500 million dollars, Union Pacific President W. H. Jeffers said. Repeat of such rates is being sought.

Renegotiation

Stating that contractors whose war orders had been cancelled by the government have received more than 10 per cent of their settlement claims and some have waited over a year for action, a senate subcommittee pressed for legislation granting contractors immediate financial assistance up to 90 per cent of their claims to provide working capital for other production.

EUROPEAN RELIEF: Ask Food Shipments

Long opposed by the British because it would relieve the blockade girdling Axis Europe, plans for feeding the needs of occupied countries were pushed forward in Washington, D. C., with a house committee's recommendation that the U. S. undertake the task under supervision of neutral powers.

Similar to a proposal already approved by the senate, the house plan sponsored by Rep. Fish (N. Y.) asked that the United States, the governments and the International Red Cross be requested to supervise shipment and distribution of food in France, Belgium, Poland, Greece, Czechoslovakia, Norway, the Netherlands and Yugoslavia so that none shall fall in German hands.

During such relief to Greece last year, Fish said the U. S. state department certified the successful operation of the plan, without benefit to Germany.

VACATION GAS

Winter vacationists who drove to Florida resorts and now are unable to obtain gasoline to return to their homes cannot expect assistance by appealing to Chester Bowles. The head of the Office of Price Administration curiously refused to overrule the rationing board's War needs must come first, he said.

"We simply do not have enough gasoline to earmark any of it for driving to and from vacation resorts, if we are to meet these needs," Mr. Bowles stated.

Washington Digest GOP Leader Places Faith In Simple Election Formula

Harrison Spangler, Party Chairman, Sees Republican Victory as Result of Complete Effective Local Organization.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

On a recent sunny Washington afternoon, I made a pilgrimage to the Republican National committee headquarters. As I entered the white-pillared portal of the modest little house they have rented on Connecticut avenue, a number of thoughts, which may be omens of good or ill in the coming election, floated into my ken.

The house was once a private home but now it is situated amidst shops and restaurants and looks across the avenue toward a towering apartment house taken over by the Civilian Defense administration.

As I ascended the stairway to the second floor office of Chairman Harrison Spangler, memories rushed about me and I was transported back to the days when the Republican party was suffering in the slough of its deepest despair. The rooms about me then housed one of the many trade organizations created by that wonderful and awful National Recovery administration presided over by the late and stormy General Iron Pants Johnson.

And later, as I chatted with Mr. Spangler, I was reminded of another circumstance, gently symbolic of the days when the elephant sulked, impotent and neglected, in his tent. The Republican committee was forced to move some two years ago from its snapper, modern quarters on Lafayette Square where it could gaze longingly at the White House on the right hand, and not too hopelessly at the United States Chamber of Commerce on the other. The reason the committee had to move was because it was only a tenant on Lafayette Square and the CIO (which had tossed a million into the Democratic electioneering fund) was the landlord.

Tempora mutentur.

But if the times and the quarters have changed, so have Republican spirits. "Roosevelt won't carry two states or was it five?" I was contentedly informed by one of the modest laborers in the GOP vineyard.

Harrison Spangler made no tall predictions to me. He made no predictions at all. He simply told me about what he is doing, the results so far obtained. He has a simple faith that results already achieved are the precursors of victory.

Well-Used Word

Spangler's forte is organization, and that's the word he uses most. "The precinct is the squad," he said. "If you have good squads, you have a good regiment."

He has reduced the training of the squad to a very simple formula. Get one energetic worker and assign him or her 40 Republican voters. See that they vote. Mark Hanna used that system. It works. Low (Spangler's own state) uses it. Many others do.

The important word in the last sentence is "do." Important because Spangler used it in the present tense. In the days of the Blue Eagle, for many years, the Republican party, statement about an effective Republican political organization had to be used in the past tense. But tempora mutentur.

Chairman Spangler is not starting at scratch with his organizing; 28 states which have elected Republican governors, he pointed out to me, already have pretty good machines which are working now.

The chairman is a typical, successful businessman of a middle-sized town (Cedar Rapids, Iowa) in the Middle West. His speech and his speeches are pretty much basic English except when he "rises to pronounce" on party principles. Then he uses good old substantial political phrases marshaled in the conventional manner. But like all pre-convention committee chairmen, his job is eschewing the overtly specific. He can talk about candidates, but not a candidate, pro or con; he can talk about platforms but not about plans.

He is, according to his associates, a man of action. Already he has visited all of the northern states and that is what he is all doing during his time between the field and the Washington office. He likes best to meet with a small group of leaders, about 30. He also makes his contacts with non-political organizations (He, himself, is an Elk and a Mason).

The Farm Problem

The farm organizations will be handled en masse. Representatives of all the farm organizations have been invited to attend a meeting in Chicago early next month in order to express their views for possible incorporation in the party platform. They will meet with members of the Republican postwar advisory council's committee on agriculture. Its chairman is Governor Hickel, who succeeded the late Senator McNary, father of the farm bloc.

Agriculture is one of the eight "problems" listed by the advisory council at its meeting in September, 1942. The others are foreign policy; postwar industry and employment; social welfare; federal administration; finance and currency; labor; agriculture; and international economic problems.

A staff of experts under Dr. Neil Carothers, dean of the school of business of Lehigh university, has been assembled, who assist the council, which hopes to produce timber for the party platform by scientific methods.

Chairman Spangler admits that we face a world in which conditions which will affect the election in November are likely to change radically, perhaps before the conventions; certainly before the elections. But he believes that insofar as possible, the various "problems" listed by the advisory committee should be threshed out in as much detail as possible before the convention so that they will not have to be dealt with superficially at the last moment by the platform committee at the convention.

Votes and Relief

"We made several surveys covering different periods in the East a few years ago," he said, "and we found that the New Deal vote rose in direct proportion with the amount of relief in the community. The more grateful for the help they got and gave Roosevelt the credit; they forgot that it was the people's money they were spending. And when they are able to pay their own bills they forget for what they received, they want to be independent. They want to shake off government control and regulation."

Mr. Spangler and his associates believe that the Republican party will win—first, because of the energetic response of people which has made the rebuilding of an effective political organization possible; second, because they consider trends already evident are a factual indication of a turn of the tide.

Mr. Spangler did not attempt to argue the case of the Republican party, nor are these columns a place for such a political debate, but anyone can see that he and his staff believe that they share a popular feeling that "the times have changed," "et nos mutamur illis" (and we are changed with them). The "we" changing a voting majority of the American people.

Of such is the optimism which fills the workshop on Connecticut avenue where the one concern is the practical side of politics—where, where the shadow of the Blue Eagle once fell across the portals, not even the flutter of a ghostly feather can now be detected.

Service Education

To facilitate the educational program for servicemen overseas, the United States Armed Forces Institute has set up branches in five theaters of war—Southwest Pacific, South Pacific, Middle East, European and Alaskan theaters. Members of all branches of the armed forces serving overseas may now apply directly to the new branches for the same courses that are given in the states through the headquarters at Madison, Wis. The curriculum covers the range from grammar school to university subjects. An enlisted man may apply for as many courses supplied directly by USAFI as he wishes for only one enrollment fee of $2. For self-instructing courses, text books and materials are supplied free of charge.

American servicemen consumed approximately 143,192,000 cups of coffee and 70,000,000 donuts at Red Cross clubs, canteens and clubmobiles overseas during the last 12 months.

Horse-drawn streetcars—after an absence of 40 years—are again being used in Amsterdam. They may be slow, but power is conserved.

Soft soap is all right if it works. And this time it does. Nails and screws are much easier to drive if rubbed over a cake of soap first.

Why not use that old piano stool in the attic for a dressing table? Upholster the top and attach a ruffle of chintz, or other fabric harmonizing with the room furnishings, to the outer edge to cover the legs.

When the glaze begins to wear off winging rollers and they lose their grip, a light sandpapering with coarse sandpaper may help. Use sandpaper with discretion, of course, and then wipe off with a damp cloth.

Worn sheets can be cut to suitable lengths and dyed for window curtains, or they can be used as covers for dresses and coats.

To restore the fullness of chenille and candlewick which has been washed, shake vigorously from time to time while the articles are drying. When completely dry, brush with a whiskbroom.

A girl's skirt can be made out of a pair of men's pants that are worn out in the seat. Use the bottom of the pants for the top of the skirt and the top of pants for bottom of skirt. This makes a four-gore skirt.

No one likes greasy soup, and now we're a double reason not wanting it—our country needs the excess grease. One way to serve both purposes is to allow the soup to thicken and cool after making, then skim grease off while cold. Repeat—the results are good soup and no excess grease. And—do not forget to bring your excess fats to your meat dealer.

RED CROSS HOME NURSING

Because the nation is feeling more and more the effects of a constantly growing shortage of physicians and nurses, which since Pearl Harbor has drained every community until the health of civilians is potentially in danger, the American Red Cross has instituted a national campaign for Home Nursing Classes to begin the first part of May.

This is based on no hollow ambition for numbers, no superimposed goal imagined by an impractical committee; it is a concerted effort to meet a wartime need felt in every hamlet of America.

Health and education authorities who make up the membership of the National Council of Red Cross Home Nursing met recently in the Nation's Capital and set a figure of 3,000,000 persons needed to study home nursing as a means of easing this shortage. To train this number, several years of steady work will be required.

It is not a campaign that can be ended soon, if ever. No military victory, not even a declaration of peace, can insure normal health service. The wounded being returned require continued hospitalization. It will be years before young doctors will wait in empty offices to establish a practice, or before nurses can be had for "luxury" illness. "The home-maker must learn self-reliance, freedom from fear, the sure technique born of skillful under professional nurses if she is to meet this emergency."

The Red Cross Home Nursing course makes no pretense of turning out skilled nurses. It requires only a few hours a week of informal class-room lectures and demonstrations. Women who enroll soon learn its limitations. It does not teach midwifery, self-doing, short cuts to health. It is a sane practical course that teaches respect for the doctor's orders, economy in using his time.

Marion G. Howell, President of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, says: "No one can estimate the importance of the contribution which the holders of Red Cross Nursing certificates have made to the health of this country, particularly in war time. The teaching of Home Nursing is important, both in war and in peace. In these days when all nursing staffs are depleted, it is even more important that our fine American women in charge of families and homes are prepared through such programs as the Red Cross gives in Home Nursing courses." Stella Goetzky, Chairman, National Nursing Council for War Service, says: "Professional nurses ask the women of our country to enroll in the Red Cross Nursing course and to share with them in meeting the nursing needs of a nation at war."

Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service; Dr. James E. Paulin, President, American Medical Association; health commissioners and other medical authorities endorse the course. Dr. Ragnar T. Westman, commissioner of Health, of Seattle, says: "I consider Red Cross Home Nursing a most important field of public health education, and hope it will continue as a permanent peace program."

Information about classes for Boone County can be obtained from I. A. Rouse, Chairman of the Chapter, Elizabeth Lowry, Red Cross Nurse or a member of the Nursing Committee for your community.

STAFFORDSBURG (Delayed)

Not much news today—I guess it is all snowed under. We didn't have any Sunday school since the folks were afraid to get out on the road. Mr. and Mrs. Borkers did go and I think they deserve a blue ribbon.

Miss Hope Keeney spent the weekend with friends and relatives here but had to leave her car and return by train.

The many friends of Raymond Burnet, formerly of this community, but lately of Latonia, were very sorry to learn of his death on Saturday night. He had been in the hospital for some days following an operation and seemed to be recovering when the end came.

Chester Rapp could not come home Monday morning because of a frozen radiator. He spent the time until daybreak with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Armstrong.

Joe Sweeney is under treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital for a nerve ailment which affected one of his legs. We wish him a swift recovery.

Quite a surprise to their friends and relatives was the elopement of Marjorie Blinder, the 15 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Blinder and John Armstrong of Nicholson on Wednesday, March 15th, just two days before her sixteenth birthday. They both are young and everyone wishes them many years of happiness.

From reports we hear the egg collection for the Orphan's Home is doing fine. If you wish to help and on one visits you, just get in touch with some one on the committee.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR NINE-YEAR OLD GIRL HELD TUESDAY, MARCH 28

(Delayed)

Funeral services were held at the Paint Lick Baptist Church on Tuesday, March 28 for Edna Rose Ball, the little nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ball. She had been sick and afflicted since a severe illness at the age of 8 months. She was so sweet and patient and she will be sadly missed by all who knew and loved her.

Besides her parents, three brothers, Donald, David and Harry Douglas and three sisters, Evelyn, Betty and Billy Jo are left to mourn her passing.

Rev. E. Raymond Dykes, Ghent, Ky., delivered a very comforting message and two beautiful hymns were sung, after which the little body was laid to rest beside those of her grandfather, William Huffman and her little brother, Lloyd Richard Ball.

Mosgrove and Tandy Carrollton had charge of funeral arrangements.

SUGAR CREEK (Delayed)

Mrs. Abbie Stewart of Indiana spent the week here helping to care for her father, who remains very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. William Beach entertained his nieces from Big Bone, Thursday.

Robert Clifton was a business visitor in Louisville, Wednesday.

Miss Ruby Caldwell of Glencoe was the supper guest of the Clifton sisters, Wednesday.

Bernard Griffin spent Saturday night with Clyde Ellis.

Mrs. Viola Poland of Cincinnati is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Shelton.

Miss Roberta Clifton and Bernard Griffin spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bond and daughter of Latonia.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Story spent Tuesday in Covington on business.

Mrs. L. M. Denser, who has been ill is better.

Salvage Fat Is Needed

The 1944 quota for kitchen grease has been raised 48 percent above 1943 in Kentucky and in Boone County. The only way for Boone to make their quota is for both suburban and farm homes to do their part, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Our American homes are entrusted with an important job in collecting kitchen fat. The Kentucky Salvage Committee reports that they will have to receive at least double the quantity of fat they have been receiving to make up the deficit.

There are three reasons saving fat: (1) You need to eat some to keep well; (2) You need some to cook with; and (3) Your country needs it to make munitions.

Every housewife should remember several fat facts. Overheating is the surest way to spoil any fat. Don't let it "smoke"—its flavor and food value will be ruined. Not even a teaspoonful of fat skimmed from soup or gravy left in the frying pan or roasting pan, or the smallest piece of fat trimmed from meat should find its way to the garbage can. Fats saved from cooking spoil more quickly than new fat. Strain it while hot and keep it in a closely covered container in a dark, cold place away from strong smelling foods. Rancid, spoiled fats are not good for cooking or salvage.

The government reports that one pound of waste fat which you cannot use for cooking provides enough glycerine to make 13 pounds of gunpowder. Turn yours into your butcher! He will give you four cents for each pound plus two meat points.

Project instruction in Home Economics has been started in the eleven 4-H Clubs in Boone County, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Forty project group meetings are being held each week by volunteer adult leaders. Clothing and foods classes hold the center of interest at the present time. Canning project meetings will start in the early summer.

Adult leaders report that they intend completing the clothing and foods projects by the time school closes.

OLD SEWING MACHINE GOES BACK TO WORK

The self-reliance of farm women in meeting wartime needs was indicated recently by Mrs. T. Clark of Garrard county and the members of her homemakers' club. Recognizing the importance of home sewing at this time, Mrs. Clark reclaimed an old sewing machine long ago discarded. Originally, she paid $1.30 for it second-hand, used it for six years until it quit running, then stored it in the brooder house. After soaking the head in kerosene overnight, the club members removed all the grease, re-oiled the machine and adjusted the tension. With an investment of only 40 cents for a belt and needles, Mrs. Clark now has a machine in good working order.

LIKES BALBO RYE

That one acre of balbo rye is worth five acres of common rye grazing and winter pasture is the opinion of Joe Morris of Trimble county, who has been sowing balbo rye for the past two or three years. Mr. Morris reported to Farm Agent J. D. Tolbert that the crop sowed last fall made a vigorous growth and has withstood heavy pasturing with sheep and cattle this winter.

GARDEN INTEREST REACHES NEW HIGH

That interest in gardening and other food production will reach a new high this year is indicated by the large number of requests for information received by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. To meet the increasing demands in the various phases of the subject, specialists at the college have prepared a series of leaflets based on their work and observations.

In Leaflet 60, "Grow Your Own Food," a general idea of the food needed every day and what must be produced to supply them, is given. Leaflet 61, "Your Vegetable Garden," tells what and how to plant and how to care for the garden.

Available also are the following: "More Milk from the Family Cow," Leaflet 28; "Chickens and Eggs for Home Use," Leaflet 62; "Grow Fruits and Berries for Home Use," Leaflet 1; and "Can Fruits and Vegetables," Leaflet 47.

Copies of the above may be had upon request from the college or from county agricultural or home agents.

PULPWOOD PAYS

Herbert Faulkner, the first farmer in Grant County to cut softwood timber on his farm, will profit two ways, according to Farm Agent Robert Hume. Faulkner is getting a good price for his pulpwood, and at the same time he is clearing fertile overflow land to be used for crops.

Who Profits Most from L & N Service?

In the 94 years of its life the L & N has aided in the enormous development of the South and welded together a wide expanse of Southern territory. Its contribution in taxes to the support of government, including schools and highways—its purchases as well as those of its employees—its movement of traffic in peacetimes and its essential service in wartime—all have insured to the great benefit of the general public. It now moves a ton of average freight—coal to cologne—one mile for less than one cent, the price of sending a post card.

Who got the lion's share of its 1943 gross revenues—the greatest year in its history? Read the astonishing figures:

$77,500,000 to 33,000 employees as wages and salaries
$68,000,000 to National, State and Local Governments as taxes
$34,400,000 to industry for materials and supplies
$9,350,000 to bondholders as interest
$9,190,000 to stockholders as dividends

Note that 9,000 L & N stockholders in 47 states received in dividends only about one-ninth of what went to the workers, and about one-eighth of what was paid in taxes. Does any other private industry come so neatly to bring of life, profits, by the people, for the people?

The immediate purpose of the Old Reliable is to help in winning this ghastly war. It is already looking forward to postwar improvements and modernized service. It asks no selfish favors, but only treatment equal to that given its competitors—and in keeping with its public usefulness.

Subscription $1.50 Per Year In Advance

WALTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, APRIL 6th, 1944

VOLUME 30—NO. 20

Advertiser Starts Apr. 1st With New Editor-Owner

The Walton Advertiser started on April 1st, 1944, with a new editor and owner, Mrs. J. R. Wallace who has been connected with the paper for 23 years sold to Mark M. Meadows, of Louisville.

Mr. Meadows is not new to this territory as he ran the paper at Warsaw, Kentucky, for a number of years, and was also at New Castle, Kentucky for seven years, having been in the country newspaper business for the past fifteen years.

The editor's wife, Mrs. Ann Meadows, is assisted in the publishing of the Advertiser, since she is an experienced linotype operator. Both Mr. and Mrs. Meadows have recently been employed by the Western Recorder, the state Baptist publishing house in Louisville, from where they came to Walton.

Mrs. J. R. Wallace will remain with the Advertiser to assist in gathering news and advertising, and to assist the editor and wife in many ways.

The new editor states that he will try to uphold the high standard that has been set for the paper in the past years, and will devote the very best in him to give to this section the very best paper possible.

The same straight-forward policy of operation will be followed trying not to favor any certain section or faction, but try to give to its subscribers an all-around good paper.

The readers and others are invited to stop in the Advertiser office at your first opportunity and meet the new editor and his wife.

Local Roller Rink Destroyed By Fire Last Wednesday

The Walton Roller Rink was destroyed by fire last Wednesday which necessitated the calling of three fire departments to the scene to keep the fire from spreading.

The fire in the large two-story frame building was discovered about 11:30 p. m. When P. H. Vest, Walton fire chief, arrived at the scene he immediately called the Florence fire department for aid. The Brainer fire department also responded to the call.

Members of the three departments prevented the fire from spreading to adjacent property, which was quite an accomplishment, but were unable to save the skating rink. Many spectators were attracted to the scene since the blaze could be seen for many miles.

Clifford Pruett, owner of the rink said he closed the rink at 11 p. m. following a skating party. The loss is estimated at $7,500. Included in the loss was a large number of skates, a juke box and restaurant equipment. Residents of Walton commended the firemen for preventing the blaze from spreading. The firemen worked until Thursday morning to extinguish the blaze.

McKinleys Have 25th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McKinley were hosts to eight relatives and friends at their home in Independence, Ky., Sunday, March twenty-sixth, on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. ## MOTHER OF LOCAL LADY DIES AT ASHLAND, KY.

Mrs. Mary T. Kokendoffer, 78 years old, mother of Mrs. John Gault, of Walton, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Section in Ashland, Ky., on Saturday, March 25th, of pneumonia, after several weeks illness. She was the widow of C. C. Kokendoffer, former jailer of Nicholas county, and road contractor. In recent years Mrs. Kokendoffer had spent some time with her other daughter, Mrs. Garnett Arnold of Cynthiana. She made friends wherever she lived. A Christian woman in every respect, devoted mother, a loyal friend and neighbor.

Burial was in the Carlisle cemetery.

HER LOVELY VOICE IS HEARD ON WLW

Lovely Dorothy Short, whose beautiful soprano voice is heard in radio programs originating at station WLW, where she is a featured singer, Miss Short began her radio career in Seattle, Washington, and in 1932, she was winner of the Cincinnati Summer Opera auditions.

FARMERS SHOULD ORDER SOYBEAN MEAL

Boone County farmers have been faced with an acute protein feed shortage during the past year. Protein feed increases efficiency in production and saves large amounts of grain feeds, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The county will receive a carload of soybean meal distributed thru the War Food Administration for delivery the first of this week. Farmers needing this feed should file their order immediately at the A. A. office in Burlington. All soybean meal thru the above source must be ordered from the car. Approximately half of this carload has not been ordered to date.

The last carload of soybean meal received about two weeks ago was delivered at the car for $54.42 per ton, which is cheaper than many farmers are paying for corn or shelled corn. Forty-five pounds of soybean meal will replace five bushels of corn feeding hogs in a dry lot. Farmers should not overlook the possibilities of saving their feed supply by balancing their rations with a protein supplement of this kind when it is available.

TO THE WALTON PATRONS

Through the courtesy of Mr. Clinton Cleek, I was appointed substitute mail carrier for the duration. Realizing I will not be as efficient as Mr. Rice for some time, I will appreciate any cooperation given me in the numbering of all houses and in every body putting their names on the mail boxes, also any leniency shown me in any mistakes I might make and feel that when I know all the people better and where they live I can give good service and be able to please most of the patrons.

Walton Wins Red Cross Benefit Basket Ball Game From New Haven With Whirlwind Finish

The Walton basketball team pulled out of the fire last Friday night when they came from behind in the last few minutes to win 25-22.

New Haven led most of the game, but in the last minutes Walton went out on a scoring spree. The game was played for the benefit of the Red Cross Drive. The door fee was $50.40 with each school being benefited by getting credit for 50 per cent of the total. This was the fourth time that these two teams had met and Walton needed to win to even the games at two each for the year.

The second team boys lost to New Haven by one point. The score being 21 to 22.

Both Dearing and Baker were pleased with the way our boys played, especially with the fine donation to the Red Cross.

BAPTIST TRAINING UNION ENTERTAINED

The Young People of the Baptist Training Union were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Rector, Monday evening.

Those enjoying the games and stunts of the evening were: Gloria Garrett, Lucy Pennington, Anna Belle Percival, Ursula Hurston, Grace Hanks, Margaret Pennington, Mary Louise Rector, Myrick Crouch, Jimmy Pennington, Aubrey Ecklar, Elden Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Rector and Irma Winifred Rector.

New Haven To Give "Girl Shy"

The New Haven Senior Class will present their annual class play, a three-act comedy, GIRL SHY, on Friday evening, April 7, at 8:00 P. M.

This is one of the cleverest comedies you could ever hope to see. There are many clever situations as well as plenty of exciting scenes in an apartment on a college campus at graduation time. The characters are as follows:

Tom Arsdale, who is girl shy. Alan Judge: Babe Sanford, who is determined to meet Tom. Mary C. Ryan: Oke Silmon, God's gift to women. Bruce Ferguson: Peaches Carter, Oke's girl friend, Mary C. Jones: Anthony Arsdale, Tom's father. Walter Ferguson: Sylvia Webster, Tom's fiancée. Mary K. Shields: Caroline. Tom's aunt. Norma Laiby: Dean Marlow. Marlow's admirer. Lloyd Shields: Alfred Tennyson Mergatoyd, a poet. Ben Al Riley: Chuck Mayo. The Laidy Dixie Stock Farm: Birdie Lawrence, a movie actress. Hazel Stephenson: "Asma", the "wash lady." Nell Jean Doane: Coach. Mrs. John Masters.

The New Haven Seniors are proud of the opportunity to present such a brilliant play. You will be proud that you have seen it. Admission 20 and 30c.

Boone County Still $436.23 Short In Red Cross Drive; Contributions Needed

When all reports were in Monday, it was found Boone County was still short of reaching its goal in the Red Cross War Fund Drive by $436.23. Three more precincts had reported "over the top" namely: Union, Mrs. Martha Hiey Chairman; Petersburg, Mrs. Raymond Witham, Chairman; and Constance, Mrs. George Kottmeyer Chairman. Other precincts previously reporting over are Bellevue, Verona, Beaver and Carlton. $30.97 was donated from a collection taken Saturday night during the program given by the colored Jubilee Singers in the Court House.

There are now five precincts in the County which have not reached their quotas, and this extension of time for the Drive will give them the opportunity to make the special effort necessary to meet this obligation and be able to look their Service Men in the face and say "We are with you."

We must not, we cannot, fail Boone County's obligation to the Service Men are looking to us to see if the home folks have at least ten dollars worth of interest in piece in their welfare and comfort. That is what it amounts to. Ten dollars contributed to the Red Cross for each man in the Service from Boone County would more than raise our quota of $8,700.00.

Only the Red Cross is in a position to give those men certain necessary services. Only the Red Cross collects life saving plasma, sends field workers right along with the troops to help with their troubles, maintains service clubs for their recreation, and establishes contact with families in cases of emergencies.

Those and many others are the functions of the Red Cross. You hear of its work every day from the boys themselves. If any one of these boys asked you to do him such a favor, you would do it gladly. But now that you cannot be at his side to do it personally, you can send your contribution to the Red Cross to do it for you.

more dollars with which to say "Thank You" to them? Send all contributions to your local Chairman, or to County Chairman, Irvin Rouse in Burlington. Do not allow Boone County to fail.

All Precinct Chairmen, please note! Be sure to get your final report to Mr. Rouse before noon, Saturday, April 8, that the County report may be made in next week's paper.

Sunday's Enquirer reported a gift of sixty dollars to the Red Cross from a soldier in New Guinea, saying "To show my appreciation to the American Red Cross for everything they are doing to make us happy."

He was not asked to give. He was not expected to give; but we here in Boone County who are expected to give, have not raised our quota.

We are devoting this space each week to letters received by us or sent in by parents, wives or others from "our boys" or girls in the service.

We hope that everyone will cooperate in this venture and make it a real service column.

We are sending the boys our paper FREE OF CHARGE and we know that they will enjoy reading the letters from other friends in the service. And until such time as they will have time to write direct to the editor, we are depending on the happy mothers to make this column interesting to us as well as them, by bringing in the letters that you think will make good reading. Thanks, in advance.—Editor.

IS Your Efforts As Great As Your Sons

England March 8, 1944

It doesn't seem as though it has been so long but yet the weeks and months are passing into years. I often dwell on the happy moments I spent when in childhood. How the neighbor children and I used to play, "Cops and Robbers" and a brief period wonder back in mind to the Indian stories we had been told. Then later on by bringing the memories of history we had learned at a young age in school. We wanted to pretend to be soldiers doing some historic deed or becoming adventurous. That's an example of our American heritage. To be brave and defend our people, that we could us. I then, nor anyone else of the later generation really knew the true value of freedom.

We did not realize the powerful influence of Nazism that was being built up in Germany and Japan with the idea of being the supreme rulers of the world. No, we were a country of Peace, working together to strengthen the morals of our people, that we could have a greater U. S. than ever before. The war demons of the world had the wrong conception of glory and power. They were seeking it thru man. To be the victors and glory in their achievements with their hands raised far above the world and all of this gained thru blood, torture and death. If they had only sought Spiritual glory and victories in the way they sought to destroy civilization their greatness would have lived for ever. God was left out. Hitler, Tojo and their satellites of whom in their estimation had smart ideas were very ignorant because they could have found that glory in Christ Jesus. They would always have had Peace and happiness and the price of sin would not be starting them in the face as it is today. The torture, sorrow and bloodshed would have never been.

The Polish seeketh the path of the devil, but the wise fear of God." Not speaking altogether of the enemies of our nation but let us examine ourselves. Why not each individual ask that question to himself. Am I wise or foolish? As I have often said, Peace cannot be won by force and the small bit of wisdom man can gather together on his own but all of us must look to God for wisdom and leadership. He says, whatsoever ye ask in My Name it will be granted. God isn't like man. He can be trusted. So why not everyone seek more and more each day to return to the hand of God?

Again I will say, our boys are giving their all to return to the country, home and church they love. It will be a very happy day to return to the familiar spots we once loved and then we will realize to the greatest extent that, that place is the most beautiful in the world and realize that freedom is priceless.

Remember, are you foolish or wise. Be wise, put forth the greatest effort you have and add another War Bond to your list. With God's wisdom and our efforts and determination we shall win.

Very truly,
Franklin Lipcomb.

RUTH WYETH SPEARS

YOU can make a bower of a city apartment as well as a country cottage by using stencils. The most unpromising assortment of junk furniture and shabby odds and ends may blossom with roses. Here, an old rocker of no particular period was painted blue and then stenciled in the Boston rocker manner. The streaked old window shade and an old tin tray were also painted blue and then stenciled with pink roses. A vine design of pink rambler roses was stenciled on the cream colored walls around the windows. The lamp base shown in the sketch was made from an old milk can. This can as well as an old paper parchment lamp shade, a chest of drawers and a footstool were painted cream color and then stenciled with smaller roses.

NOTE: These rose patterns so designed that they may be used for stencils or may be traced and painted freehand according to colors and directions are available by mail at 15 cents. Large, small and medium rose motifs as well as the chair back design and vine are contained on Pattern No. 200. Address:

Washington Merry-go-round

DREW HARRISON

Washington, D. C.
ALCOHOL AND WPB
A mysterious hand has reached inside the War Production board to hold up a new method of alcohol production. The process, developed in Germany, is the distillation of alcohol from sawdust and wood waste.

All over the U. S. A. there is a great surplus of sawdust and wood scraps from saw mills. In some cases, the disposal is a problem. But in Germany, some 30 plants are in operation turning sawdust not only into alcohol, but yeast and cattle feed.

This same process has been tested at a U. S. forest service pilot plant at Marquette, Wis., and recently plans were all set to open a commercial plant at Willamette, Ore. The Vulcan Copper and Supply company was scheduled to do the job. And J. Alfred Hall, borrowed from the forest service by WPB's office of production research and development, actually had gone out to Oregon to inspect the proposed Willamette site.

But now something has happened. The alcohol division of WPB is reported to be quietly throwing monkey wrenches into the works. For two long years, WPB's alcohol division had blocked the sawdust alcohol method for the obvious reason that the big alcohol companies are entrenched with the molasses method. Their plants are near the Atlantic seaboard, where molasses is readily accessible. They don't want competition from the lumber regions of the South and Northwest. But finally, because of the desperate alcohol shortage, they were overruled and the Willamette plant was authorized. However, queer things happened. When the Willamette application was sent by registered mail to WPB, it was "lost." WPB refused to act without the "original" application, so valuable weeks were wasted arguing.

Then, an engineer named Levy, who had had experience with the sawdust method in Germany, was brought here to see the plant. This time, the Willamette application papers were ready. But another hitch developed. WPB suddenly found something about Levy's credentials unsatisfactory, demanded an FBI investigation. The FBI cleared him, but still the WPB's alcohol division is holding things up.

AIR WAR OVER GERMANY
Strange as it may seem, the present problem of the U. S. and British air forces over Europe is not so much to locate the targets but to locate German fighters. Nazi fighters have been so reduced in numbers that they are being held back, apparently for the second front. Allied bombers occasionally make a complete mission to the Continent without meeting any opposition in the air.

This is good news, but it prevents heavy attrition of the Luftwaffe unless the German planes are sought out on the ground. As American fliers put it: "We've done a birth-control job on the Luftwaffe." In other words, they have struck manufacturing plants so successfully that fighter production is way down. This applies both to twin-engine and single-engine fighters. Plants making both types have been struck systematically and devastating blows.

Air forces officials have figures on the exact amount of that "birth control" but the figures are highly confidential. British as well as American officials are delighted with the results, and the British are now admitting the superiority of American precision bombing in knocking out certain targets. Germans Avoiding a Fight. In the text book of air power, after you have attacked the enemy's aircraft industry, you aim at the enemy's planes in the air. And that is what the RAF and AAF are trying to do now. But the Germans are avoiding a fight. They are trying to check losses by keeping their planes on the ground. Occasionally, returning pilots contradict this. "The man who says the Luftwaffe is licked is like a little child," they say. "We have battle records for evidence. Explanation is that the Nazis concentrate fighter strength over one important target. Air experts say Germany is now in the desperate plight England was in at the climax of the blitz of 1940-41. The British now admit that, if the Germans had come over a few more times, they would have broken the back of England. But the Luftwaffe simply couldn't stand the terrific losses."

MERRY-GO-ROUND
The U. S. Quartermaster corps now operates a slow-down-the-war system which requires personal guides and 20 minutes extra time to conduct visitors from the entrance of the building to various offices. "Man Mountain" Dean, the famous wrestler, has risen to the rank of sergeant at Camp Ritchie, Md., where he supervises the "squad," removing trash from the company streets. Dean is down to a mere 275 pounds, after losing 90 pounds at this job.

You'll be getting the most out of your money if you serve this low-cost chicken casserole. It's fairly but full of nutrition:
"Chicken Noodle Paprika."
(Serves 6 to 8)
1/2 pound medium-cut egg noodles
4 cups boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup diced carrots
1/4 cup diced celery
Salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup onion, cut fine
2 tablespoons shortening
1/4 cup chicken stock or gravy
1 teaspoon paprika
1/4 cup minced, cooked chicken
To the boiling water add salt and egg noodles. Cook until all water is absorbed and noodles are tender. This requires about 10 minutes. Stir frequently during cooking period. Combine carrots, celery, onion and shortening and cook for a few minutes. Add chicken stock, paprika, seasonings and chicken. Cook slowly until vegetables are tender. Pour this mixture over the cooked egg noodles, place in buttered casserole and bake 1/2 hour at 350 degrees. Whole pieces of chicken may be used in place of the minced chicken.

BEDTIME STORY

UNCLE BILLY POSSUM WAKES UP HUNGRY AND FEEBISH

"Good nature needs to be well fed,"
Is what Uncle Billy Possum said.
What he meant was that it is hard work to be good-natured and hungry at the same time. Sometimes it seems very much as if the seat of one's temper is in one's stomach. It is ever so much easier to be good-natured on a full stomach than on an empty one. Uncle Billy's stomach was empty when Peter Rabbit found him, and it was this and nothing else that made him peevish.

Peter had been so delighted at seeing Johnny once more, that he had started out to see if any other sleepers had been awakened by Sweet Mistress Spring, and here almost the first thing was Uncle Billy. Peter kicked up his long heels and hurried forward.

"Hello, Uncle Billy! I'm awfully glad to see you!" he cried.
"Hi!" grunted Uncle Billy. Peter stopped short and stared. This wasn't at all like Uncle Billy.
"Aren't you glad to see me?" asked Peter.
"Ah'd be more glad to see something to eat," grumbled Uncle Billy. Peter didn't know just what to say until he thought of the weather. That is one thing that usually is safe to talk about. "Isn't it a lovely day?" ventured Peter.

"Ah don't see anything lovely," grumbled Uncle Billy.
"Why, just see the beautiful warm sunshine!" cried Peter.
"Ah can't eat it, can Ah?" whined Uncle Billy. "Ah don't see what for Mistress Spring wanted to wake me up now, anyway. Ah was just dreaming Ah had found a million nice fresh eggs an' was going to eat 'em, when along she comes an' wakes me up to find Ah don't got nothing but an empty stomach an' can't sleep no more. Ouch!" Uncle Billy made a face as he started to walk. You see, he was stiff from having slept so long.

For the first time Peter noticed Uncle Billy looked very thin.
"His coat was even more rumpled than usual and his sharp, pointed face looked sharper and more pointed than ever. In fact, Uncle Billy looked old and tottery."

"Ah never did like cold weather, an' Ah wish Ah was right back in Old Virginia right now," he grumbled. "Ah don't know what Ah was thinking of to ever come up here. Ah hasn't got anything to eat an' Ah doesn't know what Ah's got to get anything to eat, an—"

"Yo' won't get anything to eat until yo' move faster than yo' are moving now," cried a sharp voice from overhead.
Peter looked up to see the sharp face of old Mrs. Possum looking down from the doorway of Uncle Billy's house. "Yes'm, Ah knows it. Ah's gwine to move right along," replied Uncle Billy meekly. He limped along for a few steps to where the sunshine made a warm golden spot on the carpet of brown leaves, and then he seemed to forget all about moving on, for he sat down and once more began to whine. It was so unlike Uncle Billy that Peter didn't know what to do or say. He was just about to speak when a beetle ran out from under a piece of bark right in front of Uncle Billy.

There was no stiffness about Uncle Billy then. No, sir, there wasn't even a hint of stiffness. In two jumps he had that beetle and in the wink of an eye that beetle had disappeared. Where? Well, that I can't tell. But Uncle Billy was smacking his lips and putting his stomach, and a surprising change had come over him.

"That beetle seems to have made you feel a great deal better," grinned Peter.
"It has. It sho'ly has," replied Uncle Billy. "Isn't this nice spring weather?"

on bivouac. We left camp and arrived in town about 8:15 P. M. We saw a double feature, "Ice Capades Revue" and "The Man Without A Conscience." We spent the night at the hotel. The next morning we took a bus to Port Rush, a seaport resort town. The Giants Causeway, one of the wonders of the world is there.I saw some very beautiful scenery on my way to Port Rush. One section was the Brown Bog Country, which is flat, marshy land covered with brown bushes. The peasants take the topsoil and press it into squares, making peat, the first stage of coal. We passed through several large towns. Part of the road is along the seacoast and one can gaze out upon the North Atlantic and see the angry waves breaking the cliffs below.
We arrived about noon. We caught the electric tram to the Causeway which is an eight and a half mile ride. The track is along the cliffs with a splendid view of the ocean.We passed by the ruins of Dun-luck Castle, the fortress home of a robber baron, who preyed upon the high seas and villages for a lifelike. I saw famous Rushmills Distillery.After a dinner at the Royal Hotel, we secured a guide to show us around. I'll attempt to describe the Giants Causeway now . . . . .The road winds along the cliff down to the shore. These stones have from five to six sides, being fitted together like a mosaic.
They are convex on top and concave on the bottom or vice versa. One group of rocks, sticking up higher than the rest, looks like a honeycomb. There is a fresh water spring called "The Wishing Well" which was never known to go dry. One stone and only one is a perfect diamond. Another stone has the print of a giant horse's hoof upon it. I sat in the Giants Wishing Chair and made my three wishes. I am sending some miniature chairs home. On one side of the cliffs is a huge organ, known out of the rocks.
Some of these stones are 35 to 50 feet high, others stick out of the cliffs horizontally. The ocean has cut back in the cliffs and fashioned a huge amphitheater, called the Giants' Amphitheater. Then there is the Giants' Grandmother, a humped old lady on the mountain. The Chimney Tops, and the Giants' Loom. The only time I could see the Cave of the Winds is in the summer. The cave goes 700 feet into the cliffs and you go in a boat through the cave. The sea is too rough in the winter.A taxi driver offered to take us back to Port Rush for half fare which was ten schillings ($2), so we accepted the offer. After arriving there, we had two hours to spend before our bus left. There are three service clubs, a sports arena, two amusement parks, two theaters, and two dance halls, the Palladium and the Trocadero. After a good supper of fresh eggs and bacon, we started on our return trip to camp. We really had an excellent time over the weekend.Love,

Now's the Time to Prepare Your Refrigerator for Summer Service

THE coming of warmer weather means extra duty for your electric refrigerator, so give it the care and attention it needs to operate at peak efficiency. If an open unit model, see that it is properly lubricated. Check condition of belt and door gasket. Keep unit compartment clean. And if you have reasons to suspect mechanical trouble, have your refrigerator checked over by a competent service man NOW. Repairs take longer these days, and if you wait until the rush season you may find yourself temporarily without refrigeration just when you need it most.

Follow These Tips on the Use and Care of Your Refrigerator

- Your refrigerator needs breathing space. Place it on a strip of newspaper. If you can slide paper up and down, seal is imperfect. Gasket should be replaced or door latch adjusted.
- Check door seal by closing it on a strip of newspaper. If you can slide paper up and down, seal is imperfect. Gasket should be replaced or door latch adjusted.
- Check belt on open unit tightness. If badly worn, have it replaced.
- Defrost whenever frost reaches thickness of one-quarter inch. Keep liquids covered and defrosting tray dry to retard formation of frost.
- Use fast freezing sparingly. Don't open door oftener than necessary. Don't store hot foods.
- If an open unit model, lubricate motor in accordance with manufacturer's directions. Sealed units need no oiling.
- Keep unit compartment clean. Remove dust and lint from condenser coils.
- If possible, locate refrigerator away from hot stove, direct sunlight or other heat source. This protects finish and saves operating cost.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

OPA Seeks to Ease Rationing Curbs; Nazis Retreat Toward Carpathians; High Court Approves Price Fixing; Japs Strike From Four Points in India

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the writer. No attempt is made to represent the views of the publisher or the publisher's staff.)

Admiralty islands—While converting this newly captured Admiralty island into an American base, Doughboys and Seabees took time to turn out their wash.

RATIONING: Ease Curbs

To smoothen wrinkles in the nation's economy, OPA announced:

1. Gas rations for B card holders are to be increased by 100 miles a month to maintain the distributive business.
2. Next fall, fuel oil coupons will not be dated, allowing their use at any time.
3. To get around housewives' cashing of coupons for tokens around their expiration dates, time limits on red and blue food stamps were removed.

War Food administration also announced that civilian supplies of butter and cheese will be higher for April, May and June, but meat stocks will be lower.

EUROPE:

New Line in East

German troops fell back toward the Carpathian mountains ringing northern Hungary and Rumania as the Reds pressed in on these Balkan states, which the Nazis sought to incorporate into their war machine to pool their men and resources for the last supreme defense of Fortress Europe.

As the new battle lines were forming in the east, Allied bombers continued to wing over the west, smashing into German targets.

ing at Nazi defense installations and industries to soften the invasion path and cripple the enemy's flow of supplies.

In Italy, U. S., British and New Zealand troops took a deep breath before resuming operations against stubborn German forces entrenched in the rocky rubble of Cassino, and other Nazi units ringing the Anzio beachhead, 18 miles below Rome.

Allied Occupation

What is to be Germany's fate after the war?

Much asked, London's influential Sunday Observer claimed to have the answer to the question, reporting an alleged digest of the Allies' plans for occupying the Reich after the war.

According to the Observer, the British would occupy all of northwestern and central Germany to the river Oder, and Russia would take over the rest of the territory to the east. The U. S. would occupy the southwest and central part of the Reich, including Bavaria and Saxony.

To prevent anarchy before establishing order, the three powers would also control Austria.

PACIFIC:

Japs Surprise

While troops of General MacArthur's command continued to batter the Japs in the Southwest Pacific area, main attention of the Allied world in the Far East centered on India, where the Japs struck out boldly in four directions to cripple U. S. and British communications to China.

Objective of the Japanese was Imperial, highway hub leading to the railroad carrying supplies to advance Allied bases in north Burma for air transport to China. While U. S.-Chinese troops drove forward in northern Burma to clear the new Leda-highway to China to supplement the existing air route, the wily Japs burst out of the jungle at four points in central Burma to catch the Allies off balance and advance on Imphal as Lord Mountbatten's command hurriedly organized for a stand.

In the Southwest Pacific, U. S. bombers surprised the enemy shipping and communications to prevent strengthening of his resistance to Allied advances in New Guinea, New Britain and the Solomons.

POLITICS:

'Test' Vote

Hailed as a barometer of public sentiment in the Southwest, Oklahoma's special congressional election resulted in a Democratic victory, although less votes were polled than in 1942.

In winning, Democrat William G. Sigler drew almost the same vote as his predecessor two years ago, but the GOP candidate, E. O. Clark, polled about 3,000 votes less than he did in 1942. Rain reportedly kept many home, especially in the rural districts.

In an effort to win, both parties called upon their national bigwigs to swing the vote. Democratic Sen. Albert Bradley speaking for Sigler and Republican Sen. E. H. Moore campaigning for Clark.

Said Moore: "... We were decidedly beaten ... Both the federal and state New Deal machines were in the district plugging every minute. The organization got the job done."

SUPREME COURT:

Price Fixing Approved

To permit flexibility in price fixing, congress can prescribe certain broad standards and then delegate an agency to work out details, the Supreme court ruled in declaring the constitutionality of wartime economic stabilization.

The Supreme court also upheld rent control by a delegated agent, or administrator, on the same grounds, stating: "Congress has supplied the standard and the base period ... (It) does not abdicate its functions when it delegates what job must be done, who must do it, and what is the scope of his authority."

In two other decisions, the Supreme court ruled that distributors of religious literature could not be licensed since licensing power might lead to their suppression, and that iron ore mines were entitled to payment for underground travel time, since the wages and hours act was not passed to allow an employer to claim all of an employee's time while compensating him for only a part of it.

FEED WHEAT:

April Allocations

To relieve the tight feed situation and make up for the order for setting aside 35 per cent of corn stocks in elevators for processing, the War Food administration was reported to have increased feed wheat allocations for April to 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels.

WFA's decision followed revelation that Commodity Credit Corporation feed wheat stocks as of March 18 totaled 113,118,000 bushels. Since last July, purchases amounted to 349,634,000 bushels.

Up to March 18, redemptions on 1942 wheat loans approximated 123,000,000 bushels, while deliveries reached 37,819,000, for a total of 60,626,000 taken off account. More than 184,151,000 bushels originally were placed under loan.

AIR TRAVEL:

Seek Expansion

With interest in the airplane heightened by the war, the Civil Aeronautics board which regulates air travel has been flooded with applications to institute new routes throughout the country when peace comes.

As of recent date, applications for bringing air service to 3,831 cities and towns over 500,000 miles of route were pending before the CAB. At present, air lines serve only 353 points over 50,643 miles.

Although conceding the development of air transport after the war, many authorities have cautioned against a disorderly expansion of the industry, which might seriously jeopardize the position of existing lines without proving financially sound to new companies. On the other hand, operation of small lines to link remote centers with major routes is considered an important step in bringing the benefits of air travel to every section.

TELEFACT

WOMEN IN THE LABOR FORCE

WFA's decision followed revelation that Commodity Credit Corporation feed wheat stocks as of March 18 totaled 113,118,000 bushels. Since last July, purchases amounted to 349,634,000 bushels.

SURPLUS GOODS:

For Civilians

To dealers, jobbers, wholesalers and distributors, the offering of 5,000 surplus war items adaptable to civilian use for sale in New York was an opportunity not to be lost.

Offered by Bell Aircraft company, Eclipse Pioneer Division of Bendix Aviation corporation, Eastern Aircraft Division of General Motors corporation, Glenn L. Martin company, and Republic Aviation corporation, the 5,000 items had a value of $50,000,000 and marked the first big disposal of surplus goods, although the army has prepared for larger sales.

Among items quickly bought up were small metal tool boxes, stainless steel tubing, rear-view mirrors, tape and thread, tools, and several small galley stoves with built-in sinks and two electric burners.

GREAT BRITAIN:

Equal Pay

Overriding the plea of the Churchill cabinet, the house of commons voted to grant women teachers the same pay as men for equal work, but then reconsidered under the prime minister's influence.

Opposing the move was the government's board of education president, Richard A. Butler, who declared that approval would establish a precedent for the whole civil service, business and industry.

Although Churchill's own party turned against him in voting for equal pay by 117 to 116, members stressed that they were not questioning the capability of his cabinet, but were merely modifying the educational bill.

AIR AMBULANCES:

Save Lives

Rapid evacuation of sick and wounded by air ranks with the sulfa drugs and blood plasma as one of the three greatest life saving measures of modern military medicine, Army Air Surgeon Maj. Gen. David Grant declared.

Reporting that 173,900 patients were evacuated during 1943, General Grant said that only 11 deaths occurred. In the African campaign, evacuations that required 22 hours by hospital train and 15 hours by motor ambulance were accomplished in one hour by air, General Grant revealed.

Disclosing that in some instances emptied cargo planes were used for evacuation, General Grant said that they completed flights of 1,000 miles or more over sea and jungle in the Pacific, unarmed and without escort.

'Price Premium' Battle Grows in Importance

War Food Administration Faces Increasingly Difficult Problem of Getting 'Bashful' Beef Cattle to Market.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The fight over subsidies—pardon me, I shouldn't use that word subsidies, the New Deal doesn't like it—the fight over "price premiums" on farm products is once more the chief concern of the administration and the members of congress who do not see eye to eye on this painful question.

The smoke of the battle over the veto of the subsidy bill included in the Commodity Credit Corporation bill has settled, and since then there was another veto (the tax bill) didn't fare so well. But the Farm Bloc members are not so overoptimistic as to believe that the President and congress are still far enough apart on the subsidy question that another veto could not be sustained. In the senate, the cooler heads of the opposition know this and are not willing to go through the same futile process again.

In the house, it is a different matter although this is not likely to change the final picture. House Leader Joe Martin, while conceding no jot or tittle to the administration that he can withhold, has made it plain that price control is necessary, and he isn't going to allow too much delay on the part of those who want an anti-subsidy rider attached to the OPA bill. He has other plans of his own.

War food administration officials are quoted as admitting that the case of the bashful beef is one of their greatest problems. Concretely, they have the task of enticing two or three million head of beef cattle off the ranges and into the butcher shops during early spring and summer. And the only thing that they know to make the cattle move is the good "old reliable" that makes the mare go—cash money. Since the administration is sitting on the sidelines and refusing to give prices to the consumer to go up, Uncle Sam will probably have to make up the difference again, if congress will let him, in the form of a "price premium" to the stockman.

The Banker's Stake

The government is wondering about something else besides a few meatless Mondays or Tuesdays or Wednesdays. It is worried about the banker who has a stake in steaks, as well as the cattleman and beef-eater.

Cattle on the range have increased beyond the feed on the ranges.

The average livestock population of America in the years 1922 to 1942 was 69 million head. Roughly let's say half of this was dairy cattle. Now the estimate is 82 million head and the ratio of eating cows to milking cows has increased alarmingly in the last few years.

And the beefs are now home on the range because there isn't a price incentive to lure them to slaughter. The government feared this; feared that the famine and then the flood. It now looks as if the famine was coming and the flood is not far behind. And this is where the banker comes knocking at the door. He remembers other gluts when drought, for instance, sent all the cattle to market at once, ruining the industry, making the banker's notes just so much wallpaper.

But how, the simple citizen asks, can there be a price drop when government has placed a floor under prices as well as a ceiling over them? Well, see what happened to our friend, the hog.

The farmer brought his pigs to market. The government fixed the price which the packers were bound to pay. But so many pigs arrived that the packer couldn't pack them and the law didn't let him. So the farmer, rather than pick up his pigs and carry them home again, sold them off at disgracefully low prices to the smart boys. Finally the smart boys got the floor price, the butcher got his ceiling price, and the price which the farmer was glad to pay. All the farmer got was mad.

This happened why? The government says simply because some farmers, seeing as how there was going to be such a good market for hogs, exceeded their quotas—got too hogish (one district in Iowa, I was told, increased its pig crop by 53 per cent, when the figure the government had set was 15 per cent). More about that later.

And so the War Food administration is afraid the same thing might happen to the cattle market. And the banker is afraid. It would be bad enough if we ran into a glut like the hog-jam but, as one WFA livestock expert put it, "we shudder to think what might happen if an early drought developed. There would be a great stampede to move cattle to market. Transportation and processing facilities might not be able to handle the movement. The result might be the loss of thousands and thousands of head of cattle."

cent, when the figure the government had set was 15 per cent). More about that later.

And so the War Food administration is afraid the same thing might happen to the cattle market. And the banker is afraid. It would be bad enough if we ran into a glut like the hog-jam but, as one WFA livestock expert put it, "we shudder to think what might happen if an early drought developed. There would be a great stampede to move cattle to market. Transportation and processing facilities might not be able to handle the movement. The result might be the loss of thousands and thousands of head of cattle."

R. M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve board for agriculture, who is a former agricultural adjustment administrator, is urging the bankers in the cattle industry to do their share in coaxing Ferdinand off the range.

About 'Elastic' Prices

Of course, the cattleman have been among the most violent critics of the price control administration and their representatives have maintained a steady battle here in Washington in an effort to remove the ceiling prices from beef (or, as they say, make the prices elastic) so that prices would rise and fall in accordance with the seasonal demand.

The cattleman's viewpoint is presented by Joe G. Montague of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association, bolts down his plant to a simple statement.

"We just provide the frames to hang beef on. The Lord knows we've produced the frames but somebody fell down on the job of hanging the beef on 'em."

Mr. Montague told me the other day that the weights have gone down faster than even he expected although he predicted the glut and the promised famine ever since the fixed price was made last October. They have gone off 27 to 28 pounds a head and he expects this will continue until July when grass feeding begins again.

Hoarded Corn

There is plenty of feed in the shape of corn in the country but the farmers with their government-assured prices on hogs are hoarding it—they are transforming it into pork. The government "advised" them when it put a premium on hog-raising, as we have explained. But many farmers, poultry and dairy farmers and others outside the corn belt need feed.

Not only farmers but industrialists who need corn for their chemicals, are complaining. The army and navy who use their products have echoed their plea.

So the government is smack up against the problem of prying this feed (corn) loose from the farmers who are keeping it to feed to their hogs. The only way they can shake the kernels loose is to increase the price of corn. The only way they can do this without breaking through price ceilings is to subsidize corn—other words, buy it at a price which will make it more profitable to the farmer to sell it than to feed it to his hogs.

Montague's argument is that because the cattle business is seasonal you have to have flexibility in price. If the price is nailed down, the cattleman will sell his grass-fed cattle in September, instead of holding out for higher prices in the spring, and save going through the anguish of zero weather. Of course, under price control, the theory is that the flexibility is provided by the subsidy—excuse me again—the government is keeping the price up, and which gives the cattleman enough for a fair profit but doesn't increase the price to the consumer and start inflation. But the cattleman don't want sub-price premiums. They want prices to rise and fall in the good old-fashioned way.

And that is where the issues in the fight over the proposed amendment to the OPA bill are neatly joined.

United States mints last year turned out nearly one-fourth as many coins as have been produced in the past 152 years.

Nazi Minister of the Interior Heinrich Himmler, in ordering the registration of a new class of 17-year-old German girls for labor service, ruled that all applications for deferment will be useless.

HIGHLIGHTS... in the week's news

STANDARD TIME: A bill introduced by Representative Cannon (Dem., Mo.) is intended to restore the entire nation to standard time. It has been on daylight saving time since 1942. Cannon said that he has received hundreds of protests from almost every state in the Union against the "fast time." Several states have adopted legislation to modify the law.

WOMEN'S DRAFT: The American Association of University Women meeting in Washington, D. C., went on record as favoring a bill for women "provided the need for such a draft exists." A nationwide poll of members taken before the delegates voted showed that a majority of the college women were willing to serve in the WACS, WAVES, SPARS if needed.

TRACTOR TIRES

Other than in extreme hardship cases the War Food administration will not allow tractor tires to be substituted for steel tread tractors. The supply is now so low, WFA officials said, that any tires used for substitution would delay completion of new tractors.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

When canned-food meals seem to lose their appeal, try fresh fruit flavors for appetite teasers. It takes only a little of the tart, freshness of orange, lemon or grapefruit to provide pleasing flavor contrast.

For a tasty carrot salad, add the juice, and grated rind of half a lemon and a fourth cup of sugar to 2 cups of grated carrots; for a cabbage salad that is different, add 1-2 cups of orange sections to 3 cups of shredded cabbage, then mix with French dressing made with lemon juice instead of vinegar. Lime gelatin with grapefruit sections makes an easy-to-serve company salad.

The following dessert is recommended by food specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Baked Orange Pudding

- 1-2 cup flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1-8 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 egg yolks
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon each of grated lemon or orange rind
- 2 egg whites

Sift the flour, sugar and salt into a bowl and then cream in the shortening. Beat egg yolks, add milk and blend with the creamed mixture. Add the grated orange and lemon rind and juice. Mix thoroughly, then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a shallow buttered baking dish, set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees, for 30 minutes or until it is a golden brown on top. Serve with a sauce or cream if desired.

Menu: veal cutlets, creamed potatoes, tomato aspic, buttered peas, biscuits and butter, and baked orange pudding.

KILL CLOTHES MOTHS NOW

Warmer weather will bring clothes moths into activity which may cause great damage to woollens according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Now is the time to kill moths and eggs by thoroughly brushing or cleaning furniture and clothing that are made with woolen material. The moth may soon ruin a woolen garment that had been intended for use again.

Knowing the life habits of the clothes moth will help the homemaker keep moth damage to a minimum. The flying adult moth lives only a few weeks but during that time lays from one hundred to three hundred tiny soft eggs in cracks, folds, and pockets. Moths are less active in cold weather but it takes one to two days of zero weather to kill them. Because the worms are less active in cold weather, they often are not noticed around the house until warm spring days arrive. The moth egg is very delicate and easily crushed and dislodged by thorough brushing every two weeks.

There are several effective methods of control. Spray, available in stores under trade names kill only the insects actually hit or made wet and they do not render the sprayed objects immune to moth attacks. Dry cleaning or washing in a strong solution of neutral soap kills all moths but does not protect against reinfestation.

Clothing just dry-cleaned or washed, if wrapped in paper with its edges well folded back or sealed carefully will remain free from moths indefinitely if the paper is not broken. Moths cannot stand bright sun. Be sure that clothes are aired on a screened-in porch so that they cannot be reinfested while in the sun. Parachlorobenzene (P. D. B.) is good to use in closets and trunks.

May 10 to 15, set for each member of the household, 10 plants of some early variety such as Break O' Day, 10 weeks old, at setting. These plants, spaced 30 inches, should be staked and pruned to 3 stems. Picking should begin in June.

May 20 to June 1, set for each person 15 plants of some "main crop" sort (Marglobe or Greater Baltimore), 48 inches apart, un-staked. These may be of the garden's own growing, sown about April 1st, under the protection of tobacco canvas or glass, in a cold frame. No transplanting is needed, but the seed should be sown sparsely, and thinning should be done, to one inch. Heavy picking should start early in August, with the peak about August 20. Then, canning may be begun in earnest, though there will be surpluses all along the line, even of the Break O' Days.

Tomatoes should have high fertility, plenty of plant food (particularly phosphorus) and moisture in abundance, as tomatoes are more than 95 percent water. But, a 3-inch coat of stable manure turned under, and 20 percent superphosphate broadcast and worked in after breaking (one pound to 80 square feet of space) provides that fertility. The equivalent in commercial fertilizer is 1 pound of 5-10-5 to 40 square

Country Newspapers Play Vital Role In War Effort

America's small town and country newspapers are playing a vital role in the war effort and in the creation of a national war consciousness, the above panel of country newspaper editors and publishers declared in a forum discussion of "The Home Town Paper and the War Effort" on WCKY during the recent National Editorial Association convention.

Shown above, left to right, during the broadcast are: Albert S. Hardy, Gainesville, Ga., new president of the NEA; W. Verne McKinney, Hillsboro, Oregon, NEA past president; Edwin F. Abels, Lawrence, Kansas, past president; Raymond B. Howard, London, Ohio, past chairman of the Board of the NEA; William D. Dawes, WCKY's announcer, and Charles L. Ryder, Cobleskill, New York, NEA director.

Use one pound to each 100 cubic feet of closet space. Place the crystals on top shelf or hang in muslin bags from hooks. The fumes from P. D. B. will stop moth larvae from mfeeding and will eventually kill them if the fumes are concentrated. Cedar chests, to be effective, must be made of 3-4 inch heartwood and are then dependable protectors provided they are tight and in good condition and the clothing is freed from all stages of the clothes moths before it is placed in them.

House cleaning time gives the homemaker an excellent opportunity to kill all moth larvae and pack away all winter woollens in tight closets or bags.

THE GARDEN

TOMATOES

By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

From the standpoint of "returns per acre," of healthfulness and of ration points, tomatoes stand easily at the top of the garden's vegetables. That they are easy to grow, having few pests to combat, makes them a favorite of Victory gardeners who because of lack of experience or of equipment, may not undertake anything too elaborate.

Ideally, there should be tomatoes fresh, daily, between July 1 and frost, and canned tomatoes twice, weekly, and tomato juice once daily, the rest of the year. There should be ketchup and chili sauce, and there must be tomatoes to form the basis for soup mixture. Assuming that a serving of canned tomatoes is one-fifth of a quart, and that for tomato juice is half-pint, and that the other products are generously furnished, some such program as follows may be followed, always assuming, too, that the garden is of fair fertility.

May 10 to 15, set for each member of the household, 10 plants of some early variety such as Break O' Day, 10 weeks old, at setting. These plants, spaced 30 inches, should be staked and pruned to 3 stems. Picking should begin in June.

May 20 to June 1, set for each person 15 plants of some "main crop" sort (Marglobe or Greater Baltimore), 48 inches apart, un-staked. These may be of the garden's own growing, sown about April 1st, under the protection of tobacco canvas or glass, in a cold frame. No transplanting is needed, but the seed should be sown sparsely, and thinning should be done, to one inch. Heavy picking should start early in August, with the peak about August 20. Then, canning may be begun in earnest, though there will be surpluses all along the line, even of the Break O' Days.

Tomatoes should have high fertility, plenty of plant food (particularly phosphorus) and moisture in abundance, as tomatoes are more than 95 percent water. But, a 3-inch coat of stable manure turned under, and 20 percent superphosphate broadcast and worked in after breaking (one pound to 80 square feet of space) provides that fertility. The equivalent in commercial fertilizer is 1 pound of 5-10-5 to 40 square

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Sometimes 13 Is
a Lucky Number

Dad and Ma Hoekins never did like to brag on their children; but they've raised thirteen of 'em and every one a credit to the community.

"What's the secret of raising so many youngsters so successfully?" I once asked Dad.

"That's just it, Joe," he said. "There ain't any secret. Our family never had any. We always lived open and aboveboard.

"When I smoked, my youngsters saw the smoke; when I went off fishin', I'd take half a dozen of 'em along. When I'd feel like an occasional glass o' beer, I'd enjoy it right out in the open. No mysteries in our family.

"Result was our children learned moderation, by example. Learned decency, initiative, thrift. Ma and I never nagged 'em... that's about all I know."

Well from where I sit that's the way of a free America—the way of "bringing-up" that's made our soldier boys and girls the best on earth.

Severe Storm Hits This Section Doing Considerable Damage

High winds, with electricity and heavy rain, raged through Boone and Kenton counties Tuesday evening blowing down barns and other property, uprooting trees and causing considerable damage. Several people have reported that their barns and outbuildings were damaged and livestock injured.

It was reported heavy damage was caused in Mt. Zion region, and communication and electric lines were damaged.

The adjoining county of Grant seemed to receive the worst of the storm, with extensive damage done between Dry Ridge and Crittenden.

A large barn on the farm of J. C. Conrad, one mile north of Dry Ridge, was struck by a bolt of lightning and was totally destroyed. A large amount of farm implements, grain and hay were destroyed in the blaze.

The electric service in Walton section was out for only a short time.

Sunrise Service Largely Attended

The Easter Sunrise Service at 6:30 Sunday morning in the Methodist Church was largely attended by members from all the churches of the town, the church being filled near to its capacity. This was a unique service with all churches participating in the Voluntary, Instrumental, Mrs. J. B. Johnson; Opening Hymn, "Triumphal Gladness"; Scripture and prayer, Rev. Garrett; Meditation, Organ, Mrs. J. B. Johnson; Trio, "Behold, A Risen Lord," Mrs. Faye Connor, Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, Mrs. Olivia Wills; The Message, Rev. Geo. S. Caroland; Hymn, "Crown Him With Many Crowns," Benediction, Rev. A. K. Johnson; Postlude, The Organ, Mrs. J. B. Johnson.

Miss Helen Ruth Gardiner, spent the Easter holiday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Gardiner, in Lexington.

Guy Olen Carlisle and Charles Holder visited Miss Mary Alexander and Miss Mary Nell Hays at Midway Female College Easter Sunday.

NAMES ADDED TO SERVICE BOARD

Over one hundred names were added to the Boone County Service Board last week. This makes a total of 830 names on the board.

The homemaker's committee who made the initial arrangements for the board hopes that the names of all Boone County men and women in the Service are on the board. If anyone's name has been left off, please call Mrs. Sam Sleet, Walton 1393, or Mary Hood Gillaspie, Burlington 412.

The committee wishes to thank Noel Walton for painting the eight hundred-thirty names on the Service Board.

MRS. HATTIE MAY BROWN

Mrs. Hattie May Brown wife of the late C. K. Brown passed away at her home on the Brant-Piner road on Wednesday last Friday at 3 P. M. at the Gothen Christian Church, Piner of which she was a member.

Mrs. Roy Elliot with whom she made her home, two sisters Mrs. Louis Cornelius, and Mrs. Joseph Schuker, both of Piner, four brothers, Frank Rust of Piner, Joseph Rust of Atwood, Everett Rust of Covington, and Morton Rust of Charlestown, Id., and two grand-children, together with a number of nieces and nephews. Peoples and Bridges, Butler funeral directors were in charge.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF BAPTIST CHURCH

Afternoon program beginning at 1:30, with Mrs. Margaret Wilson leader, Subject "The Everlasting Kingdom, in the Hand of its Beginnings." Reports from the State meeting held in Lexington will be given by the delegates, Mrs. Wm. Soden and Mrs. B. C. Garrett.

Mrs. Earl Smith of Louisville, Ky. spent Thursday and Friday with her family Mrs. E. O. Webster and daughter.

Walton Women's Literary Club Entertained

Mrs. C. S. Chambers assisted by her daughters Mrs. Wallace Grubbs and Mrs. Allen Conner entertained for the April meeting of the Walton Women's Literary Club.

The meeting was opened with Mrs. J. L. Vest reading the Club Womans Collect.

Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker, the president, presided over the business session, at which time the election of officers for the new year was conducted. Those elected were: President, Mrs. H. F. Mann; Vice President, Miss Emma Jane Miller; Secretary, Mrs. C. S. Chambers.

Following the business session Mrs. George Caroland opened the program with an appropriate "Thought For The Day" in observance of Easter.

Mrs. J. C. Bedinger gave an Easter Greeting in which she gave the true significance of Easter and closed with a beautiful poem entitled "Calvary and Easter."

Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace, chairman of the Better Homes Committee closed the program with an interesting discussion of "Better Homes for Better America." Her subject was based on the following articles: Unity in Diversity by Everett Clinchy, The Family—War and Peace by Sidanie Masterson, Greenberg, and We Who Are Americans by Kenneth Hill.

A lovely salad course was served to the following guest, Mrs. R. C. Brugha and members, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker, Mrs. George Caroland, Mrs. Robt. Conrad, Mrs. E. W. ### FLORENCE HI ENTERTAINS

The Sunday evening service at the Methodist Church was given over to the Florence High School pupils who entertained with a patriotic program under the direction of Mrs. Cayton, assisted by Mr. Cayton, Principal of the school and Mrs. Courtney at the organ. This was a very inspiring program, much appreciated by the audience and in which the participants did honor to themselves their school and sponsors.

The closing number honoring the boys who have made the supreme sacrifice for their country our country, was very impressive.

At the close of the program an offering was taken for the Red Cross drive which totaled over $47.00 and put the Walton group over the top. Thanks to Florence for their cooperation.

The Walton Christian Church dismissed their evening service and joined the above program.

Gallatin County 4-H Club Council

Gallatin County 4-H Club Council met March 25 at 2:15 P. M. at the Extension Office at Warsaw. The Council made plans for 4-H Club program for the remaining part of the year and the first event is to be a chapter program at the Gallatin County High School, April 7, at which time all leaders and parents are invited to attend. At this time the School will be placed on exhibit and will be recognized and likewise leaders and parents of the 4-H Club members - of the Glenoch School are invited to attend a Chapel program Monday, April 10 at 10:00 A. M.

The 2nd event is to be a Sewing Rally of all the girls in the County that have sewing to be held May 12 at Warsaw High School at which time all the girls will be recognized and likewise leaders and parents of the 4-H Club members - of the Glenoch School are invited to attend a Chapel program Monday, April 10 at 10:00 A. M.

The Council pointed out that Community Clubs could arrange additional events for their community as the club sees fit. It was the thought of the Council that this year club members should endeavor to do their best and do the unusual projects that food and feed may be increased in the county for next winter.

Members present included: Mrs. Roberta Rea, Warsaw; Mrs. C. B. Cox, Drury Chapel; Owen Roberts, Drury Chapel; Mrs. Roscoe Adams, Drury Chapel; Mrs. Mac Furnish, Rossville; Mrs. Edith Norman, Glenoch; Mrs. Paul Carver, Glenoch; Mrs. Sleet Alphin, Napoleon; Mrs. W. ### NORTHERN KENTUCKY HIGH SCHOOL WOMEN'S CLUB

Miss Rebecca Sleet, Mrs. Katherine Baker and Miss Katherine Scott, teachers in the Walton, Verona High School, had charge of the program of the "Northern Kentucky High School Women's Club," at Covington Wednesday April 13th.

This meeting was held at the First Presbyterian Church. After the dinner musical selections were given by Mrs. Olive Johnson, Mrs. Olivia Wills and Mrs. Fay Conner, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Lucile Hudson. A delightful social hour was enjoyed by all.

NOTICE

The public sale, of the 30 acre farm, Livestock, Farming Implements and etc. of G. T. Martin on the Jones Road, one and one-half miles East of Walton, will be held by Col. Worthington, on Saturday April 15, beginning at 1:00 P. M. In last weeks issue the date was Saturday April 12th instead of April 15th. See their ad on page 7.

Boone County Red Cross Drive Goes Over The Top

Boone County, as a whole, has raised its quota of $8,700.00 in the Red Cross War Fund Drive which ended April 8. Three more precincts have gone "Over The Top" - Burlington, Mrs. Jim Smith, Chairman; Hebron, Mrs. Jameson Aylor, Chairman; and Walton, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Chairman.

Complete reports have not been received, but it is anticipated total collections will exceed the goal by several hundred dollars. This shows the hard work done by the County Chairman, Irvin Rouse, all Precinct Chairmen and their solicitors. It reflects the fine spirit of Boone County people, who put forth this special effort to raise an amount of money for in excess of any previously asked. The amount collected this year is twice that of last year, and it is evident all contributors must have greatly increased this year's gift over last year.

Boone County's Service Men will be grateful to its citizens for the white-hearted response to the call of the Red Cross, who have said to them, "We are behind you one hundred per cent. We have made our gifts as big as our hearts."

Congratulations to everyone in any way connected with the Drive.

Following is a list of Precincts, and amounts collected as of April 10: Beaver, 412.69; Bellevue, 424.49; Hebron and Bull, 782.69; Burlington, 1,213.33; Carleton, 324.25; Constance, 489.00; Florence, 1,402.99; Hamilton, 172.20; Petersburg, 480.39; Union, 900.59; Verona, 440.07; Walton, 1,396.78; Richmond, 300.45.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE RED CROSS WAR FUND DRIVE

Burlington's Midget Basketball team, composed of eight boys from the Fifth and Sixth grades, made up $10.25 among themselves to contribute in advance to a member of the Team collected $3.53 from other Fifth and Sixth graders who did not belong to the team. Members of this Team are: Billy Cooper, Captain, Billy McFee, Harold Conington, Ed Ryle, Maurice Perkins, Wendell Ryle, Jimmy Ryle, and Bobby Scroggins.

At New Haven School a Basket Ball game played with Walton, the proceeds of which were contributed to the Red Cross.

Homemakers To Learn New Methods

Homemakers will learn new methods of preparing home canned and stored foods at April meetings. Herbs, their growth and use will be discussed also by the two food leaders from each local club. Methods of safe lifting and carrying by farm women will be brought to members by the Home Demonstration Agent, Mary Hood Gillaspie.

Thirteen food leaders attended a training class last Thursday at the Town Hall in Florence. Miss Florence Inlay, Nutrition Specialist, University of Ky., taught the group appetizing ways of preparing home canned foods. The leaders devised a plan of starting herb slips. They want at least one homemaker in each club to have an herb garden this summer.

Food leaders are asking four or five women in each club to bring specified parts of the lunch menu. All club members will help share the expense of the meal.

Anyone in the county is welcome to attend one of the meetings. Following is the schedule: April 5 Constance, Mrs. Freda Cottmyer, 10:30; April 6 Burlington, Courthouse, 10:30; April 7 Verona, Lena Harris, 10:30; April 12 Hebron, Mrs. Henry Anderson, 10:30; April 13 Petersburg, School, 10:30; April Walton, Mrs. Leo Flynn, 11:00; April 18 New Haven, Mrs. Lucy Bedinger, 10:30; April 19 Teylorsport, Mrs. Walter Sprague, 10:30; April 20 Bullsitsville, Mrs. Wm. Hill, 10:30; April 21 Florence, Town Hall.

This, together with the money collected in "Mite Boxes" placed in each room, brought New Haven's contribution to $43.98. It is known one contribution of $15.00 was made the Red Cross out of a total monthly income of $10.00.

When it appeared Burlington would not reach its quota, Mrs. Smith made a list of people she intended asking for an additional five dollar contribution. Not one refused and Burlington went "Over The Top."

At the colored Jubilee Singers Concert a collection was taken, started by the colored pastor with one dollar, $30.97 was obtained which was given to the Red Cross.

Burlington's Baptist Church made a special collection for the Red Cross and obtained $12.50, most of which came from people who had already contributed individually.

WALTON OVER THE TOP IN RED CROSS WAR FUND DRIVE

The goal for the Red Cross War Fund Drive has been attained. The amount donated was $1,396.78.

The individual, the business houses, the churches, the school, and all the other organizations who contributed so generously had the true spirit of the Red Cross in their hearts. Everyone co-operated to make this drive a success and the Red Cross Workers want to thank all those who were so liberal with their contributions. Walton is backing their Fighting Men all the way.

As chairman of the War Fund Drive here in Walton, I want to thank each of you who helped to make the drive a success. Especially do I want to thank the following workers who spent their time in doing the soliciting: Mrs. Virgie Brugh, Mrs. Ora Berkshire, Mrs. Ora Fry, Mrs. Lulu Huey, Mrs. Myrth Carlisle, Mrs. Mable Webster, Mrs. Grace Rice, Mrs. Aileen Connor, Mrs. Lill Young, Mrs. Irene Bush, Mrs. Anna P. Gaines, Mrs. Pearl Bedinger, Mrs. and Mrs. Levi Pennington, Mrs. Bertha Fisher, Mrs. Mildred West, Blanche Brittenhead, Nelda Campbell and Alyce Peace.

David W. Deaton petty officer 3rd class has returned to the West Coast to rejoin the Pacific Fleet after spending eight days with his mother in Covington and Mrs. Ernestine Webster of Walton. He has been in the Pacific one year, took part in several battles. He has been in the Navy 27 months and likes fine.

THE SEABEE'S CAKE RECIPE

The following was written by Marvin Courtney. Two cups Hitler, 1/4 cup Mussolini, 6 cups Hitler, 1 teaspoon rising sun, 1 teaspoon Manilla. Directions: Sift Hitler three times, add sea, mix, add sea, mix through barbed wire, chop Mussolini, then crack the shell Japs, add rising sun, and beat like hell. Then add Manilla and the more you beat the better. Grease the pan America, pour the mixture in it, put it in the oven and slam Corregidor, turn on gas to 95,000 degrees, then go see "Gone With The Wind." Upon returning home put on sea, make, open all windows and doors to let out odor. Remove from oven and submerge in Atlantic to cool. Then go home and buy War Bonds so all us boys can come home to our loved ones.

CONSTANCE CORNCRACKER

The regular monthly meeting of the Constance 4-H Club was held March 23, 1944. The meeting was called to order by the President, Alberta Fugate. The roll call was read by the Vice President, Helen Snelling, as our Secretary was sick. We hope to have our Secretary with us the next meeting.

Talks were given by Miss Gillaspie and Mr. Perkins. The project captains gave reports of their Pouples and Brides. We rolled in our club April 7th. We are going to have a paper drive in our club.

VERONA

Rain has been falling in this community for several weeks now.

Bro. Childers from the Seminary preached at the Baptist Church here on Sunday April 2.
There will be services on April 16.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Roberts entertained on Sunday with the following: Mrs. Wilbur Chapman and daughter of Campbellburg, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Sied and daughter, Mrs. Vernon Sied, and Rita Roberts from Covington.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. King and family visited in the J. G. Pennington home Easter Sunday. Mildred Kinner who attends the University of Kentucky spent the weekend with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerlie Harris entertained their children on Easter Sunday. They were very glad to welcome Wilbur on leave from the Navy.

The Happy Twelve Club met for regular meeting on Tuesday April 4th with Mrs. W. E. Waller with eighteen members and visitors present. Plans were completed for the Easter boxes to be taken to the county house in Burlington.
On Saturday evening the Easter gifts were taken to the inmates.
For each of the men there was a sweater and a box of food consisting of candy, cookies, eggs and cup cakes and for the women a house dress and bed jackets and boxes of food. The gifts were very much appreciated and it makes us realize how little we do and how much we could do for these people.

The following attended the W.
M. U. Convention at Lexington last week, Mesdames John Boyer and children, W. T. Renaker, G.
C. Ransom, W. E. Waller, A. T.
Hunt and Rev. A. K. Johnson.

BIG BONE

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Robbins former residents of Big Bone but now living near Patriot, Ind. entertained Sunday in honor of their nephew Galen Berkshire of Walton who is home on furlough from the Merchant Marines.
Those who enjoyed the day were
Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Robbins and daughter of Florence, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Robbins and daughters of Big Bone, Mr. and Mrs.
Walls Berkshire and son Galen of Walton.

Fishing seems to be the order of the day.

Mrs. Maude Miller and Mrs.
Parker Gamon were shopping in the city last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Robbins and two little daughters Donna and Judy spent Sunday in Napoleon visiting their relatives Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stewart of Patriot, Ind. and Mr. and Mrs.
Bennett Stewart of Gary, Ind. were pleasantly entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cloyd
Johnson and family.

Farmers are getting behind with their work because of the continued rains.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer Atha and children, Tommy and Glenna attended church at Ten Mile in Gallatin County and were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Beach.

Mrs. Mildred Carroll of this place and Mrs. Mary Judge of Highway 42 were in Akron, Ohio last week attending the funeral of their nephew Joseph Earl Moore.
Friends here of Mr. and Mrs.
Moore sympathize with them in their sorrow.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Sometimes 13 Is
a Lucky Number

Dad and Ma Hoskins never did like to brag on their children; but they've raised thirteen of em and every one a credit to the community.

"What's the secret of raising so many youngsters so successfully?" once asked Dad.
"That's just it, Joe," he said.
"There isn't any secret. Our family never had any. We always lived open and aboveboard."

"When I smoked, my youngsters saw me smoke; when I went off fishin', I'd take half a dozen of 'em along. When I'd feel like an occasional glass o' beer, I'd enjoy it right out in the open.

No mysteries in our family.

"Result was our children learned moderation, by example.
Learned decency, initiative, thrift.
Ma and I never nagged 'em...
that's about all I know."

Well from where I sit that's the way of a free America—the way of "bringing up" that's made our soldier boys and girls the best on earth.

Joe Marsh

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

This entire community was grieved to learn of the death of Mr. George Binder, Sr., Sunday afternoon at Booth Hospital. Mr.
Binder had lived in this neighborhood most all his life and will be sadly missed by his family and neighbors as he was a man that never went out much, and was always around the farm. Funeral arrangements are being completed by Swindler.

The Sun Rise service which was held at Staffordburg Church, Sunday morning was well attended all four churches were represented and the program was very impressive.

We are glad to report the children of Mr. and Mrs. Lebrun Richardson being able to be out again after a very bad attack of measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Deuser and son Charles, entertained Sunday for Miss Banfield of Pleasant Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney and son Dan and daughter Mrs.
Whartn called on relatives of Independence Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Caroline Armstrong entertained her children and grad-children for Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballanger spent Sunday afternoon with his uncle Mr. Walter Maddox and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hanna called on their son Harley and family
Sunday, and also called at St.
Elizabeth Hospital to visit with Mrs. G. H. Craeglyne who is a patient there.

Mrs. George Klum entertained the Staffordburg Home Maker's Club last Thursday.

Remember the regular church services at Staffordburg Sunday, both morning and evening by the regular pastor, Rev. Cardwell.

Orchard men in Hickman county ordered 18 tons of ammonium nitrate to use in place of nitrate of soda under fruit trees.

LADY'S STOMACH WAS LIKE A GAS FACTORY; MEALS TURNED TO GAS

One lady said recently that her stomach used to be like a "gas factory!" That is, when she ate a meal it seemed to turn right into gas. She was always bloated, had awful stomach gas pains, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Now, however, this lady says she is FREE OF STOM-ACH GAS and she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her meals agree with her. No gas or bloat after eating. Headaches and constipation are gone. "Oh! what relief!" states this lady. "Why don't other gas and constipation sufferers get ERB-HELP?"

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great
Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-

Mt. Zion

Mr. Ed Jones passed away at his home Monday April 3rd, after a long illness. Funeral services were held at Mt. Zion by Rev. L.
N. Stamper in the presence of a large crowd. He leaves to mourn his passing his wife, one daughter Wilma, one son Harley and his mother Mrs. Abbie Jones all of Mt. Zion and two brothers, one sister and one grand-daughter.
The family has the sympathy of this community.

Mrs. Grace Culler passed away at her home Thursday April 6th after being ill for several years.
Funeral services were conducted from the Mt. Zion Church by Rev.
Ross Abernathy. She leaves her husband, two daughters, and three sons. They have the sympathy of the community.

Mrs. Geneva Lambert and Mrs.
Ida Miller spent Friday in Covington.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Pettit entertained Sunday in honor of their daughter Nancy's 12th birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Kline
Meneef of Crittenden, Miss Mary Mildred Pettit of Covington and Bunnie and Janice Lawrence.

the Army.

Mrs. Marjorie Jarman, Mary
Ben Franks and John B. Franks of Cincinnati visited their parents Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gross and family Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Blair met their son Robert in Covington Sunday. He was on a 38 hour leave from his camp in Pennsylv-vania.

Misses Gwendolyn Ferrell and Juanita Kuhn spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Haver Perrell.

BEST KENTUCKY YOUTH NOT GOING TO CITIES

The widespread theory that the most intelligent boys and girls quit the farm for the city receives no support in a survey made by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. A report on the study says that there need be no fear that loss of bright young people is lowering the general quality of the farm population of Kentucky.

It is natural that some Kentucky people move to cities, says the Experiment Station. The population of the United States is constantly being redistributed in relation to jobs and resources.
However, there is no reason to think that only the best people leave farms for cities.

Experiment Station figures show that about a third of all Kentucky-born people now live in other states. It is probable that they include a fair sample of all levels native-born ability, says the report, but it also is indicated that they include a large share of educated Kentuckians.

While it is not always the more intelligent farm people who go to the cities, it is the youth of the farm rather than the middle-aged or old people that migrate.
Also it is often the individual who has received the most schooling, the report shows.

The Experiment Station studies show that size of family, changes in employment opportunities and many other factors are as important as intelligence in determining which youth will leave the farm.

Can You Picture KENTUCKY without Police?

Today, we all owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to men and women in the uniforms of Uncle Sam's fighting forces. They're on duty today at the four corners of the earth and on all the seven seas—protecting our lives and our way of life.

And we mustn't overlook the splendid job that other men in the uniform of our police forces are doing. Their "zone of operation" may be Kentucky rather than the Pacific, it may be the highway to the next town rather than the airways across Africa, but their job is fundamentally the same—protecting us and ours.

We Kentuckians can indeed be proud of our police organizations—city, county or state. Most of us have few occasions to call upon the service of our police forces—but that in itself is a tribute to their efficiency. They're on the job day and night whether we need them or not.

PUT ANOTHER BOND IN THE BATTLE—BUY IT NOW!

Some of us in the Greyhound organization, because of the nature of our work, have more frequent occasion to co-operate with the police than do many of our fellow citizens of Kentucky. For instance, we are in a position to see clearly how much the police of this community, as well as those of neighboring communities, have contributed to the safety and convenience of bus transportation. The aid these men have given in arranging the most practical and satisfactory routes through towns and cities is typical of their skillful handling of all traffic problems.

Greyhound's most important job, as we see it, is to make near and good neighbors of all the communities that our buses serve in Kentucky—and we feel that the able cooperation of police forces throughout the State has made it possible for us to do this job with greater efficiency.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

By Julian M. Dyer, Soil Conservationist Kenton County Soil Conservation District.

Were you ready when the rains came? More than one hundred fifty of the farmers of Kenton County were ready with approximately two hundred newly constructed ponds. Most of the number were members of the Kenton County Soil Conservation District. Thru the cooperation of the Board of Supervisors of the District a number of privately owned commercial bulldozers have building ponds and clearing brush and timber land in the County since the first day of last September when the very first farm reservoir was started on the 160 acre farm of Radnor and Cooke near Bracht Station.

Farmers in Kenton County who have recently constructed ponds or farm reservoirs, thru this service include the following: John Shaw, Ova Petty and Lee Faulkner near White's Tower; George Kelly, Robert Porter, and Tom Sanford on Hand Uike; S. A. Roberts, Dawson McDannold, B. F. Stambaugh and Peter Holz of Independence; War Moffett, C. Schuerman, George Hergott, C. A. Stephens, Earl R. Souder, R. L. Davis and Mrs. George Kaub of Nicholson; Russell Rector on the Moffett Road and Fred Kallmeyer, Stanley Maegly and W. F. Hausman of the Crescent Springs Community.

Another important practice of conservation farming by the District has been the holding of demonstrations in further development of water facilities such as the tapping of these reservoirs by the proper installation of a pipeline and concrete watering trough and the development of old neglected springs by the use of masonry walls with pipe connection to concrete troughs. The Board of Supervisors has become so interested in this project, they have personally purchased materials and constructed a set of collapsible forms for a 330 gallon trough, which are used again and again. These forms are rented to cooperators of the District for a nominal sum. Cooperators who include: George A. Eubanks and have established such installations Stanley Maegly of Crescent Springs Mrs. Stella Richardson, Mrs. Daisy Richardson, John Richardson and J. C. Anderson of near White's Tower; Robert Porter and Tom Sanford of Hand Pike and J. C. Reynolds, Shirley Rich, Clarence Scherman, George Hergott and Steve Durr of Nicholson community. Many others have requested assistance in conducting this work. Such development not only protects the erosion aggravated by the hoofs of animals. New members of the Soil Conservation District who have entered into a five-year plan of Conservation Farming since January first include: Ova Petty, Lee Faulkner and Ralph Highman of the Towers Community, T. M. Landin (Cincinnati) of the Kenton Community; Walter Moffett, F. H. Shanklin, Mrs. Frances Kaub, Earl R. Souder, Shirley Rich, Cecil A. Stephens of the

Leighton Mitchell and Monte Cuthbert Direct Station WLW's Staff Of Writers

Two important Station WLW executives are Leighton W. Mitchell, continuity editor, and his assistant, Monte Cuthbert, who direct the writing chores of the station's large staff of script and continuity writers.

Mr. Mitchell is a native of Atlanta, Georgia, who began his writing career as editor of "The Red and Black," the University of Georgia newspaper, and who, after various other activities, came to WLW in 1942. Monte Cuthbert, who was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, has had varied experience as a newspaper reporter, teacher, and personnel worker, in addition to three years of radio writing.

Nicholson Community: Earl Richardson of Oak Island, Russell Rector of Atwood and Peter Holz of Independence.

The Board of Supervisors of the District is composed of Steve Durr, Chairman; Frank D. Cooke, Secretary; and B. F. Stambaugh, Earl F. Metcalfe and George A. Eubanks. (Application for membership can be made with the County Agent, C. A. Wicklund or direct with the District office on the second floor of the Bank of Independence.)

EXTENSION COMMITTEE APPROVES 1944 PROGRAM

The Boone County Agricultural Extension Committee approved a recommended 1944 program in a meeting at Burlington last Friday evening, March 31st. The committee reviewed a summary of ten community planned programs, five county wide planned programs and made general recommendations for coordinating the 1944 plans.

The program will involve seventeen major lines of agricultural improvement including Soils, Pasture and Hay Crops, Corn, Dairy, Beef Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, Poultry, Tobacco, Fruit, Melons, Live at Home, Farm Labor, Truck Crops, 4-H and Utopia Clubs, U. S. D. A. War Board and other cooperating agricultural agencies.

Chairmen of ten community plans assisting in County-wide planning are: H. B. White, Burlington; Norman Herberstrel, Constance; Edward Rogers, Grants; Eugene Echwenke, Hamilton; William Moore, Hebron; J. F. Cleek, New Haven; J. H. Huey, Petersburg; Walter King, Verona; and Ben Bedinger, Walton. Representatives of cooperating agencies assisting in the planning included the County 4-H and Utopia Club Council, Homemakers Clubs, A. A. A. Committee, F. S. A. Soil Conservation Service, Sheep Protective Association, Farm Bureau, Wool Pool, R. E. A. Federal Land Bank, P. C. A. and Dairy Improvement Associations.

A detailed summary of the program will be published next week.

FARM BUREAU SPONSORS IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

The Boone County Farm Bureau, in a meeting at Burlington on Monday, voted to sponsor for its members a special parasite control program in sheep this year. All members are urged to treat their flocks with either the Phenothiazine drench or tablets before turning on pasture and to feed the Phenothiazine one part, and salt nine parts, mixture to be used during the summer months.

The Farm Bureau will secure and supply to members the needed material for treatment at cost, according to Lloyd Slekmann, president. Members are urged to leave orders for their needs with the president.

Reuben Asbury, sheep salesman of the Cincinnati Producers, addressed the members at their meeting Monday and urged that all members treat their flocks. He stated that experience at the stock yards and in grading work on the farm indicated that parasite control was the most important problem confronting farmers today in the production of quality lambs. He urged all shepherds to treat their flocks. Phenothiazine has been found the most effective treatment.

who doesn't bother to remove pins and other hard metal objects from the path of her cleaner

Most everybody but Zella knows that running a cleaner over pins, nails, coins and similar objects can damage the brush, dust bag or mechanism. It's something to be avoided if you want your cleaner to last. Here are some other tips that mean longer wear and better service:

- Empty and clean dust bag after each cleaning.
- Don't pull cord tightly over handle hooks. Coil loosely.
- Keep brush free of hair, threads and string.
- Avoid banging cleaner against furniture and baseboards.
- Don't yank cord from wall socket.
- Oil cleaner periodically in accordance with instructions for your make.
- Keep proper tension on belt.

You need your electric servants more than ever these busy wartime days. Take care of your appliances and make 'em last.

Several Local Highways Are Included in State Improvement Program; No New Construction

Many local roads are included in the road construction program designed mainly to prevent existing roads from deteriorating, announced by J. S. Watkins, commissioner of highways, Frankfort.

The program consisting of 44 projects, is mainly hot mix, cold plant mix, and surface mix types of improvement and such forms as do not require approval of federal authorities to carry out.

It is a program instituted for the main purpose of keeping roads in shape for travel, and does not contemplate new roads to be built.

The order of Mr. Watkins setting up the programs directs that bids be received in lettings so arranged that the work get underway with the least possible delay.

Projects in this section in the construction program, and what is to be done are:

Boone County: From U. S. 25 in Florence to Burlington, 6.3 miles, cold plant mix.

Boone County: U. S. 25 from Florence to Richmond, 4.68 miles, 60 pounds rock asphalt, no binder.

Boone County: Constance-Heron road from junction Ky. 298 to junction Youell road, 80 miles, cold plant mix.

Covington-Constance road from Ludlow to Bromley, 13 miles, cold plant mix.

Streets in Ludlow and Covington, two miles, cold plant mix.

Grant County: North corporate limit Dry Ridge to south limits of Crittenden, 6.193 miles, bituminous concrete, (hot mix).

Boone County: Constance to Hebron, 4.2 miles, seal coat type.

Boone County: Hebron to Petersburg, 10 miles, seal coat type.

Grant County: Williamsburg to Owen county line, 13.41 miles, surface mix.

Owen County: Owen-Warshaw road from Junction, Ky. 35 and U. S. 227 to city limits of Owen, 300 miles; Owen-Warshaw road through Owen, 1.100 miles; Owen-Warshaw road from northern limits Owen to Ky. 35, 6.3 miles; Owen-Corrollton road from Ky. 35 to bridge at Worthville, 14.416 miles; Owen-Georgetown road from Ky. 22 to Scott county line, 25 pound seal only, 14.303 miles—surface mix.

WASTE PAPER COLLECTION

The waste paper will be collected by the Salvage Committee on May 2nd.

Be sure to tie your bundles securely. Newspaper together and magazines together and have them on the sidewalk in front of your home. This is urgently needed.

EXPERT ADDRESS UTOPIA CLUB

Rev. T. C. Crume, landscaping expert and operator of a large nursery on U. S. 42 near Florence, will address Boone County Utopia Club members at their meeting Thursday evening, April 20 at 8:00 P. M. "Landscaping as a Means of Improving Property" will be the subject discussed.

Utopia was time project discussion and a special rural program training meeting will follow the regular business meeting. Carl W. Jones, older boys and girls club specialist, will assist in the project recreation programs.

The Utopia Club extends a hearty invitation to all older youth and others interested in Utopia Club work, to attend and take part in the meeting and program.

JOSEPH CODE

Requiem Mass for Joseph Code eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Code of Green Road was conducted from St. Patrick Church, Verona, Tuesday at 10:00 A. M. with burial in St. Patrick Cemetery.

Joseph passed away Saturday in Children's Hospital, Cincinnati. He is survived by his parents, three sisters, Mary a graduate nurse at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, Ann and Helen both students at Simon Kenton High School, one brother Martin Jr. Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of arrangements.

Miss Luke Gordon, a member of the faculty of Versailles High School, passed the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Estelle Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Johnson of Cincinnati, were visiting with Mr. Johnson's father, Mr. W. B. Johnson, Saturday.

Mrs. Vernon Pope To Head Women's Land Army

Mrs. Vernon Pope has been selected Boone County Chairman of the Women's Land Army. She has appointed local citizenship chairmen to serve as community W. L. A. chairmen.

Any woman who wants to belong to the Women's Land Army is asked to contact the local chairman nearest her or contact Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent, Women doing agricultural work such as dairy, poultry, garden, livestock, truck crops, fur, general farm work and operation of machinery, are eligible to belong to the W. L. A.

Following are local chairmen: Burlington Club—Mrs. Wendell Easton, Burlington; Bullitts Club—Mrs. Jonas Stevens, R. 1; Burlington; Constance Club—Mrs. Alice Kenyon, R. 2, Ludlow; Florence Club—Mrs. Virginia Goodridge, Florence; Hebron—Mrs. Alberta Dickey, R. 1, Burlington; New Haven Club—Mrs. Katherine Peasap, R. 2, Walton; Petersburg—Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, Petersburg; Rabbit Hash Club—Mrs. Orville Kelly, R. 2, Burlington; Taylorsport Club—Mrs. Oscar Putsig, Taylorsport; Verona Club—Mrs. Will McCormick, Verona; Walton Club—Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Walton.

The five purposes of the W. L. A. are (1) to make maximum use of all available woman power in the production of food, fiber, and feed; (2) to give women recognition for the part they are playing and can play on the agricultural front, as industry is doing on the industrial front; (3) to have a record of women's part in agricultural production; (4) to make available to women doing farm work the W. L. work outfit, and (5) to make available to women doing farm work, accident insurance.

After the services were dismissed, the family went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Rouse for dinner.

50th Wedding Anniversary Celebration

MR. AND MRS. W. O. ROUSE

A happy wedding was made for Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Rouse on their 50th anniversary, Saturday morning as a surprise their son A. M. Rouse of Albany, New York and Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Stallard of Cincinnati, Ohio, came. On Sunday morning a surprise awaited them at the Methodist church. To the strains of the Wedding March played on the organ by Mrs. Sam Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Rouse were asked to come to the front of the church and were seated in front of the altar which was decorated with beautiful ferns and red tulips. Mrs. Mary Stephenson welcomed them in behalf of the Sunday school.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson in her lovely manner sang "Loves Old Sweet Song." Mrs. Lula Hudson the oldest living member of the church presented them with a gift from the church. The congregation sang "Count Your Many Blessings" and Mr. Clifford Pruitt presented the happy couple with a beautiful bouquet of flowers from the Happy Helpers Class. Another song by the congregation and everybody went up to greet them.

After the services were dismissed, the family went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Rouse for dinner.

Twelve Community 4-H Clubs Enroll 522 Members

Twelve Boone County Community 4-H Clubs have enrolled 522 members under the supervision of 78 adult leaders, according to O. D. Perkins, Assistant County Agent, and Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Two new 4-H Clubs have been organized in 1944. They are St. Paul's Trojans, Florence, with a membership of 16, and Burlington Club No. 2 with 33 members.

Each member is enrolled in one or more war time projects. The enrollment in the approved 4-H projects is as follows: garden 125; corn 13, hogs 17, beef cattle 21, sheep 5, dairy 29, poultry 53, tobacco 92, foods 85, clothing 222, room improvement 8, labor service 57, and canning 94.

The fourth series of meetings are being completed this week. Plans are being made for the Annual 4-H Spring Rally on May 20th.

PUBLIC SALE

The public sale of the 30 acre farm, Livestock, Farming implements and Household Goods of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robinson, will be held Saturday April 22 by Col. Worthington, Auctioneer.

This farm is located, just South of the town limits near Boone Lake and has a 6 room house, with electric and running water.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnett Franks had as dinner guests Tuesday, Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford of La Grange, Mrs. Minnie Davis of Florence, Mrs. Lulu Vest and Mrs. Kate Noell.

Mrs. E. O. Webster and daughter Ernestine entertained for dinner Friday, Mr. David W. Deaton, Mrs. Willanna Deaton, and daughter Mary Ruth, Mr. Richard Praxer of Covington and Mrs. Earl Smith of Louisville, Ky.

Red Cross Nursing Service Very Active in Boone County

The activities of the Red Cross Nursing Service for the past few months have been many and varied. Five hundred and thirty-five school children were inspected during April for physical defects. Notices were sent to all parents of those who appeared to need immediate correction. Thirty corrections in vision and tonsils and ears were made, besides many more in teeth, also splendid nutrition work has been done in schools. When he nurse inspects a school room, she gives the names of children appearing to need better nutrition to the lunch room committee, who in turn sees that the child gets milk and other important necessary foods.

The interest in Boone County in regard to health is so good, that in most instances all that has to be done is to let parent know what is needed and how they can get it done.

The high school home nursing class at Hebron has just been completed, with ten to get certificates from Washington. This department of the Red Cross is busy, with people all over the United States taking courses, that some times it takes months to get these certificates filled out and returned to us, but they do always come, so we are asking students to be patient.

Mrs. Jennison Aylor has accepted Chairmanship for Home Nursing Classes in Boone County, and stands ready to assist a group in any part of the county to get enough together for a class.

Miss Estell Huey has organized a class for Burlington, which will begin when school work is complete for the year. The Burlington group have asked to spend most of the time practicing actual nursing. We expect to do. Any other community may have their class conducted this way if they so desire.

AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM CHAIRMAN 1944 LISTED

Chairmen of the 1944 Agricultural Extension Improvement Committees are as follows: Burlington, H. E. White; Constance, Norman Herbig; Florence, Elby Dringenburg; Grant, A. S. Burcham; Hamilton, James B. Jones; Hebron, Robert Graves; New Haven, Harry Moore; Petersburg, John Burns; Verona, Walter King; Walton, J. C. Bedinger.

The 1943 instead of the 1944 Community Chairmen were published last week through error. A total of 143 community project leaders are assisting in carrying out the local 1944 programs, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

K. E. A. Held In Lexington Over Week-end

The Kentucky Educational Association was held at Lexington on the University campus, during the past week-end. This was the first time that the convention had been held at Lexington. According to the director of the convention about 3,000 persons attended the meeting, which is about one-half the ordinary number.

The wartime convention theme was "Planning for the Postwar World."

The principal speakers were Dr. Virginia Dabney of Richmond; Gov. Simon Willis; Hon. Walter D. Judd, Congressman from Minnesota. The music was furnished by University Women's Glee Club and the Transylvania Acappella Choir.

Among those attending the convention from this vicinity were Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Baker, Miss Kathryn Scott, Miss Rebecca Sleet, Mr. Bruce Franks, Miss Louise Conrad, Miss Jean Chambers, Mrs. Mary Humphrey, Mrs. Georgia Rouse, Mrs. Julia A. Rouse, Mrs. Sam J. Hudson, Miss Helen Ruth Gardner, Miss Effie Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Chipman, Miss Betty Rouse and Mr. C. B. Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Vallandigham, have moved to the apartment of Mrs. Georgia Arnold in North Walton.

WALTON ENSIGN HOME TRAINING COMPLETED

Ensign Charles J. Ransler arrived at his home in Walton Friday for a brief furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ransler, to follow his graduation from midshipmen's school, Columbia University, N. Y.

A graduate of Walton-Verona High School in the class of 1940, he entered Transylvania College in September of that year and enlisted in the U. S. Naval Reserve Aug. 28, 1942. Ensign Ransler was in his senior year at that institution when called into active duty July 1, 1943.

He underwent training at the University of Louisville and the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va., before entering the midshipmen's school, where he was graduated April 13, 1944.

While at Transylvania Ensign Ransler was vice-president of his fraternity, Phi Kappa Tau, and a member of the honorary fraternity, Book and Bones, and the Crimson Club.

VOLUNTEER

Another one of Walton-Verona High School boys, has entered Uncle Sam's service. J. B. McCubbin son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McCubbin is taking his basic training at Sheppard Field, Texas. J. B. enlisted in the Air Cadets December 14.

Cpl. Barnett Jump is spending a furlough with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Jump and daughter Eunice, in Mt. Zion. Barnett is in the Air Corps and has been away for 3 years and two months in combat service.

Pfc. Paul Collier who has been stationed in Alaska is spending a furlough with his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Collier and daughter of Mt. Zion.

A letter was received from Leon Pennington by his parents Mr. and Mrs. Levi Pennington, in which he said that he liked the army and was going to be a company of boys and that they asked the prayers of those at home.

Second Class Seamen John Lawrence and Harry Lee Anderson of Great Lakes, Ill., are spending a nine day leave with their parents Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lawrence and family and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Anderson and family of Mt. Zion.

Ensign Ray Bingham of New York is spending a furlough with his parents Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Bingham and family of Mt. Zion.

Howard Amos Roberts who is with the Coast Guards at New York is spending a furlough with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Jones of Mt. Zion.

Mr. James Coyle has returned from Norfolk, Va. where he went to see his son James Harold, who is in the Norfolk Naval Hospital, and his son William Ray, who was in Norfolk, but was out at sea at this time. Mr. Coyle made arrangements for the brothers to meet in the hospital as they had not seen each other for years. Word has been received that they have had this happy meeting. Anyone who has sons in the Service should give to the Red Cross for the boys who are in the hospital. They do not want for anything.

FARMERS ORDER TWO CANS PROTEIN FEED

Two car loads of soybean meal have been ordered from the War Food Administration through the County AAA office during the past ten days. This much needed feed according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent, will not only help relieve the acute feed shortage for many dairymen, hog and poultry raisers, but will aid livestock health and make the home grown feeds more efficient.

Farmers should carefully study their feed needs and secure those protein feeds that are needed when they are available. It has been practically impossible to purchase straight protein feeds during the past year. Orders may be filed at the County AAA office now for future deliveries.

A WALTON MAN FELT LIKE SWOLLEN BALLOON; FULL OF STOMACH GAS

Recently, a Walton man stated that he used to feel like a swollen balloon after every meal. He would bloat full of gas and spit
up acidulous liquids for hours
after eating. Was terribly constipated. This man is one of the hundreds in this vicinity who now praise ERB-HELP. He states he was amazed at the results when he took this medicine. Now he eats what he wants without gas or bloating, and bowels are regular for the first time in years.
He feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great
Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-

71 SUCCESSFUL YEARS

We don't want to pass our seventy-first anniversary without an expression of our gratitude to the people of Northern Kentucky who have made the achievement of this store possible.

At the request of the U. S. Government, we are omitting any anniversary sale this year.

But we are not omitting to say thank you, and to pledge our best efforts to serve you so as to deserve your continued good will and confidence.

OUR FUNDAMENTAL POLICIES HAVE BEEN AND WILL BE:

FIRST.....

We seek at all times to maintain our traditional position as Northern Kentucky's leading, first-class store.

SECOND.....

We endeavor to maintain a standard of selection and taste in merchandise that is recognized as Coppin Quality.

THIRD.....

We aim through sound operation and fair pricing to make this merchandise available to the largest possible number of people.

FOURTH.....

Next to Quality and Value, we place Courtesy as a fundamental and governing principle. This courtesy applies alike to public, employees, agents and factors with whom we deal.

FIFTH.....

To those whom the John R. Coppin Co. serves and to those who make this service possible, and to all others in the community, our reputation for fair dealing, honesty, faith and integrity shall be paramount to any other thing.

SIXTH.....

The store desires that every transaction shall bring satisfaction to the customer, and is prepared to make prompt and cheerful adjustments in all cases where a purchase falls in this respect.

SEVENTH.....

Progress and leadership shall be the keynote of the John

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I was just tellin' my brother Fred this morning, Judge...there's never been a time in our lives when we got to live up to that old sayin' 'United we stand, divided we fall' more than we have to today."

"How true that is, Herb. And for the life of me, I can't figure out why, at a time like this, some folks insist on raising a question like prohibition. I can't imagine anything that would tickle our enemies more than to get us folks over here taking sides against each other, arguing about an issue like that. We've got a he-man's job on our hands to win this war and we can't be wasting our minds, our money and our strength fighting about something we tried for nearly 14 years and found couldn't work."

"I say there's a time and a place for everything, and this is no time or place to be doing any fightin' except the kind that's going to win the war."

Burma—Lull in fighting on Burma front finds U. S. Major Graham Batchelor of Milledgeville, Ga., dining with Chinese troops, chopsticks, rice-and-all.

PACIFIC: On Run, on Go

On the run in the Pacific, Jap forces remained on the go in India, thrusting forward toward the Assam-Bengal railroad supporting Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stillwell's U. S. Chinese troops in northern Burma. With U. S. forces closing in from the west, the Japs abandoned the northern and southern coasts of New Britain and fell back toward

EUROPE: Straighten Lines

Thousands of U. S. and British bombers thundered over Belgium and France to pound rail and canal routes serving the channel coast as the zero hour for the invasion neared, while the harassed enemy straightened his lines in the east for a last ditch defense of the Balkans.

Big formations of the AAF and RAF joined in bombarding the German communications lines in Belgium and France in an effort to impair their usefulness for shifting Nazi armies to the different sectors where the Allies may land invasion forces. Factories turning out war weapons for the enemy's military machine also were blasted as swarms of Nazi fighter planes rose to challenge the attackers.

Taking up their positions alongside of Rumanian soldiers now fighting on their own soil, the Germans surrendered their last foothold in the Russian Ukraine, while farther to the southeast, Red troops threatened Nazi lines in the Crimea, the Axis army being driven out of the Black sea and guarding the water route to the eastern Balkans.

Nazi Aim

Defensive action aimed at a negotiated peace is in back of the heads of the German leadership, competent military authorities agree, as the Nazis shorten their lines in Russia and build up strength in the west against an invasion.

By pulling in their lines in Russia and mobilizing Rumania, Hungary and Baltic states, the Germans can defend their new positions with less men, while still offering stiff resistance to the Reds.

Behind the extensive concrete and steel fortifications in the west, the Germans are estimated to have 750,000 troops in France and the low countries and 450,000 in the Balkans. In addition, the Nazis are said to have another 750,000 troops in reserve for quick dispatch to threatened areas.

Planning economical use of these troops behind tough defensive barriers, with the advantage of short communications lines, the Germans hope to bring down Allied resistance and receive moderate peace terms.

FOREIGN POLICY: Hull Explains

Because Russia's annexation of Poland, Rumania and Poland and all of the Baltic states might be essential to prevent future aggression and establish world security, such action would not be contrary to the objectives of the Atlantic Charter, Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared.

In explaining the significance of the Atlantic Charter, Hull said: "It (the charter) is not a code of law from which detailed answers to every question can be distilled by painstaking analysis of its words and phrases. It points the direction in which solutions are to be sought. . . . War is fundamental in the objectives of the charter."

Only among the U. S., Britain, Russia and China is the key to future world peace, Hull said, and destruction among these powers can only wreck postwar stability.

POPULATION

The south and west sections of the country have gained more than 2 1/2 million people as a result of wartime movements of military and civilian personnel. Meanwhile, the north central and northeastern states lost 450,000. Natural increase during these two years added 2,101,223 bringing the estimated total to 133,770,000. The census bureau also reported that of 39 states gaining population, Virginia, Florida, Arizona, Nevada and California went 10 per cent or more.

MISCELLANY:

Washington, D. C.

JOB TO DO IN LONDON

Those close to Secretary of State Hull say he is not happy over the mission to London undertaken by energetic young Undersecretary Ed Stettinius. Originally, the trip was planned partly to please the British, who wanted that we send no important emissaries to London since Harry Hopkins' call on Churchill two years ago.

However, Stettinius is on the way turning the mission into something really important. He is scheduled to discuss five important subjects with the British. They are:

1. Stabilization of the dollar and pound after the war.
2. A world bank.
3. Stabilization of commodities. This would mean the application of Wallace's ever-normal granary to all basic commodities such as tin, rubber, copper, sugar, with a system of buying and selling to keep prices stabilized.
4. Oil and the Near East. The United States wants to avoid a cut-throat battle for oil such as occurred with Britain after the last war and which is already threatened. Result of the Arabian pipeline wrangling.
5. The future boundaries of Germany.

German boundaries were tentatively discussed at Teheran, but now Dr. Isiah Bowman, famed geographer, has accompanied Stettinius to London to talk details. Bowman was Woodrow Wilson's geographic expert at Versailles, and some officials are critical of his chopping-up of Europe.

This imposing agenda has irked Secretary Hull. Apparently, it was pretty well arranged while he was in Florida. Also, Hull was always jealous of the trips Summer Welles took to Rio, Rome, London and Berlin, and now it looks as if his new undersecretary might also be crowding him for the limelight.

MORE HORSE LEATHER

Representative Calvin Johnson of Illinois has been badgering the war department and the War Production board to get more horse leather for the army. With leather short, and harness buckle metal diverted to war production, harness is scarce. Also, the army has bought up tremendous supplies of harness.

In campaigning for more harness, Representative Johnson suddenly bumped into the fact that the army only needs one set of harness for every 100 men. Johnson, Ind., quartermaster, dealt a total of 30,000 sets of harness—carefully stored away since the last war.

FREE RADIO TIME

Broadcasters are wondering how many other congressmen will follow the example recently set by Maryland's Senator Millard E. Ewing. At the close of his regular weekly broadcast, he announced that he would discontinue the series because he did not wish to subject the radio station, WBAI, to charges of unfairness during the coming senatorial campaign.

OIL SUBSIDY

The OPA has now recommended a system of oil subsidies to Economic Stabilizer. Union ranging from 10 cents to 75 cents a barrel for all low-producing wells, namely those oil wells averaging nine barrels per day or less. This would give a subsidy to about 80 per cent of the nation's wells and would cost the government about $60,000,000 a year.

The plan was secretly worked out by some of the independents but when the big companies heard about it, they raised such a howl that the little fellows backed out, stating publicly that they had not been cooperating with the government in devising the subsidy scheme.

However, it looks as if the plan would go through. Pennsylvania wells, which are the deepest, will get the highest subsidy.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The United States is cutting off its nose to spite its face in regard to the Free French. It is still freezing French funds in order to hamstring De Gaulle, which means they will have to dig down into their own pockets to pay France's share of the UNRRA fund. Each nation is supposed to contribute a share to this world relief fund, and since we are trying up French funds, we will have to find the money some place.

In Recife, thousands of cheering Brazilians welcomed Mr. Roosevelt's slogan "God Bless America" in Portuguese.

A conspiracy is on to snuff out another sizable hunk of the manpower problem out from under Paul McNutt Undersecretary of War. Patterson, rubber czar Bradley Dewey and WPB's production wizard, Charles E. Wilson, want to take the deferment of skilled industrial workers away from McNutt and put it under a special committee headed by Wilson.

Reson for sparse publicity on the First Lady's Latin-American tour was the war department's refusal to let the newsmen who usually cover Mrs. Roosevelt go along.

U. S. Businessmen Try To Define Free Enterprise

Chamber of Commerce Officials Inaugurate Education Campaign Designed to Teach Specific Phase of Democracy.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

In the last few weeks in Washington—and in London, too, for that matter—there has been a crescendo demand for an explanation of our foreign policy, and it is reported that a similar cry is going up from the soldiers at the front—What are we fighting for?

Secretary Hull attempted an answer not too satisfactory to his critics. There will be further official efforts at elucidation. But at least one brasserie institution whose headquarters is in Washington has come to the conclusion that before we can understand what we are fighting for, we must have a better understanding of what we think we want to fight for. Everybody on the allied side claims that democracy is the common ground upon which all stand but there is considerable difference as to how each one defines democracy.

Leaving the broader international aspects for a moment, I want to report a unique campaign of education whose purpose is to find out just what is meant by one specific phase of democracy about which we hear a great deal, namely, "free enterprise." This organized effort is being promulgated by the one group whose members use that term most frequently.

And, as their leaders admit, frequently don't know its meaning and often do not even subscribe to it—the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Before me, I have a document from which I want to quote five lines:

"Said one newspaperman to another: 'I'd fall dead if I found a businessman who wasn't in favor of free enterprise.'"

"Replied the other: 'I'd fall dead if I found a businessman who really wanted it.'"

The document quoted from is not a communist pronouncement—it is "The Economic Sentinel" printed by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and it is just part of an educational effort on the part of this body of businessmen, whose objective is to find out just what the pamphlet published by the Chamber of Commerce.

"To develop in every community a group of leaders who really understand, and can explain and who can convincingly advocate the economic system of free, private, competitive enterprise, or to put it another way, American enterprise."

An Important Discovery

The campaign of education among the Chamber's own members has been going on for some time but the general public didn't realize what was happening until they heard Eric Johnston, the president of the chamber, make a speech early in March, copies of which, as I am told, are still in great demand.

Mr. Johnston criticized labor but for every one of the "seven deadly sins" which he said labor had committed, he confessed a parallel sin committed by business.

Johnston, in making this speech and in his subsequent writings and utterances, is practicing what his organization has been preaching in the campaign they are now carrying on through the chamber's department of governmental affairs in Washington.

They provide a program which their local chapters can follow, telling how to organize discussion groups, which they point out, should include public officials, ministers, professional men and women and believe it or not—they strongly recommend the (paid) assistance of a college professor. The purpose is the undoing of that "democratic principle-free enterprise."

It was from the document compiled by one of these doctors of democracy, Dr. V. O. Watta, economic counsel of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, for such group guidance from which I was quoting.

For and Against

If confession is good for the soul, the business in Olympia, Washington (where the quotation was given), must be hale and hearty after hearing Dr. Watta declare:

"A city chamber of commerce opposes restrictions which neighboring towns sometimes place on deliveries of merchandise by city merchants and truckers. Yet the same organization is likely to help erect similar barriers against out-of-state or out-of-town enterprise which might compete with its own industries or merchants."

"Businessmen dislike restrictive policies of farmers and labor unions. Yet many of them say that free competition among themselves would be ruinous. So they lobby for measures to restrict business competition and to legalize price-fixing by government or by their own organizations."

"Chambers of commerce frequently join the clamor for un-economic local projects of the state or federal government on the ground that 'other places are getting theirs; why shouldn't we get ours?' Such chamber of commerce socialism leads to increased tax burdens which correspondingly restrict markets and jobs in free enterprise."

This is the kind of strong medicine which the United States Chamber of Commerce recommends the average citizen to absorb so that "free enterprise" may be understood. Here is another sample of straight-from-the-shoulder talk:

"Recent corrosions of economic liberty in the United States are not due to the efforts of a few communists or fascists. Instead they chiefly come from the fact that so many of us care only about our own liberties and are indifferent or even hostile to possession of similar liberties by others of our fellow citizens."

In fact for a momentary gain in higher prices, higher wages or government favors, many of us are willing even to sell our own freedom."

I wish I could quote further but space does not permit it to go without saying that real "free enterprise," its virtues and its benefits, are expounded in great detail. But this is to quote from a pamphlet of a degree of frankness, a remarkable willingness to think. It is something when the very people who are loudest in their accusation that "free enterprise" is being destroyed by Tom, Dick, Harry, John (Lewie) et alia, are willing to admit that they, themselves, may be enemies of free, competitive enterprise.

Hitting the Trail

When Eric Johnston arose and declared that labor and management must "hit the sawdust trail together," he meant something. But actually he was only carrying on something which his organization—I don't know whether he was the chicken or the egg—had already started. It is a process by which businessmen (and in businessmen, the farmer is included for he is a mighty important part of the American free enterprise system) get an understanding of what the American system of economic democracy really is and then see whether they are really supporting this American system or not.

I have no idea how successful Mr. Johnston and his colleagues will be but I know some of them are enthusiastic enough to believe that he has rendered a service which makes him eligible as a contender for the job of keynoter at the Republican National convention in June and some are even optimistic enough to provide themselves with curry combs just in case they might be called upon to groom a dark horse for the presidential race.

But politics aside, there is cause for rejoicing when anybody sets out to try to define at least one phase of the thing we are supposed to be fighting for and to do something about it. As Leonard Read, general manager of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, said just a few weeks ago:

"We have come to the conclusion that the best contribution we can make to the thinking in our country is to state our own thinking."

Amen to that.

3 cups sifted flour 1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast

1 1/2 teaspoons sugar 1/4 cup lukewarm water

1/2 teaspoon salt 1 tablespoon melted shortening

Mix together flour, sugar and salt. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Add to dry ingredients. Add melted shortening. Dough will be soft.

Turn out on floured board and knead dough quickly and lightly until smooth and elastic. Roll out 1/4 inch thick. Cut with desired biscuit cutter. Place on greased pan. Let rise until doubled in bulk, about 30 minutes. Bake top with fork. Bake in hot oven at 425° F. about 30 minutes. Makes 16 two-inch biscuits. Serve hot with home-made jam, jelly or preserves for a supper dessert treat!

OUR FARM NEWS

FARMING ON THE LEVEL

By J. C. Acree, Soil Conservation Service

A practice that is old yet rather new in Boone County is contour farming, or farming on the level. Four Boone county farmers started out in earnest last week to crop on the contour. Twelve acres of corn and tobacco will be grown on the level on the Grover Ransom farm at Verona. Some plans have been made on Mr. James Messer's farm in the same community. Fifty-five acres were plowed on the contour on Mrs. Walter Ferguson's farm at Union. Instead of short rows being plowed up and down the slope, some of the furrows were three-fourths of a mile long by plowing around the slope on the level. Likewise twenty acres on Cecil Dickerson's farm near Beaver was staked so that he will have all his crops on the contour. Three acres of Kpudzu corns were set out on this farm last week. This is a legume vine that is doing wonders in the South as a soil saver, and is used extensively there for hay and pasture. Whether it will do well here will be determined by this demonstration and three others in the county. Mr. Dickerson says he is glad to try anything new that might hold and improve the land.

Thirty-five other farmers have asked for assistance in laying off guide lines so that they might crop on the contour.

This method of farming is very simple after once established. Guide rows are laid out starting at the highest point in the field and then at one or more points further down the slope, especially if the topography of the field changes. The best way to lay out guide rows is before the land is plowed. The farmer then can plow, if the ground is not too steep, in lands, by backfurlrowing. This will establish a permanent guide line. Actual tests show that we can reduce erosion 50 per cent; increase tobacco poundage by 75 to 150 pounds; increase corn yields by 8 to 10 bushels. There isn't any magic in contour farming. It is merely holding the water on the land rather than letting it run off down the hill.

GRANT 4-H CLUB NEWS

The Grant 4-H Club was called to order by our vice president, John C. Rogers. We said the club pledge and the secretary read the roll call and the minutes of the last meeting. We had our program about being seafarers on our farms and in our homes by fixing up things. Mr. Perkinson gave a talk about gardening. Miss Gillaspie talked about clothing and food projects. The project captains gave reports on the meetings we have had and what they have done with their projects. We sang two songs and the meeting was adjourned. Virginia Stevens Club Reporter.

Get Rid of Extra Roosters in Flock

The roosters in your poultry flock may determine the difference between profit and loss for the present and the coming season. Males in the laying flock which are not needed for producing hatching eggs are of no value. Excess males may decrease fertility and they are consuming scarce and expensive feed. Keep in the flock of medium and heavy breeds only one male to 15 hens. For Leghorns and other light breeds, one to 20 is sufficient.

There should be no roosters in flocks not producing hatching eggs. As soon as hatching eggs are no longer needed, remove all males from the flock, sell those that will not be used next year, and keep over for future use only those of exceptional breeding value. Males kept over should be separated from the hens, given shelter, good grass range, and fed in the same manner as the hens.

The future of your flock is dependent on the cockerels you will raise this year. Selection of superior males begins with the chicks at hatching time and continues until the flock is mated. Here are things to keep in mind in order to have the best males possible:

1. If you don't have your chicks yet, get them immediately.
2. Get the best quality of chicks available.
3. For best feathering, mark all chicks which have long pin feathers in their wings at hatching time or tall feathers at 10 days of age.
4. Keep for further selection the largest cockerels at eight to 12 weeks of age.
5. Keep only cockerels that are free from standard disqualifications and have no body deformities. Common disqualifications are points on the sides of the comb and feathers on the shanks, toes, and between the toes.
6. Don't trade cockerels with your neighbor.

ON KENTUCKY FARMS

Approximately $3,000 worth of war bonds were sold by the Waterloo 4-H club in Heart county.

Farmers in Ohio county are using nitrate to bring on early pastures and to increase yields of small grains.

Mrs. R. K. Ogden of Trimble county made a profit of $58 above feed costs in one month on her flock of 173 Barred Rock hens.

Farmers in Fleming county who primed tobacco were well satisfied some reporting earnings of $10 for each dollar spent for labor.

Approximately 100 acres of orchard will be started in Graves county this year.

Following a display of garden seeds recommended by John S. Gardner of the University of Kentucky, more than 100 Metcalfe county farmers bought the seed.

The need of feed in Harlan county is causing farmers to sow new pastures and re-seed old ones.

More than 278 farm men and women in Oldham county are helping to encourage more food production within the county.

Carlisle county farmers placed orders for 20 tons of ammonium nitrate and 80 tons of mixed fertilizer.

It is expected that 80 percent of the tobacco growers in Spencer county will be root-rot resistant varieties, around 200 farmers growing Ky. 41A.

FLORENCE 4-H CLUB NEWS

The regular meeting of the Florence 4-H Club was held on March 23, 1944. The president, Mary June Taylor, presided. The meeting was called to order and the minutes of the previous meeting were read. Two boys and forty-four girls were present, making a total of forty-six. We had two visitors.

The rest of the meeting was devoted to reports of the captains and our leader told us all the units that we could take in both foods and clothing. The meeting was adjourned. Borbra Lutes, reporter.

ACRE ALFALFA PER COW

Boone farmers have set up a goal of one acre of alfalfa or other legume hay per cow in their 1944 agricultural improvement program according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. Farmers and especially dairymen who did not produce enough legume hay for this past winter have been faced with a serious feed problem.

Present indications are for a serious feed problem if farmers do not produce enough needed supplies for the coming year. Because Boone County normally imports both hay and grain, the feed situation may become more serious.

Spring is an ideal time to seed alfalfa. There are thousands of acres of land in the county that has been limed during the past five years. Good application of lime last year to twenty years longer and phosphate two or three years or longer. Much of the recently limed and phosphated land will grow alfalfa and good alfalfa seed should be available.

Now is an ideal time to seed alfalfa. Twelve pounds of alfalfa and eight pounds of orchard grass per acre makes an excellent seed mixture. Sprinkle the alfalfa seed. Alfalfa should always be seeded with a grass. There is no finer way to secure a good blue grass field than seed 12 or more pounds of inoculated alfalfa seed and 8 to 14 pounds of blue grass seed. Three years is plenty long to plan on cutting almost any alfalfa field. Most farmers in seeding alfalfa have expected the field to produce indefinitely.

Farmers are urged to help efficiently and profitably feed Boone County's livestock next winter by planning their feed programs now. Cuts as a nurse crop may be seeded with the alfalfa where it is feared one crop of alfalfa may not be harvested this fall.

SPECIALIST RECOMMENDS HEAVY FERTILIZER TREATMENT

William Johnstone, Agronomy Specialist from the College, recommended to Boone County farmers in a meeting at Burlington last Friday evening that they make heavy use of fertilizers in 1944. Crops have advanced in prices but the price of fertilized remains practically unchanged.

Nitrogen is usually one of the weak links in the fertilizer chain. Roughly speaking, experimental work indicates that where nitrogen is the weak link, the addition of 1 lb. of nitrogen will give an increase of one half bushel of corn, 3 pounds of tobacco, one-half bushel of wheat and fifty pounds of hay. One pound of nitrogen in the form of 32% ammonium nitrate would cost less than ten cents. Ammonium nitrate, the present cheapest form of nitrogen, is available from a few of the dealers in the county.

Heavy application of fertilizers is to be recommended this year to supplement the feed and labor shortages. 1000 pounds of complete fertilizers and 1000 pounds of 20 super phosphate per acre along with 10 to 15 loads of manure are recommended for tobacco. The phosphate and from 800 to 850 pounds of complete fertilizer are to be applied to the green crop and turned under with the remaining 150 to 200 pounds of complete fertilizer put beside the row. Experimental work recently has conclusively proved this the best method of application. Three important principles in fertilizer application should be followed: namely, first, put enough; second, put it deep to ward off drought damage and third, don't mix with the soil more than necessary as this tends to make of the fertilizer temporarily insoluble for the plant use.

Failure of farmers to properly use manure represents a huge loss to farmers, according to Johnstone. One ton of manure equals in plant food analysis 100 pounds of 4-4-10 fertilizer that would cost around $1.75 per hundred. The quality of fertilizer in the manure is of much higher quality than chemical fertilizers.

Many farmers are having difficulties in securing their fertilizer needs. Farmers have been advised since early January to place their fertilizer orders for their crop needs. Planting does not wait for deliveries. Farmers who can not secure their needs from one dealer should contact another dealer. Orders should be placed immediately.

THE GARDEN GREENS

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Because of their dietetic value as they are green in color and because of their being the first of the garden crops to be used in the spring, greens occupy a prominent place in any garden. Another point in their favor, especially for the early greens, is that they occupy their space for so short a time that plantings of almost any of the vegetables may follow them.

Greens need to have the soil "rich" filled with nitrogen, as when plenty of stable manure is used. However, as the green's space is to be used for fruit vegetables or seed vegetables later, the general fertilization, as with manure balanced with phosphate (described in an earlier column), or with complete fertilizer to suit them, should be given, and side-dressings with poultry manure or sheep manure made for the sake of the greens. Lacking these special manures, nitrate soda should be the side-dressing, 1 pound to 100 feet, when first the seedlings start and again in two weeks. A bushel of poultry manure to 300 feet of row is about right.

The early greens are Scotch kale, Southern Curled mustard and Dwarf Essex rape, sometimes called "spring smooth kale." One ounce of seed sows 100 feet of row. The advantage in row-sowing is that spraying can be done easier for the plant lice, and sometimes, the green cabbage worms. Always, the material to use is rotenone.

Besides these early greens, there is another, sown now, Swiss chard, a "beet top" green that starts early and stays until severe frost. As with beets, stands are sometimes poor, unless the precaution is taken to make the seed bed extremely fine and the seed is covered less than one-half inch. Besides, it pays to cover the row with narrow strips of wood, or with tobacco canvas, to break the force of spring rains that may crust the soil so much that these tender seedlings have difficulty breaking through. One packet of Swiss chard seeds sows 30 feet to make the plants stand 10 inches apart. Only the outer leaves are taken in harvesting, further ones coming all summer long, to make the total harvest from a 30 foot row upwards of 8 bushels for the season in a good garden, and when a nitrogenous side dressing is given every 20 days.

That there is real satisfaction in producing food for the family was expressed by Mrs. Enoch Windes, Christian county, who last year canned more than 800 jars of fruit, vegetables and meat for her family of four. In addition, root vegetables were stored. Peaches, pears, grapes and berries were grown on the farm, along with a garden which provided a variety of vegetables. That head lettuce grown from plants, and asparagus, are well worth while was stated by this homemaker. Recently Mrs. Windes canned 200 quarts of beef, which with pork and chicken already put up, will simplify meal preparation in the busy days ahead. Mrs. Windes is assisting Home Agent Mary Ellen Murray in helping farm and rural people of that county to produce and conserve all of the food their families will need.

IMPROVED TOBACCO PAYS IN FLEMING

Farmers in Fleming county who last year grew Ky. No. 14 and Ky. No. 41A tobacco received, on the average, $75 to $125 more to the acre than did farmers who grew non-root-rot varieties, according to Farm Agent James I. Stephens. Approximately 80 percent of the farmers in that county grew root-rot-resistant varieties in 1943. Mr. Stephens notes that the use of 1,000 pounds of fertilizer to the acre will be the general practice among tobacco growers this year, with some farmers applying a ton.

CHALK TALK

... with a Southern Accent!

JUST a few quick scrawls with a piece of chalk on the side of a Southern Railway freight car. But their meaning is already clear on the world's battle fronts.

They mean carloads of crops are on the move... fighting food from fertile Southern fields.

They mean vital weapons of war are rolling... tanks and guns, jeeps and planes... fashioned in the South from Southern raw materials.

They mean that the Southern Railway is delivering the goods... the thousand and one Southern products that are contributing to America's Victory.

In "delivering the goods" in wartime, we are learning how to do our transportation job more efficiently than ever before; how better to serve a postwar South of new products, new industries, new skills... a land of prosperity and plenty, bursting with new opportunities for all.

This is the Southland that men of faith and vision see in the brighter days that lie ahead. This is the high promise of tomorrow... a promise that "chalk talk... with a Southern accent" is helping to fulfill.

How Dan Is Helping The Victory

I don't know anybody that gets more out of the Victory Garden than Dan O'Neill. Works hard in the shop all day, then tends his garden till sundown.

Stopped in to see him, one evening last week and found him laying off more rows than ever.

"Looks like you're gettin' into this Victory Garden business in a big way, Dan!"

"Well," he says, a little proud, "Uncle Sam has asked for 25 per cent more home-grown vegetables this year, and I'm going to do all I can to see he gets it!"

He looked pretty tuckered out and when it was so dark he couldn't work any longer, we both went into the house and the Mrs. gave us each a refreshing glass of beer.

From where I sit, that's the real American spirit—doing what you ought to do and doing what you want to. That's freedom, and that's America.

LOTTIE LOTTAFFROST

— who wastes electricity and shortens the life of her refrigerator by neglecting to defrost it regularly

Thick frost on the freezer acts as an insulator, retards coldmaking, makes the motor run longer. For faster freezing and lower operating cost, frost should be removed whenever it reaches thickness of one-quarter inch. And for longer life and better all-around performance, follow these other timely tips on refrigerator use and care:

- Don't store hot foods. Let them cool first.
- Use fast freezing sparingly. Don't set temperature control higher than necessary.
- Cover all liquids — to retard formation of frost.
- Keep unit compartment and condenser coils clean.
- See that door gasket makes tight seal. Do not open door unnecessarily.
- If an open unit model, oil periodically as directed by the manufacturer. Sealed unit models need no oiling.
- Don't overcrowd shelves.

It's a good idea, too, to have your refrigerator checked by a serviceman at least once a year. Remember — it must last for the duration!

Nearly 200 Acres Given to Boy Scouts; Located in Boone

Boy Scouts of northern Kentucky will now be able to roam over nearly 200 acres on a new camping plot this summer, thanks to a gift made by Frank L. Michaels, president of the Michaels Art Bronze Co., Covington.

H. E. Harris, president of the northern Kentucky Council of the Boy Scouts, announced the gift on Monday.

Given in the name of Mr. Michaels and his two sons, Lewis and Lawrence, who were scouts in their youth, the tract of land is 193 acres located in Boone county on Gunpowder Creek, approximately six miles east of Union, off the Union-Rising Sun road.

The camp will be known as the Boy Scout Reservation in line with the desires of this "Friend of Scouting."

For the last three years the local camping committee has been searching through northern Kentucky to find a suitable spot that would lend itself to the needs of scouting. Three quarters of a mile of the best section of Gunpowder Creek flows through the property; there are three very fine holes of water, one that is 50 feet by 275 feet which will be used as the swimming hole. It is planned to build a small dam which will raise the water several feet and provide a half mile of canoeing water.

There is excellent fishing in the creek. The banks are high enough so that the property is entirely out of flood waters; the old "Buffalo Trail" winds its way through the property.

Two-thirds of the camp is densely wooded with some very large timber, every variety of tree found in this section of Kentucky is located on the property with an abundance of wild flowers. The national organization, through its camp engineering service, has approved the site.

Mr. Harris stated that Scouts have been using the Camp George Hill property which is located at Morningview, Ky. This was given to the Scouts by George W. Hill, and will continue to be used as a troop over-night camp, the Camp Hill property being too small and does not have the necessary swimming facilities for a large summer camp.

It is not likely that there will be major improvements made on the property until after the war. However, it is the hope of the council that sufficient funds would be made available to the scout organization for a postwar development.

This property was sold to Mr. Michaels recently through Rel Co. Wayman.

Tiny Frances Langford carries a stout heart and a resilient spirit in that frail-looking little frame of hers. After a 35,000-mile junket to entertain servicemen with Bob Hope, she can still look as glamorous as all this.

DRAMATIC WAR STORY

Probably the most dramatic and impressive story yet to come out of this war will be heard over Station WLW on Thursday, April 27, at 10:30 P. M., CWT, when Frank Laskier, British merchant seaman, relates some of his war experiences.

Told quietly and beautifully in words and phrases that ring with sincerity, Mr. Laskier's recital, which was recorded recently in a WLW studio, is declared by station officials to be one of the most thrilling war stories ever carried on the station.

IMMUNIZATION AND PRE SCHOOL CLINICS IN BURLINGTON AND HEBRON

Dr. A. M. Yelton and Dr. S. B. Nunnally will conduct pre-school and immunization clinics in Burlington and Hebron this week. Hebron, Thursday, April 27 at 2 P. M.; Burlington, Friday at 10:30 A. M. Now is the time to begin getting children who enter school for the first time next year in good physical condition.

There will be immunization for smallpox and diphtheria. An attempt has been made to get a written notice to parents, but if you have a child to come bring him in, whether you receive a notice or not.

It is more important for babies to be immunized against diphtheria than older children, because they are more susceptible and more apt to take the disease.

If you have a child between six months and six years bring him as well as the child to enter school to the clinic.

Walton To Have Weekly Stock Yard Sales in Near Future

WASTE PAPER COLLECTION

The waste paper will be collected by the Salvage Committee on May 2nd.

Be sure to TIE your bundles securely. Newspapers together and magazines together and have them on the sidewalk in front of your home. This is urgently needed. "Let no one destroy the staff we employ to pack the essentials of war in. You help us the foe with scrap paper, so it is essential to turn in more and more paper." Don't forget the date, May 2nd. Have your bundles tied and in front of your home by 8 A. M.

Capt. C. L. Baker Home After Two Years Overseas

Capt. C. L. Baker and family arrived in Walton recently for a short visit with Capt. Baker's mother, Mrs. Thomas Percival and family, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Neil, after two years of active service overseas.

Capt. Baker enlisted in the Medical Corps of the Army May 18, 1942, and after being stationed at Camp Stewart, Ga., with the Anti-Aircraft, for about three months, was sent overseas. He spent two months in England and Scotland, going on to North Africa. He landed near Oran on Nov. 8, 1942, the day of the attack. Later he was moved near Tunis where he remained until the close of the campaign. In August, 1943 he went to Sicily, where he saw action, remaining until the surrender of Sicily.

He was moved to Sardinia in December, 1943, where he remained until his departure for the States.

Capt. Baker will remain 21 days with his wife and their two young sons, Johnnie and Bobby, at their home in Criderville, after which he will be stationed somewhere in this country for an indefinite period.

A graduate of the Walton High School in the class of 1925, Capt. Baker entered Kentucky Wesleyan College, where he received his pre-medical work. He then entered the College of Medicine at the University of Cincinnati, being graduated from that institution in 1932. He later interned at General Hospital, Cincinnati, and Graceland Hospital, Valhalla, N. Y. Following his marriage to Miss Gladys Withy, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., he resided in Criderville, O., where he built up an extensive medical practice.

Walton will have a stock yards sale every week in the near future according to the officials of the newly organized Walton Live Stock Company.

The members of the company are Dr. H. F. Mann, Otis Readnor, Ben Doan, Albert Johnson, Frank Cook and Boyd Elliott.

The stock yards will be on the grounds formerly owned by the C. C. Camp. Work has already been started on the building and the company expects to be ready to handle all kinds of stock some time next month.

There will be one large building, about 116 feet long by 79 feet wide, with a smaller 50x50 building, where the scales will be located.

The company plans to sell livestock of all kinds, farming implements, supplies and anything that the farmer has to buy or sell. Harry Johnson will be the auctioneer.

Several well-known buyers in this section of the state will be represented at the sales.

WALTON TO STAY ON OLD TIME FOR THE PRESENT

The City Council have not as yet officially voted on the changing of time in Walton the first of May, but from talking to several members, they state that for the present THE TIME WILL REMAIN THE SAME. The Council will meet this Friday night and the matter will be voted on officially.

All the churches will remain on the OLD TIME, as long as the town remain thus.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to take this means to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy during the hour of sorrow of the loss of our little boy, Joseph.

We also want to thank Chambers and Grubbs for the efficient manner in which they conducted the services, and Father Jobst for his consoling words.

Martin Code and family.

Market Specialist Address Growers

"The 1944 Market Outlook for Wool and Lamb" will be discussed by G. P. Sommers, Market Specialist from the College, in a meeting at Burlington on Court-day, Monday, May 1st, at 1:30 P. M., according to H. E. White, president of the County Wool Pool.

Growers are all interested both in the price and how the local pool will handle the 1944 clip. The clip will have to be sold both according to price ceiling and government purchase regulations. The date for offering the 1944 Clip for sale will also be set Monday. All wool growers are urged to attend the meeting.

Commencement Starts at New Haven April 30th

On Sunday evening April 30th, Rev. Milton Wilmesher, pastor of the Union and Richmond Presbyterian Church, will deliver the Baccalaureate address to the Senior Class. The Senior Class will present their class night program, Wednesday evening May 3.

Dr. Henry Sheerwood of the University of Kentucky, Lexington, will bring the Commencement Address, Thursday May 4. Dr. Sheerwood is a noted author, scholar, political scientist and recognized public speaker.

All of these programs will be held at 8 P. M. in the High School Auditorium.

PURCHASES NEW LIME SPREADING EQUIPMENT

Val B. Dolwick, Burlington, R. 1 has recently purchased a new truck bed lime spreader with which he hopes to serve a part of Boone County's annual lime needs.

There are at the present time four agricultural limestone dealers in the county, according to the County Agent's office. They are Dance Bros., Walton, Vernon Masters and William Lose of Constance, Val B. Dolwick of Burlington and Gaines Aylor and Stanley Graves of Hebron. It is hoped that additional dealers can be secured as there is a great shortage of available agriculture limestone. There is practically no commercial crushing in the county and the supply must be shipped in by rail or truck.

Prices in car load lots can be secured for farmers who may wish to make cooperative orders.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Wilson of R 1 Walton visited their grandmother at Palmouth Sunday.

Miss Goldie Robbins of our Ration Board spent the weekend at her home near Hopeful Church.

IN MECHANIZED CALVARY

April 16, 1944

Dear Editor: Just a few lines this beautiful Sunday morn'g to say hello. I don't exactly know who the editor is, since I left, but I wish you success.

This leaves me fine and I like the Mechanized Calvary. It's a swell life although they do throw the stuff at you so fast you don't know what's going on and busy most of the time.

I wish you would do me a favor and put the following in the paper.

To my many friends back in Walton and Boone County I say hello. To my many friends in the service I send greetings and may God bless you wherever you are.

This is the only way I have to communicate with my friends as I don't have time to write much and I sure would appreciate it very much if you would put the above paragraph in the paper.

I received the Advertiser yesterday (Saturday) April 13 and sure enjoyed it.

Hope to see you in about twelve weeks.

A Trooper,
Pvt. Edward L. Pennington.

SOMEWHERE IN IRELAND

The following is an excerpt from a letter of George Powers to the secretary-treasurer of the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association on February 20, 1944.

"Dear Mr. Taylor: I have had your letter for nearly three weeks now, but I haven't had much opportunity to write. I have had a slight touch of 'flu' but I am feeling much better now."

I have been on a furlough of about two weeks and visited London, Stratford-on-Avon, and some English friends in Chester. This was my first trip to London and it was well worth the expense. I spent only two days there so I didn't have much time to see any one place. I did visit Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral. They are both interesting and beautiful. I was also on Piccadilly, Trafalgar Square, the Victoria Monument, Big Ben Houses of Parliament, Buckingham Palace, 10 Downing Street, Fleet Street, home of the newspapers; London Bridge, Waterloo Bridge, Tower of London and several other places. I really saw a lot in a short time."

"I enjoyed your last letter very much. It contained so much interesting news about the office and people out at home, and it was quite busy with all the extra work you are doing to help win the war. You do not have to be in the army to do a big share in winning this war. Being in the army certainly is no picnic and the life is really hard. You cannot realize how much different your life is until you experience army life."

"We have quit a job to do over here now and it is keeping us rather busy. That is the way we want it though as the upmost thought in our minds is to get home as soon as possible. Most of the men coming overseas now are married and they are more anxious to get home than some of the others."

"Do not be too worried about getting into the army, as it takes a lot of people out of the army to keep things going at home, and to keep everything as much like it was as is possible so that when we come back there won't be too big a change."

"If the civilians can keep the home front going, so that when the armed forces do get home there will be a place for us and that after a little adjustment we can fit in and not feel too lost, they will have done a good job. All of us over here really appreciate now what a grand country we live in, there is no place like the U. S. A., the people are the finest, the country is the prettiest, just everything about it is the best."

"GEORGE"

Pvt. Gene Stone, who has been sending his furlough here with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Stone and family, left Monday for Camp Meade, Maryland.

Pvt. Ward Rice of Ft. Thomas was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stephenson and son Sunday.

Indian BE

by HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

W.M. RELEASE

LEW BURNETT is trail boss of the Cheyenne herd, which is being driven from Texas to the Indian agent at Ogalala. The year is 1871. TOM ARNOLD, owner, has been killed in a stampede. His wife, Lillian, is with him. She is the only woman in the herd. She is the only woman in the herd. She is the only woman in the herd.

CHAPTER XV

"Willy," Lew said, "I've got to know." He crowded up close. "There's the trail, why don't we follow it? Where you going now?" "Same place they are," Willy trudged on. In a moment he said, "By different ways." He pointed at the Wichita slope and turned his head around. "Here now." A dry canyon had opened. He turned up its narrow groove.

A deeper grayness filled the narrow canyon swiftly. Still ahead of him, old Willy's thin figure trudged on unburied.

When he halted it was with a sudden warning gesture, turning and calling his mouth. Lew moved on. He had come to a low divide at the top of the canyon. A little slope went gently down toward a big meadow that was lighter than the gray in the dark basin of trees. They were not more than fifty yards from the first of many Indian camps.

Their feet rimmed the meadow halfway around. But all of those in the further darkness seemed deserted except for women and children. Only this one close below them were men. Suddenly he gripped old Willy's arm.

"Like I thought," Willy whispered. "This camp is Crazy Bear's. It's where he's bringing her back."

A wild procession of bucks moved into the firelight. Joy walked in front of Crazy Bear who led the line. Her arms were down stiffly at her sides; her back was straight; he knew the distance that blessed in her eyes. Near the fire Crazy Bear reached out and touched her. She struck his hand away. Then a swarm of women crowded in behind them, filling the air with an angry talk.

Quietly old Willy said, "Let's work down."

The oak trunks sheltered them. They worked into the blackness of one of the lodges and came in behind its cone shape.

Around Crazy Bear the squaws' high-noted talk was getting wild. There was one, Crazy Bear's wife, most likely, standing close to him and screaming to get her in.

It was this one who suddenly turned on Joy and slapped her across the face. The girl reeled. The squaw caught her by the arm and held her hard into the doorway of lodge. At the same time Crazy Bear made a grab for the big woman and pulled her back. It was getting to be a bang-up family fight.

"Willy!" Lew touched the old man's side. Beneath the tepee next to the one in front of them he could see Joy crouched again, the rolled-up skirt. Willy nodded. He had rose and then bent down. "When you hear a cat cry and the horses running you go in. Head back the way we came." He crept off silently.

Lew waited, his legs drawn up beneath him, his boot toes pressed hard against the ground. He was a spring ready to rebound. Old Willy must have known where the horses were kept, and they must have been left standing in a bunch. For his wait seemed only a moment when a wild scream came out toward the meadow.

All the women suddenly shut their mouths. The bucks stood rooted. There was that instant of dead hush; and then the kick and thud of frightened animals broke it. A rattle of nostrils and a drumming rattle of hooves were yelling again, a different kind of a yell, as they swarmed after the women who had bolted into the dark to stop their herd. He could see only the children left. His long legs drove him in a fast dive toward the tepee's rolled-up skirt.

He spoke her name quickly. "Joy!" he said, "this way!" She jerked around on her hands and knees. The firelight showed his face. The willow poles were close together. He had to break one with a shove of his arms to get her out. It went off like a pistol shot, and a little boy saw him and raised his cry. But he had pulled her through the opening; he was lifting her up and pushing her on. "Straight back!" he said. "Run!"

The women had seen him now. They screamed. He didn't see the old buck until it was like a long black shadow leaping at him from the tepee's side. He ran to the right, fast and rammed it forward and struck the Indian in the loins. The figure doubled over on top of him, falling. He rolled free and ran with a horrible stench in his face. Out in the dark, he had to call her name again to find her. She hadn't known which way to go. Then he hit her by one arm and was running with her up the gentle slope. Behind them the camp's noise was like a stirred-up nest of jays. But the horses were more important than anything else to an Indian, and old Willy must have done a good stampeding job.

Over the low divide he dropped to a walk and went to the way to keep from giving his buckskin a fright. Once he heard it snort ahead of him in the dark.

They hadn't spoken. In the dark he could see only the set mark of her face. It was hard to tell what these hours had done. But she wouldn't break. Then the buckskin's vague shape moved and he said quietly, "Easy, boy." The moving stopped. He put his hands under her arms and forked her into the saddle. When he lifted the reins the pony jumped. He brought it head all the way around, grabbed the horn and swung up behind the candle. Then he let the little animal go.

After the canyon's first little dip for a mile or so there was nothing in the absolute dark to lead him and the route himself back through the maze of forest. Yet he had confidence in the pony.

Lew pressed his arms together. "All right, Joy!" Her answer was faint. "I'm all right."

He did not ask again; but traveling on for better than an hour, he could feel the sag of her body, a heaviness leaning back against him.

his trickery unknown to them. He had met, instead of Willy, Joe Wheat and the cavalry troop under young Lieutenant Eaton riding in an all-night search.

It was clear enough then why the boyish lieutenant offered to escort them on north. There were few women of Joy's kind in his frontier life. For six days he rode beside her wagon seat and paid his gallant attention to her in the night camps. But on the banks of the Canadian he gave it up and turned east with his men toward Fort Reno.

Now the Indian trouble was more than a week behind the Cross T herd, and except for one thing only a loss of two hundred cattle had resulted from that bad time. The one boldness was in Clay Manning.

Watching Clay this week, puzzled. Lew remembered how the big blond stared at them the morning they came back—one long look, turning away afterward without a word even to Joy. He had thought it was only Clay's jealous temper. But it was more than that. For a moment, hot jealousy could not go on eating a man day after day, turning him, as Clay had turned, neither sullen nor violent, but aloof and quiet almost to being docile. It was a thing hard to understand in his loud and full-blooded nature. In the night camps during the short rest hour after supper he sat alone with his huge shape hunched, his blond head propped on a doubled fist like a man lost in deep thinking, and Clay had never been a thoughtful man. As the herd rolled northward across a well-watered country, growing fat on the headed grass and easily handled, the men could leave along in groups, talking away the hours. Yet he saw Clay riding an isolated wary position, holding apart now even from Steve.

He knew he was not the only one watching him, puzzled. But he heard no talk until, drifting along in front of the point late one afternoon, Quarternight brought up.

"Something," the old man offered, "has made a steer out of him. He used to be a bull."

"More than that, John," he said. "He looks more like something's cut his mind."

Quarternight nodded. "Well, sure. You know there's some men should never get a good look at themselves. They'd better stay blind. Didn't you ever notice," he asked, "how a man that runs the biggest bluff folds up mighty small when someone calls his hand?"

"You think Clay's had his hand called then?"

"He did," Quarternight said. "Twice. He lost his head there among the Indians. It could have happened to any man. You get a split second of time and you do the wrong thing. But we all saw it and Clay knows we did. He could have grabbed Joy from her wagon. Instead he charges the horses and then you're the one who makes the rescue. His sort can't stand that."

"Then there's the will Tom left," Quarternight went on. "Clay's our foreman, and yet that will showed the old man didn't trust him any. With it brought right out in the open like that he isn't much of a leader. I hate to see it. As long as a man blows around big and loud you can about tell what he'll do. But let him turn inside himself and you never can."

"Well, sure," Lew said. "I guess you're right. Still he felt it was only half the answer. Clay's conceal could have helped up again."

Whatever Joy might be feeling about this he had little chance to know. For in these long, steady days of the year he was keeping himself and his men in their usual life for fifteen hours without a stop. They ate at night with their beds rolled open and dropped asleep too bone-tired to think.

He thought it couldn't last. But down after dawn broke clear and untroubled. Rivers were down to wading water; they were alone far west of the trail in virgin land. On the Fourth of July they crossed the Cimarron and entered the state of Kansas. . . . and that meant Dodge. It was a high anticipation to buck back up through the endless hours.

If there had been any sign of what was brewing in Clay Manning's head before they reached the Mulberry he missed it, seeing him so little these days and not at all at night, when the first guard was already out before he came into camp himself.

An extra long drive brought them to Mulberry Creek after dark, angling in from the southwest and converging now upon the main trail. Off away during the afternoon he had seen the dust clouds layered before advancing columns. It had set him to figuring. The Open A could be among those outfits. Perhaps the Cheyennes were attacked with two hundred head of Cross T beef; or half a dozen herds could have joined up and forced their way through the Nations. He would know tomorrow. This was the last camp south of Dodge.

Even as he rode for a little while he felt the long hours that night he could see the lights of the town glowing through the darkness across fifteen miles of level plain. While southeast during the afternoon he had seen the dust clouds layered before advancing columns. It had set him to figuring. The Open A could be among those outfits. WASHINGTON, D. C.

There are many signs that up-to-date small towns in most parts of the United States will experience expansion that spells prosperity after the war.

It was clear enough then why the boyish lieutenant offered to escort them on north. There were few women of Joy's kind in his frontier life. Quarternight nodded. "Well, sure. You know there's some men should never get a good look at themselves. They'd better stay blind. Didn't you ever notice," he asked, "how a man that runs the biggest bluff folds up mighty small when someone calls his hand?"

"You think Clay's had his hand called then?"

"He did," Quarternight said. "Twice. He lost his head there among the Indians. It could have happened to any man. You get a split second of time and you do the wrong thing. But we all saw it and Clay knows we did. He could have grabbed Joy from her wagon. Instead he charges the horses and then you're the one who makes the rescue. His sort can't stand that."

"Then there's the will Tom left," Quarternight went on. "Clay's our foreman, and yet that will showed the old man didn't trust him any. With it brought right out in the open like that he isn't much of a leader. I hate to see it. As long as a man blows around big and loud you can about tell what he'll do. But let him turn inside himself and you never can."

"Well, sure," Lew said. "I guess you're right. Still he felt it was only half the answer. Clay's conceal could have helped up again."

Whatever Joy might be feeling about this he had little chance to know. For in these long, steady days of the year he was keeping himself and his men in their usual life for fifteen hours without a stop. They ate at night with their beds rolled open and dropped asleep too bone-tired to think.

He thought it couldn't last. But down after dawn broke clear and untroubled. Rivers were down to wading water; they were alone far west of the trail in virgin land. On the Fourth of July they crossed the Cimarron and entered the state of Kansas. . . . and that meant Dodge. It was a high anticipation to buck back up through the endless hours.

If there had been any sign of what was brewing in Clay Manning's head before they reached the Mulberry he missed it, seeing him so little these days and not at all at night, when the first guard was already out before he came into camp himself.

An extra long drive brought them to Mulberry Creek after dark, angling in from the southwest and converging now upon the main trail. Off away during the afternoon he had seen the dust clouds layered before advancing columns. It had set him to figuring. The Open A could be among those outfits. Perhaps the Cheyennes were attacked with two hundred head of Cross T beef; or half a dozen herds could have joined up and forced their way through the Nations. He would know tomorrow. This was the last camp south of Dodge.

Even as he rode for a little while he felt the long hours that night he could see the lights of the town glowing through the darkness across fifteen miles of level plain. While southeast during the afternoon he had seen the dust clouds layered before advancing columns. It had set him to figuring. The Open A could be among those outfits. ## BEAVER LICK

Sam Sleet is much better but will not be able to leave the hospital for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Atch of near Verona.

Mrs. Sara Nell Sleet and daughters of Covington visited Mr. and Mrs. Howe Clegg Sunday. Funeral services were held at Hughes Chapel Monday afternoon for John Dennis of Covington, who died at St. Elizabeth Hospital Thursday. Mr. Dennis, a retired farmer, lived in this neighborhood for many years and was a member of Hughes Chapel. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Marie Bush and Mrs. Emma Threlkeld and one son, John Dennis. After services conducted by Rev. Godbey, the body was laid to rest by the side of his wife who died in November. Allison and Rose were in charge of the arrangements.

The New Haven Homemakers met with Mrs. Ben Bedinger last Tuesday and a very interesting meeting was held. The meeting was conducted by the President Mrs. Harry Moore. The program was given by Miss Gillespie. The citizenship chairman, Mrs. Katherine Fagan, the Exterior Beautification chairman, Mrs. Kittie Taylor and the 4-H chairman, Mrs. Emily Clegg each gave interesting reports on their work. At noon a delicious lunch consisting of Green Beans O'Brien, Vegetable Salad, Rhubarb, Pickles, Bread, Butter, Cookies, Fruit Punch and Coffee was served and was enjoyed by all. A great deal of work was done on the Afghan for the soldiers hospital. Our next meeting will be held at Mrs. Cloyd Johnson's, May 16. Present at the meeting last Tuesday were Mrs. Roy Butler, Mrs. Barnard Brink, Mrs. John L. Fagan and daughter Jane, Mrs. Gratter, Mrs. Stanley Ransom, Mrs. Kittie Taylor, Mrs. Jack Clegg, Miss Mary Hood Gillespie, Mrs. Harry Moore and the hostess Mrs. Bedinger.

UNION

Mr. and Mrs. Lora Mullins had as their guests last Wednesday, her brother Mr. Fred Eckler and family of Cynthia.

Mr. and Mrs. John Masters and daughter Crystal attended K. E. A. at Lexington last Thursday and Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gatewood of Covington were Sunday guests of Mrs. C. A. Sheets of Mt. Zion Road.

Mrs. J. T. Bristow and family had as their weekend guests her sisters Misses Eugenia and Maryetta Riley of Lexington, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Hedges of Rice Pike had as guests on Sunday the following relatives, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Doane and children Nell, Jean and Raymond, Mr. Harlin Doane, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Fisk and children Francis, Thelma and Billy, Mr. and Mrs. John Fouts and children Wanda, Linda, Norma and Viola Sue of Cincinnati. This occasion was in honor of Mrs. Ruby Doane Fisk birthday, and all left at a late hour, wishing Mrs. Fisk many more happy birthdays.

Mrs. Everett Robinson is still suffering from a severely sprained left foot she received when she fell at her home some weeks ago. The kitchen shower endangered Mr. and Mrs. Lora Mullins last Wednesday afternoon by several friends and the local W. M. U. was highlighted by a poem by our beloved Mrs. N. B. Bristow, which was read by Mrs. Louise Newman, as follows:

Pots and pans and baking glass,
Now here's your kitchen shower at last
Now roast and fry and bake and stew

Farmers: Help Prevent Inflation

by Asher Hobson
Chairman, Dept. of Agricultural Economics
University of Wisconsin

FARMERS remember the "Buck Shirt" era of the last war. That era was marked by 75 cent butterfat, 20 dollar hogs, and 100, 200 and in some states 300 dollars an acre for farm land. Farmers also remember the "no shirt" era of the Thirties—25 cent butterfat, 5 dollar hogs, and land so low the mortgage took it. One way of keeping one's shirt after this war is not to buy too many silk shirts now, so to speak.

There is an old saying to the effect that if you sleep on the floor never falls out of bed. None of us want to sleep on the floor, but we could see it that our beds are not so high as to cause serious injury in case of a fall. Unduly high prices are likely to be followed by unduly low prices. That is one reason why most people in responsible walks of life appreciate the necessity of acting now to prevent inflation. Farmers are equally concerned.

Inflation is another term for unhealthily high prices. Inflation has a younger brother. He is a fellow named deflation. He has a habit of following his brother inflation. Deflation often means serious unemployment, lower property values, more tax delinquency, and mounting foreclosures. Add these together and the human farm relief. That is not the answer farmers want.

Farmers can well afford to take steps now in an attempt to avoid that sort of a situation. But inflation is not easy to hold back until it arrives. One cannot build a cyclone cellar after the old clouds begin to roll. Then one has time only to grab the baby and run with no place to go. Something like that is apt to happen when inflation strikes. The best way to handle inflation is to prevent its striking.

What can farmers do? They can help keep prices from getting out of hand by helping to hold prices down now. If prices are to be held in line, the pressure under which must be removed. The Government cannot do this job alone. There are no anti-inflation white rabbits in the magician's hat. Only the concerted efforts of you and me can turn the trick.

The forces causing prices to go up may be summarized in the statement that there is more money available for spending than there are goods and services to be bought. This is another way of saying that the demand for goods and services exceeds the available supply. Let us be specific. At the end of 1943 it was estimated that there were 42 billion dollars of spendable income in this country in excess of goods and services to be bought at the then existing prices. A year earlier the excess was 23 billion dollars. If prices are to be held in line this excess purchasing power must be brought down to the level of the supply of goods and services, or the supply of goods and services must be boosted in keeping with purchasing power.

Farmers are doing their utmost to increase the supply of agricultural products. In this way they are helping to prevent inflation. The other way in which they may help is to buy less. In general there are two ways of reducing consumer purchasing power. They are:

Heavier taxes
Voluntary savings

The greater the voluntary savings the less the need for more taxes. Let us do it the voluntary way by buying more WAR BONDS and holding those Bonds until manpower, plant capacity, and raw materials are available for increasing the supply of consumer goods. Spending then will be less likely to boost prices through the ceiling. Saving has always been an outstanding farmer trait. It is now a patriotic duty.

STAFFORDSBURG

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Hanna and son Jimmie were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Hanna.

A large number of relatives and friends attended funeral services for Mr. Geo. Binder at Swindlers funeral home at Independence on Wednesday morning. Many beautiful flowers attested the love and respect accorded him. A good neighbor, kind friend and loving father, he will long be remembered in this community. Rev. Spinnery delivered the impressive message.

Mrs. Geo. Klim entertained the April meeting of the homemakers club. Several members who had not been to meeting for some time were gladly welcomed back. Mrs. J. A. Keeney gave the citizenship talk on "A Dr. on Burma border, stressing the fact that we are citizens of the world and should know the lives and needs of all of its people. Since modern transportation and communication have made the world a neighborhood we can no longer live in ignorance and isolation. Those things of which we have abundance are badly needed in other places and many of our daily needs are found in far corners of the earth, so it behooves us to be good neighbors not alone in our hemisphere but "wherever the sun, doth his successive journeys run." Miss Byerly and Mrs. Denver Binder put on very effectively the lesson for the month by making a dress form for Mrs. Klim. Mrs. Della Williams made and donated thru the club an Afghan for the wounded soldiers. Mrs. Faulkner displayed two very attractive dresses made from feed sacks, showing much ingenuity in utilizing what is at hand. The attractive luncheon served by the hostess added much to the enjoyment of the day. 90 pounds of fats were reported as turned in. Among those present were Zelma Byerly, Cleora Binder, Mable Vandandigham, Elsie Menninger, Inez Beall, Alice Riggs, Stella Richardson, Myrtle Gadker, Della Williams, Florence Stem, Lizzie Faulkner, Edith Coleman and Mary Edith, Opal Shaw and Randall Binder. As guests we were glad to have Mrs. Robert Hawkins and Miss Ruth Schmidt.

Every family with a plot of ground can help in this gigantic food program by growing a Victory garden which will provide a generous supply of fresh, vitamin-rich foods for summer use, and an ample supply to can or store. That time is precious in the food program was emphasized in the statement.

Specialized trained men and women, working on farm and home agencies, have been appointed by the college to help bring about greater food production in Kentucky. They will assist with dairy products, meats, poultry, grain and hay crops, as well as gardens. So that no food will be wasted, emergency food assistants will hold canning clinics, group demonstrations, and personal conferences to promote the best methods of canning, storing, dehydrating and freezing of food for later use.

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

We are very sorry to learn of Mrs. Edgar Riggs, being a patient at Booth Hospital. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. L. N. Hoffman, is ill.

We are having plenty of rain, which the farmers have been badly needing, we also need more sunshine.

Mrs. and Mrs. Lybrian Richardson, and family spent the day Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Richardson and daughter Reva.

Miss Hope Sweeney, visited Miss Helen Richardson Saturday night.

Mrs. Earl Hanna spent Friday with her son Harley and family of Latonia.

Mrs. Edith Baker spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Riley, and daughter visited Sunday with Mr. Riley's father Mr. Charles Riley of Richardson Pike.

Come to church at Staffordsburg Sunday morning and evening all are welcome. Rev. Cardwell is the pastor.

BORDEAUX CONTROLS

DISEASE OF GRAPES

How spraying with Bordeaux controls black rot of grapes is described in a new leaflet called "Grapes for the Home," published by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics, and available at offices of county agents and home demonstration agents. Where spraying is done, grapes produce well in Kentucky, and their growing for family use is recommended.

HOG GAINS REVEAL

VALUE OF TANKAGE

Results of a feeding test at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station answer questions raised by farmers about the value of tankage for hogs after they reach 100 pounds in weight.

Three lots of 70 pound pigs were fed until they reached an average weight of 200 pounds.

One lot was self-fed corn, tankage and minerals, until they weighed an average of 200 pounds.

The second lot received the same ration until the pigs weighed 150 pounds, when no more tankage was fed.

The third lot received the same ration as the first lot until the pigs weighed an average of 100 pounds, and then were allowed to produce their next 100 pounds without tankage.

- Never immerse your iron in water. It may cause a "short" in heating elements.
- Don't iron over zippers, buckles or other hard articles. It scratches sole plate.
- Don't let cord touch hot iron or rub continuously on edge of ironing board.
- Always connect iron by inserting iron plug first; then outlet plug. Reverse procedure to disconnect.
- Don't yank cord loose from outlet. Grasp plug in fingers.
- Be pure iron is perfectly cold before putting it away.
- To cure a sticky iron, heat it and rub it over a waxed bread wrapper that has been sprinkled with salt. This also waxes sole plate.

No one can say for sure when irons will again be available in quantity, so take good care of the one you have. Make it last!

Pigs in Lot 2, which produced their last 50 pounds without tankage, required 19 percent more total feed and gained only 79 percent as fast as did the pigs in Lot 1 while making their last 50 pounds of gain. Each pound of tankage fed to Lot 1 pigs during this period saved 2.6 pounds of corn.

Pigs in Lot 3, which produced their last 100 pounds without the benefit of tankage, used 23 percent more feed per pound of gain, and gained only 63 percent as fast as did pigs in Lot 1 while they were making their last 100 pounds of gain. Each pound of tankage fed these pigs during the above period saved 2.6 pounds of corn.

OUR FARM NEWS

TIME OF YEAR TO WATCH FOR BLOAT OF CATTLE, SHEEP

Bloat of cattle and sheep, a matter of concern among stock raisers in the spring, occurs mostly when animals graze on pastures having a heavy stand of alfalfa or clover, particularly white clover, says Dr. W. W. Dimock of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

Where other grasses make up half or more of the pastures, there is less danger of bloat. Also, more alfalfa or clover are less likely to cause bloat. They are considered reasonably safe to graze after reaching the late bloom and early seed stage.

White clover is considered especially dangerous. Numerous cases of bloat occurred in 1943, which was one of the years when clover seasons in many years. Bloat may be expected where white clover makes up most of the pasture.

Feeding hay at night or in the morning before the stock is put on pasture tends to prevent bloat, Dr. Dimock points out. However, it often is difficult to get cattle or sheep to eat sufficient quantity to be effective after they have tasted grass in the spring. Nevertheless, it is considered good practice to keep it before them in the hope that they will eat enough to reduce the incident of highly acute fatal cases of bloat.

Some farmers believe that cattle bloat when they run out day and night. When kept in at night, they tend to gorge themselves when turned out in the morning. This may be especially true when the pasture is lush and where there is a heavy dew or it rains. As a general proposition, Dr. Dimock says pastures containing a high percentage of succulent alfalfa or red or white clover should not be pastured in spring, unless other materials are fed at the same time. Hold the cattle on short bluegrass pasture until the legumes or white clover pasture are well matured or are in the seed stage. They may not gain so rapidly on the short pasture; as one man who followed this practice remarked, "Our cattle may not be gaining as rapidly as some, but we still have all we started with." They will rapidly make up the loss in gain when put on the fresh pasture after the grasses are mature and safe for them to graze.

ON KENTUCKY FARMS

Dairymen in Carter county report increases in milk production since soybean meal has been added to their home grown grains.

In Boone county, tobacco growers have increased their planting of Ky. 41A from one ounce in 1943 to 140 ounces this year.

Farm Bureau members in Webster county purchased a total of $69,035 worth of war bonds in the Fourth War Loan drive.

In Madison county, 4-H club members growing tobacco were given certified No. 16 tobacco seed by Judge W. J. Baxter.

Chick orders have reached an all-time high in Montgomery county, 18 new electric brooders being in operation.

Irvine Steger is one of many farmers in Grant county to use diversion ditches as a means of controlling erosion.

Members of five homemakers' clubs in Caldwell county made 362 garments, remodeled 212, made from sacks 231, and altered 90 ready-made garments.

A flock of 225 hens owned by Joel Spencer of Letcher county laid 1,668 dozen eggs in four months by earning $392 above feed costs.

About 800 acres of tomatoes for canning were grown in Trimble county in 1943; it is expected the acreage will be increased this year.

Farmers in Fleming county are showing considerable interest in Brown Swiss cattle, three bulls having been brought into the county last month.

Seventy-five homemakers' club members in Trigg county consumed meat during the winter months by canning 2,293 quarts. They assisted others in canning 1,561 quarts.

Hot lunches and a newly decorated lunch room contributed to better work being done by the pupils in the Rich Pond School, Kentucky county.

It is estimated that 25,000 plants of the Tennessee Shipper variety of strawberries will be set out in Marshall county this year.

In Henry county, 260 farmers plan to use from one to two thousand pounds of fertilizer on each acre of tobacco, plus 10 to 15 tons of manure.

BOWEL CLEANING POWER OF ERB-HELP MEDICINE

One man recently took ERB-HELP three days and said afterward that he never would have believed his body contained so much filthy substance. He says his stomach, intestines, bowels and whole system were so thoroughly cleaned that his constant headaches came to an end, several pimply skin eruptions on his face dried up overnight, and even the rheumatic pains in his knees disappeared. At present he is an altogether different man feeling fine in every way.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

CAMPAIGN PLANS TO MAKE BETTER JOB OF RAISING LATE LAMBS

In a state-wide campaign to encourage better finishing of late lambs in Kentucky, April 24 to 25 inclusive, will be designated "Phenothiazine Week." It is announced by Richard C. Miller of the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Declaring the late-lamb problem a menace to Kentucky's reputation as a lamb-producing area, Miller said "the proper use of phenothiazine in a well-rounded program has made possible the saving to sheep men of more than a million dollars a year, and for the war effort millions of pounds of lamb and large quantities of surgical sutures and other essential by-products which otherwise would be lost."

"It is believed that at least a third of all sheep in Kentucky are now well started on the phenothiazine program, and it is hoped that by May the use of this drug in a good year-around management program will be a generally established practice."

One feature of Phenothiazine Week will be a meeting of sheep raisers at Lexington April 24, followed by a banquet. Farmers who have had wide experience with phenothiazine and several prominent out-of-the-state authorities will speak.

"It is hoped during the week to intensify the phenothiazine program in every sheep-producing county in Kentucky," Miller continued. "All agencies in any way concerned with sheep production are invited to have a part in this program. We can solve the late-lamb problem if we really go after it, and make possible a far greater sheep industry in Kentucky in the future."

GARDENERS SHOULD CONSIDER SOYBEAN

One way a gardener can make his time and labor count the most is to plant vegetables which are high in food value. Soybeans are tops in this regard compared to other beans and peas, note nutritionists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Recent scientific tests show soybeans to be twice as rich in protein as green peas or lima beans, seven times as rich in fat as lima beans, and 11 times as rich as green peas. Soybeans are delicious when eaten green, but also may be prepared as other dried beans.

An advantage is that the Mexican bean beetle bothers them only when there are no other beans in the garden.

OUTLINES RATIOS FOR YOUNG CHICKS

A chicken-raising leaflet of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics says to feed chicks as soon as they are put in the brooder. Feed a good chick-starter mash at first for four weeks. See that they have plenty of water. As soon as the chicks get out on grass and into the sunshine, use one of the following methods of feeding until the chicks are 12 weeks old. That is, keep the feed before the chicks all the time, so that they can eat all they want whenever they want it.

1. Self-feed cracked corn or cracked corn and wheat, soybean meal, water and green feed. Add a pound of salt and eight pounds of steamed bonemeal to each 50 pounds of feed.

2. Self-feed commercially prepared supplement (28 to 32 percent protein), grain, water and green feed.

3. Self-feed grower mash, grain water and green feed. From the 12th week until the 26th week, feed growing pullets one of the foregoing three rations, with whole corn instead of cracked corn.

HOGS AND CALF IN HOME MEAT SUPPLY

Three hogs weighing 200 to 250 pounds each and a calf or beef weighing not less than 500 pounds will supply pork and beef for a family of five for a year, says Prof. E. J. Wilford of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. They will provide 250 to 300 pounds of cured hams, shoulders and sides, and a supply of sausage, backbone or loin, and spare ribs for canning. Most of the beef should be canned or put in a cold storage locker.

More than 4,130 quarts of meat, representing thousands of ration points, were canned by Christian county homemakers.

Cassidy county farmers have purchased 1,400 bushels of hybrid seed corn, which it is estimated will increase yields by 100,000 bushels.

THIS WOMAN KNOWS ABOUT FARM LIFE

Mrs. Verell Uterbach of Franklin county, who is working with Home Agent Frances Soper to assist farm and rural people in preserving their own food supply, knows the problems of the farm. Last year, when her husband was away from home on a defense job, Mrs. Uterbach, with the aid of a 70-year old tenant and 15-year old son, farmed 133 acres. There were crops of hay, corn, wheat and tobacco to care for, besides six cows, pigs, chickens, a garden and a strawberry patch to tend. Mrs. Uterbach reports that she spent approximately two-thirds of her time on farm jobs. Then she canned around 400 quarts of food, did the housework, took an active part in her homemakers' club and assisted in demonstrating pressure cooker and hot-water bath canning in different parts of the county. Mrs. Uterbach is a member of the Women's Land Army.

FARM LABOR NOTES

By Rev Will Smith

Several farmers the past week were assisted in securing farm help. Farmers who are badly in need of help should leave their names at the County Agent's office. Occasionally some excellent men are available.

Walter Pennington, Walton, Nathan Brewster, Verona; Melvin Kelley, Burlington; and Roy Kinney of Beavertown, have already expressed their intentions to do custom work in sheep shearing this year. Farmers who must rely on custom shearers should contact their operators early so that they may book their routes. Some of the operators have raised their prices this year.

Incomplete lists of Custom Machinery Operators who will assist farmers in plowing, digging and other work are as follows: Petersburg, Russell Cook, B. C. Stephens and John Burns; Florence, John Burton and Bi-County Farm Bureau Coop Feed Store; Burlington, Mel Kelley, Howard Liser and Buckler Bros.; Walton, Verona and Beaver, Dance Bros.; Harry Moore, Roy Kenney, Albert Parker, Lewis Victor Webster and Harvey Hughes. The farm machinery custom operators list, when complete, will include several other operators. Both operators and farmers who will need custom work done are urged to file their requests.

Anna Lou and Bucky Gross visited their brother and sisters in Cincinnati last weekend.

Word has been received from Holton Carnes who recently left that he is at Camp Gordon, Ga.

NEW IDEAS USEFUL FOR HOMEMAKERS

Here are several housecleaning ideas that are proving useful and time saving to homemakers, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent. Each idea has been tested either by Kentucky College of Agriculture or Home Economics of the United States Dept. of Agriculture.

To remove the gummy accumulation on wood furniture brought on by the use of too much polish, give it a good washing of a mixture of one quart of hot water, three tablespoons linsed oil and one tablespoon of turpentine. Rub the furniture with a soft cloth wrung out of the solution which is best warm, then dry and rub to a polish with another cloth.

Black marks on waxed floors made by wartime rubber heels and soles may be removed with liquid wax, turpentine or cleaning fluid. The grease solvent removes the wax along with the black, so wax should be applied to the floor after removal.

Miss Ida G. Hagman, Home Management Specialist, University of Kentucky, gives the following cleaning soap recipe:—1 quart boiling water, one fourth cup sal soda (washing soda) and one half cake shaved yellow soap. Add soda and soap to boiling water. Remove from heat, stir until dissolved, then cool. Use on painted walls or woodwork with a damp cloth or sponge. Rub continuously, but not too hard, until dirt loosens. Rinse with clear water. Polish with a soft dry cloth. This soap is good for washable painted walls and linoleum.

Now that we have plenty of mud, mud stains are among the most frequent clothes cleaning problems in the spring. Textile experts advise letting the mud dry, then brushing off as much as possible. If the mud is on washable fabric, soak in clear cold water first, then wash with soap and warm water. If the fabric is not washable, sponge with denatured alcohol. On rayon or colored clothes, use very little alcohol,—twice as much water as alcohol. Red mud often contains iron and must be treated like a rust stain with lemon juice and salt, or some other rust remover.

WOULD SAVE CLOVER, ORCHARD GRASS SEED — Farmers in Kentucky who have an opportunity of harvesting a seed crop of orchard grass or red clover should do so wherever practical, suggests the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. The supply of both of these seeds is small and the demand heavy. This has resulted in high prices, and regardless of production this year, it is believed good prices will continue.

Red Clover seeds yields vary from one to four bushels to the acre, as a rule, and prices have been running from $17 to $22 a bushel for good, clean seed. Orchard grass yields eight to 35 bushels of seed to the acre. Prices have been around $3 to $3.50 per 14 pound bushel of clean seed. Orchard grass can be pastured or made into hay after the seed crop has been removed.

Warren county farmers expect to produce more pounds of lamb this year than in 1943, with interest in penicillin increasing. At the Bib Laurel and Cranks community meetings in Harlan county, garden and flower seeds were exchanged, as well as rhubarb and other plants. Farmers in Oldham county have placed orders for 50 tons of ammonium nitrate, most of which will be used on orchard grass fields.

Might Have Been Quite A Bad Fire

Quite a lot of excitement in town last week. Phibbe's house caught fire.

Seemed like everybody turned out to help. But Ed Carey, official 'fire chief' was there first and Jeb Crowell next.

Ed got his 1892 fire engine pumping like mad. Jeb hauled the hose through the kitchen window and before you could say "That Phibbe!", Jeb was peering grinning from ear to ear.

"Fire's out," he said. "The home of the Phibbe's is saved!" "Thanks to you, Jeb," said Ed.

"No sirree, Ed—it's thanks to you and that good old stream of H<sub>2</sub>O!"

"Thanks to cooperation!" bellowed old man Phibbe—and that settled the argument.

Yes, from where I sit, it's folks who cooperate that get things done. Like our Kentucky brewers who are so earnestly cooperating to see that beer, a beverage of moderation, is sold only by decent, law-abiding citizens.

Who Loses if Gremlins paint the postwar railroad picture?

You lose—even in normal times—without efficient railroads. So does "the butcher, baker and candlstick maker," the farmer, merchant, industrialist, and every other person adversely affected by poor transportation service, slack employment, meagre payrolls and slim purchases.Everybody loses during wartime—if the railroads are handicapped. Had railroads and railroad men not been equal to the tremendous tasks the war imposed, freedom itself might have been in greater jeopardy.The Old Reliable L&N, a product of Free Enterprise, privately owned and operated, and directed

EUROPE: Zero-Hour

The world tensed in anticipation of the U. S. and British invasion of western Europe, expected to coincide with other Allied thrusts in the Mediterranean and a great Russian offensive against German lines in eastern Poland.

As the enemy reported on huge concentrations of Allied shipping and naval formations in English waters, neutral sources quoted German strength at 90,000 men in Norway; 180,000 in Finland; 180,000 in the Balkans; 375,000 in Italy; 75,000 along the Mediterranean coast; 450,000 along the Atlantic coast, with 900,000 at strategic points in France, Germany and central Europe and finally 2,625,000 in Russia.

As the zero hour approached for the greatest battle in history, U. S. and British bombers roared over Europe, smashing at concrete and steel defense bunkers, ripping up communication lines over which the enemy might rush troop concentrations and pouring fire on industries supplying the Nazi war machine.

INCOME TAX: Plan Simplification

Of the nation's 50,000,000 taxpayers, 30,000,000 would not be required to file individual returns if congress approves the house ways and means committee's simplification bill, drawn after lively protests over present complicated forms.

Under the committee's bill, a person earning up to $5,000 would have his whole tax deducted under the withholding plan, and he would just have to file a copy of his employer's withholding receipt at the year's end.

To simplify tax rates, the committee's bill calls for abolition of the victory tax and the creation of a normal tax of 3 per cent and a surtax starting at 20 per cent on all income in excess of personal exemptions and a straight 10 per cent credit.

CIVILIAN GOODS: Production Urged

Following congressional pressure applied particularly by Senator Stewart (Tenn.) and Wherry (Neb.), the War Production board withdrew a previous order freezing civilian goods output to first quarter levels.

As a result of WPB's latest action, opportunity should develop for a gradual reconversion to consumer merchandise, particularly for those plants facing expiration of war contracts and shutdowns.

"Military production will not be hurt by a gradual conversion of industry to the manufacture of civilian goods," Senator Wherry said. "There is no reason why flat irons, automobiles, parts, general machinery, radios, alarm clocks and dozens of other urgently needed products cannot be made now."

CORN: U. S. Sole Buyer

To supply processing industries with badly needed supplies of corn, the government froze all farm or elevator sales of the grain in 125 counties in Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana except to U. S. agencies.

At the same time, War Food administration announced that the government would stand all expense of shipping and transporting corn from the farm to the elevators, where sellers would receive the local ceiling price.

Approximately 80,000,000 bushels of corn are needed by the processing industry for making food products and material for fiber board, adhesives, drugs, vitamins, explosives, chemicals, plastics, etc.

PACIFIC: Trap Japs

During 140,000 Japs stood trapped in the South Pacific with the U. S. invasion of Hollandia in north central New Guinea, about 1,400 miles distant from the Douglas MacArthur's coveted goal of the Philippines.

As Doughboys fought inland from Hollandia to take over the airfields which would give them command over shipping lanes supplying enemy troops to the southeast, good word also came from India, where British and native forces stood up against fierce Jap efforts to sever the Bengal-Assam railroad feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Allied units hacking out the Ledo road to China from north Burma.

The 140,000 in Jap troops trapped by the Hollandia invasion stretched all the way from the newly embattled area to the Solomons, with the superior U. S. air and naval forces so far unable to draw out the enemy fleet lurking close to its bases to the west.

FLOOD: Extensive Damage

Town and country alike were inundated as flood waters surged throughout the central Mississippi valley, approaching record peaks at many points, with early counts showing 10 dead and many homeless.

Northernmost danger point was around Beardstown, Ill., where the Flood scene in Illinois.

Illinois river hovered around the 20 foot mark, flooding productive bottom lands.

Between the mouth of the Missouri river and Cairo, Ill., where the mighty Ohio river flows into the Mississippi, high waters lapped at rising levees, and a little farther down St. Louis reported a crest of approximately 35 feet.

Extensive damage was caused in Wichita, Kansas, where the residential district dived in water waist deep. As conditions improved in Kansas, they worsened in neighboring Missouri and Arkansas.

Without a single command, the spokesmen said, the task of coordinating army and navy units and preparing for defense must be left to the President, without any workable machinery to aid him. Economies in securing munitions and other supplies would be affected through a single command, the spokesmen asserted.

WORLD BANK: For Trade Stability

Consultant economists of 30 out of the 34 United Nations were reported to have agreed on the formation of a world bank with a capitalization of 10 billion dollars to promote international business stability in the postwar period.

Functions of the bank in which the U. S. would have a 2 1/2 billion dollar interest, would be to provide member nations with finances for holding up the value of their currencies, preventing any drops that would depress their business activity.

Great Britain with $1,250,000,000 and Russia with $1,000,000,000 would be the two other biggest subscribers to the bank, on whose managing committee of nine, the U. S. would have one vote.

BRITISH TAXES

The British exchequer intends to raise about 12 billion dollars of the annual cost of the war by taxation, with the levy amounting to approximately $300 for every person in the kingdom. The year's expenditure for war will likely be double this amount, or slightly more than last year.

Further increases in the tax on non-essential items are anticipated. The basic rate is now 50 per cent on income and 100 per cent on luxury items.

DRAFT: Depends on Losses

Unless European or Pacific military operations impose a severe strain on manpower, selective service officials expect 1944 draft calls to be met with men under 30, it was revealed.

Induction of younger men, however, may place a heavy strain on industry and agriculture, Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey declared, adding: "Older men, physically unfit for service . . . and women can and must replace these young men at the lathe and on the assembly line." Of monthly requirements for 150,000 men, General Hershey said, about 60,000 can be met from men becoming 18, and the rest must be supplied from the 1,000,000 under 36 now deferred, of whom 800,000 are expected to pass their physicals.

STEEL: Union Grows

Philip Murray's United Steelworkers of America have grown into one of the most powerful labor organizations in the country, with membership of $38,500 and net assets of $3,515,077, including $2,747,519 in cash, according to a semi-annual report of the union.

During the year ended November 30, 1943, the USA signed up 210,875 new members and increased assets by $1,538,177, including $759,313 cash. During the six-month period ending November 30, 1943, USA paid $227,000 to the CIO with which it is affiliated, and $200,000 for the CIO's political action committee. Costs of negotiations and wage scale increases totaled $35,376 and traveling expenses of officials and representatives were $78,161.

SUPREME COURT: Religious Freedom

In a majority decision read by Justice Douglas, the U. S. Supreme court reaffirmed the freedom of religion of worship, asserting no jury had the right to pass on the validity of any doctrine.

"Freedom of thought . . . embraces the right to maintain theories of life and death and of the hereafter which are rank heresy to followers of orthodox faiths," Justice Douglas said. "Men may believe what they cannot prove. They may not be subject to the proof of their religious experiences or beliefs. Religious experiences are as real to a man as life to some may be incomprehensible to others."

"It one could be sent to jail because a jury in a hostile environment found these teachings false, little indeed would be left of religious freedom," the justice said, adding that if the doctrine of the parties involved in the court case were subject to judgment, "then the same can be done with the religious beliefs of other sects."

ARMY: Ask Single Command

In the interests of efficiency, unity of command, economy and elimination of duplications, two war department officers studying reorganization of the services urged the consolidation of the army and navy into a single command instead of separate arms as at present.

However, the spokesmen refused to go as far as Representative Maas (Minn.), who also suggested the adoption of a single uniform for all branches and their functioning as one. Declaring unity of command and economy, the spokesmen said, the separate identities of the services.

Without a single command, the spokesmen said, the task of coordinating army and navy units and preparing for defense must be left to the President, without any workable machinery to aid him. Economies in securing munitions and other supplies would be affected through a single command, the spokesmen asserted.

U. S. Farm Expert Gives Friendly Advice to China

Department of Agriculture Officials Visit Chinese, Suggest Practical Methods Of Increasing Food Production.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Out in Falls Church, Virginia, a little way from Washington, there lives a friend of mine who was brought up on a farm. Last year, some new neighbors moved in next door—city folks who could tell by looking at them, but full of pep and vinegar and very practical. They started out to make a victory garden.

My friend could tell by the way they handled their hoes that before long they'd be asking him for advice.

He's a good neighbor, but he isn't noisy. So he just waited.

Well, it wasn't long before the man next door came up, leaned over the fence, and said: "How is it your garden is coming along so good and mine isn't?"

My friend smiled, and then he pitched in and told him some of the facts of plant life.

It isn't going to benefit my friend even if his neighbor's garden is a record breaker but he's a typical American and he's doing what we all used to do back in the old days when neighbor depended on neighbor—giving a helping hand when it was needed.

Last week, I sat down across the desk from a big black-headed fellow who looks a lot younger than he is in years and wisdom. His name is Dr. Ralph W. Phillips.

When I talked with him, he had just returned from giving a little neighborly advice over the back fence to our Chinese neighbors. He's in charge of genetics investigations for the Department of Agriculture and he was loaned to the State department, along with some 21 other experts, to go over to China (at the invitation of the Chinese) to look around and see what ought to be done to improve their stock.

For you and me and most Americans, even those who don't think about it are just under a cloud that doesn't give milk wouldn't be more of a critter. But believe it or not, one of the results which it is called "China trip" will achieve is to explain to the Chinese why cows have udders.

First-Hand Facts

The Chinese know many things which we don't know, but Phillips has put between the covers of a book now being printed in China, a lot of things that the Chinese know better. He got his facts first hand, traveling over most of the occupied parts of China with the Chinese Minister of Agriculture and a good interpreter, and collected them against his own expert knowledge of animal husbandry. But he said to me, if you know anything about a cow, a sheep or a horse you don't need an interpreter to tell you what's the matter with it.

It was a hot day in Washington when I interviewed Dr. Phillips and he had his coat and vest off. "I'm a shirt-sleeve diplomat," he said to me.

When I learned a little more of the details of his particular job, I realized that it was one in which you had to take off your coat and roll up your sleeves. Among other things, he rode several hundred miles over what the Chinese laughingly call roads, in ancient automobiles, and a good many miles on the back of a very tough Mongolian pony.

This friendly, easy-going shirt-sleeve scientist typifies a new order—he is part of a new, honest effort (as one member of the State department said to me) "to establish a relationship of people to people" rather than a relationship of diplomat to diplomat, or government to government.

Dr. Phillips witnessed the effects of the great migration of the Chinese government followed by its universities, its people, its industries. This great movement, forced by the Japanese occupation, opened up vast territory in western and northwestern China about which very little was known of late years, which the rulers of China heretofore have been very little concerned. For the sake of this discussion, China can be roughly divided into two quite different agricultural domains. In the crowded eastern provinces, small farming and very small farming, indeed, is the chief activity. In the west, there are great grasslands better adapted to the raising of stock.

Animal husbandry in China must meet one immediate problem, and that is, increasing and improving production in the western part of the country and breeding for re-stocking in the areas which will be re-occupied when the Japanese are driven out.

The heavy demands for food by the American military, to say nothing of China's own soldiers, make it necessary for the Chinese to increase food production to the utmost. At present, however, Dr. Phillips reported that except for the famine areas where drought or insects have affected the crops, the Chinese people have more food available than is popularly believed.

But they aren't making the most of their cows and pigs and chickens. As to the Chinese cow, about which Dr. Phillips spoke with great feeling, one of the first things to do is to teach the Chinese peasant that it gives milk and that milk is a pretty good food. He must be taught to improve the breed so that it will give milk. At present, the cow is a beast of burden, a draft animal. However, it isn't even as good a draft animal as it could be. It will not be difficult to improve the breed so that it will be more efficient as a beast of burden and as a milk giver at the same time.

Of course, the Nomadic people who live on the great plains of northern China, who live from their herds, use the milk as food, mostly in the form of cheese. They also store butter. They have the yak and a hybrid animal, a cross between a yak and a cow, which is called a "pian-cow."

The Chinese in China aren't much to crow about either. I take it, from Dr. Phillips' description, if they lay only 50 to 60 eggs a year, nobody complains. There, too, "selecting from selected types that China already has would be a great help."

Dr. Phillips likes the Chinese doc and in spite of personal experience on their back, thinks Mongolians on their back, thinks Mongolians have possibilities. Very good mules are produced by crossing the Mongolian mare and the donkey. But the Mongolian horse is a little, tough-minded, flat-withered, crooked-legged animal which could be greatly improved with an interesting with a good saddle horse strain.

No Ordered Effort

Dr. Phillips had first-hand experience with these little animals whose ancestors were tough enough to carry Genghis Khan across Asia but are too tough to follow the huddle if they get other ideas.

Up until now, there seems to have been no ordered effort by the representatives of any other foreign country to spread the improvement of Chinese livestock. Missionaries here and there have introduced better grades which have had an influence in the immediate vicinity, German missionaries brought in some shorthorn fat pigs. Others introduced good chickens and cows. But these were only a drop in the bucket.

The Chinese Department of Agriculture itself is a new thing and has very little background of training or experience. Perhaps the one most important influence has been the exchange established between Cornell University and the University in Nanking. A number of experts in agriculture have been trained at Cornell and have gone back to China.

Naturally with such a large proportion of the population illiterate, it will be exceedingly difficult to spread the information even when the Chinese leaders themselves are trained.

The present Chinese government, despite the fact that almost every ounce of energy has to be turned toward fighting the war, has shown an interest evidenced by the welcome reception given the various American representatives, and the United States on its side has sought to improve its relations between people and extend its influence by this activity which is a part of the cultural relations program.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Premier Hideki Tojo's government has announced details of a countrywide "vacant lots utilization program" under which the land along railroad lines and highways, as well as other available vacant areas, will be used for growing pumpkins and soybeans to help solve Japan's war food problems. The plan is quite reminiscent of our own victory gardens.

The newly rich oil farmer, unable to write, deposited his first royalty check in the bank and arranged that his signature should be two crosses. Soon a check showed up signed with three crosses and the banker summoned the farmer for an explanation. "Well, my wife is gettin' into society," he explained, "and she thinks I should have a middle name."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BIG LEAGUE PILOT: Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants baseball club, has been accepted by the army. He is 35 and has two children. Ott joined the Giants at 16 and remained with them for 19 years, a league record. He also holds the league home run record of 465 and the first bat hit in 1,600. He is the first big league manager to be drafted.

DRIED EGGS: Profits of the egg drying industry will be somewhat reduced by action of the War Food administration. The WFA will now allow cost of processing and approximately five cents profit per pound of egg powder. Some processors had been buying eggs at considerably below support prices, and in some cases were obtaining an undue large profit.

OUR FARM NEWS . . . . .

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

By Julian M. Dyer, Soil Conservationist, Kenton County Soil Conservation District

EAVES CUTTERS FOR THE RIDGE TOP

Just as we place eaves gutters on our homes and farm buildings to control the roof water, many of the cooperators of the Kenton County Soil Conservation District are constructing diversions, or narrow water channels, near the break of the hills just below the "flat" ridge tops. The diversions catch the ridgetop water just before it plunges down the steeper slopes, with a grade just enough to keep itself cleaned out, but not enough grade to form a gully. The water is thus carried to some well sodded drain or gully, which like a downspout from the eaves gutter, carries the water safely to the lower levels. This of course means a good sod or stony channel is important before a diversion can be safely constructed.

The diversion consists of approximately three furrows turned downhill, with the plowed ridge thus formed built up higher than an ordinary turning plow can build it. The Board of Supervisors of the District has available for rental to cooperators, a Martin Ditcher, which is built of steel and which runs in the furrow after plowing. After the Martin Ditcher is used, and a tall peaked ridge is secured, another furrow or two are plowed and the Martin Ditcher again used, which gives more width and strength to the ridge, permitting it to withstand heavy rains when the ditch itself is running full. Such a diversion, by removing the run-off water from the ridgetop, protects the steeper slopes to a remarkable degree.

The following cooperators of the District have built diversions on their farms: Joe Richardson, John Shaw and Leslie Riley of White's Tower; Peanut Chas. Stephens of Independence; Chas.

Gus Richardson of Atwood; Earl R. Souder, Basil Lunsford and John W. Sleet of Green Road; Robert Bell and Earl Metcalfe of Piner; Stanley Massey of Crescent Springs and Geo. Kelly of Hand Pike.

Some of our cooperators have made an additional use of the diversion. Besides protecting the slope below, they conduct water to a farm pond located high up on the ridge, with little chance of receiving enough water to fill it. The above include Joe Richardson, Gus Richardson, Chas. Richardson, John Shaw and Earl R. Souder.

The following requests have been received for diversions to be surveyed by the District: Tommie Stephenson of Brach; Dr. H. F. Mann of Piner; A. W. Frau of the Green Road; R. F. Porter of Hand Pike; Earl Richardson of Oak Island; Mrs. Stella Richardson of White's Tower; Geo. Eubanks, Cliff Eubank, W. F. Hausman, Frank Foltz, Alois Obermeier and the Villa Madonna Farm of Crescent Springs; and Frank Cox, James Tomlinson, S. S. Rich and Earl McKinley of Independence. As these diversions are surveyed and constructed, the District will be glad to have neighbors to come over and observe, and to lend a hand of assistance in the construction of these diversions.

RURAL RECREATION PROBLEMS DIFFERENT, ADVISES SPECIALIST

The rural recreation problem is one of free social and recreational activities, according to Carl W. Jones, club specialist addressing the Boone County Utopia Club members last Thursday evening at Burlington. The city recreation problem has centered around making greater use of leisure time and keeping unemployed youth busy.

There is practically no unemployment among rural youth; and farm youth under war conditions are called upon to do long and strenuous hours. The recreation problem here is one of finding time for wholesome organized recreation that will give desirable contacts and build rural pride and leadership. Mr. Jones complimented the Utopia Club and local leaders for the recreational program they have recently conducted.

The next meeting of the Utopia Club will be held at the home of Lucian Bradford of near Union. Rev. H. M. Hutter will be a guest speaker on the program. His subject will be "Rural Life and Youth."

WORKERS FOR FARMERS MAY LACK EXPERIENCE

While there is a shortage of first-class farm labor, there probably are enough men and boys left to handle the crops and produce the food and feed asked of Kentucky this season, says Bruce Poundstone, farm labor supervisor at the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Many farmers, however, he adds, may have to do with less-experienced men or with boys during the rest of the war. The armed forces have taken the larger part of the men experienced in farm production.

Right now, Mr. Poundstone said, workers are being found for farmers all over the state, and a campaign has been launched to recruit boys 14 to 18 years old.

So a better job can be done by the College of Agriculture in locating workers, farmers are being asked to list their labor needs at the offices of county agents. At the same time county agents are making up lists of workers available in areas where men and boys are not fully employed.

A WALTON LADY SPIT UP ACID LIQUIDS FOR HOURS AFTER EATING

For hours after every meal, a Walton lady used to spit up a strong, acidulous liquid mixed with pieces of half-digested food. She says it was awful. At times she would nearly strangle. She had stomach blood, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Today, this lady eats her meals and enjoys them. And she says the change is due to taking ERB-B.R.P. Her food agrees with her. No gas, bloating or spitting up after eating. She is also free of headaches now, and bowels are regular, thanks to this Remarkable New Compound.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-B.R.P. Jones Drug Store.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"The war stories I like best, Judge, are the ones by the special writers overseas who live right with our troops. They give us a better idea of how our men react to things going on over there and back here at home."

"I agree with you, Sam. I never miss one of those stories in the papers or magazines. And there's one thing those writers seem to agree on no matter where they are stationed with our men... and that is that the men who have left their homes and families to go away and fight this war don't want to come back and find that prohibition has been put over on them while they were away... either nationally or locally. They have heard the attempts being made and they react it bitterly."

"I agree with them, Judge, even though I don't happen to drink myself. Furthermore, I don't think it's fair for us at home to be making any major changes while 10,000,000 of our fighting men are away and have no chance to express their opinions."

TIME AND FOOD SAVERS

GIVEN AT TRAINING CLASS

Methods of conserving time and food in "Wartime Food Preparation" were discussed at the second food leaders training class held last week. Fourteen homemakers representing eight clubs attended the all day training class held in Burlington. Miss Florence Imlay, Nutrition Specialist, University of Kentucky, instructor of the class, gave many time, energy and food savers homemakers can use during wartime. 11-24

A special planned menu consisting of stewed chicken and homemade noodles, buttered peas and carrots, fresh vegetable salad with horsardish dressing, zucchini shortcake and bread and Clafoutis was prepared by the leaders for lunch. This same menu will be used at all local clubs during May. 11-24

A fruit and vegetable canning lesson will supplement the foods lesson to be given during May. Homemakers are urged to bring their neighbors to the May meeting. Anyone who had trouble with food spoilage last year is asked to bring questions to the meeting. 11-24

Following is a schedule of Homemakers Meetings: May 3, Constance, Mrs. Alice Kenyon, 10:30 A. M.; May 4, Burlington, Courthouse, 11:00 A. M.; May 5, Verona, Mrs. Ach. Noel, 10:30 A. Agriculture. These beans are delicious when green, served like green peas or young limas, and are also good when mature and dry, used like other dry beans, according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent. Recent scientific tests show soybeans to be twice as rich in protein as green peas or lima beans; seven times as rich in fat as limas, and eleven times as rich as green peas. They can be served with less butter or other fat. 11-24

Soybeans need about the same soil, culture, and growing methods as bush beans, but they grow more slowly and are taller. John S. Gardner, Garden Specialist, University of Kentucky, recommends the Ban Sil as the highest yielding soy and Burpee Funks Delicious for a larger dark green soybean with smaller yield. An advantage to gardeners is that the Mexican bean beetle bothers them only when there are no other beans in the garden. 11-24

JENNY JERK

— who yanks appliance cords from outlets

Almost everyone but Jenny knows that yanking on an appliance cord may loosen connections, break the fine wires under insulation and perhaps cause a short circuit. Homemakers who want their cords to last always release them by taking hold of the plug itself. And they also follow these other tips on the use and care of their cords:

- Don't place cords under rugs where they will be walked on or crushed by heavy furniture.
- Don't run cords through doorways where they will be squeezed by opening and closing of door.
- Don't use frayed or defective cords or cords with loose connections. Have them repaired.
- Never tack or nail through a cord. If long extensions must be used, run them through screw-eyes or over hooks.
- Keep non-waterproof cords dry.
- Don't wad up cords or allow them to knot and kink. Coil them loosely and lay them in a drawer when not in use.

By keeping your appliance cords in good condition, you will get better service from your appliances. Take good care of them and make them last.

Walton Man Is Held In Shooting Sunday Morning

Arraigned before County Judge John B. Read Monday, Robert Hutson, of Walton, charged with the shooting of William L. Lane, 36, of Miami, Fla., early Sunday during an altercation at the Woodlawn Inn near Walton, was held under a $5000 bond pending a preliminary hearing on May 23. In default of the bond, Hutson, an employee of the inn, was committed to jail.

The shooting climaxed a general melee at the inn, police said, during which Lane is said to have hurled beer bottles through glass in a door and shattered several windows.

Lane, wounded in the right hip, was reported Monday in a fair condition at Booth Hospital.

Chief Thomas Young, of Kenton county police, said Lane was wounded when Hutson fired a .32-caliber revolver. Hutson admitted firing the weapon but said he did it in self-defense, Chief Young said.

The shooting was investigated by Chief Young and County Patrolmen Albert Nease Nagelisen and Ott Froelicher.

At the hospital, Lane told county police the shooting occurred two or three hours after the inn closed at 1 A. M.

Officers said they understood that Lane has obtained a lease on the inn, now held by a man in the armed service. State licenses for 1944 go into effect July 1.

A report of the shooting will be obtained by agents in the State Revenue Department office in Covington and turned over to the State Alcohol Control Board at Frankfort, it was learned.

The report is to be studied before a new license is issued for the establishment, revenue office said.

Lane was charged with malicious destruction of property in a warrant sworn to today by the inn manager.

Firemen To Have Annual Dinner Saturday

The seventh annual dinner of the Independence and Community Volunteer Fire Department will be held at 5 P. M. Saturday at the Simon Kenton High School, Independence.

Charles H. Dorsey, chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner, said chicken and roast beef will be served.

Mrs. Martha Goff Passes

Funeral services for Mrs. Martha Goff, Walton, were conducted from Chambers and Grubbs Funeral Home, Sunday at 3:00 P. M. with the Rev. R. F. DeMoisey officiating with Rev. Burton Garrett assisting.

Mrs. Goff passed away in St. Elizabeth Hospital late Friday following a short illness. She is survived by three daughters: Mrs. D. L. Maddox, Walton; Mrs. Lula Ryle, Cincinnati, Ohio; and Mrs. Lindsey Cardwell, Covington. Two sons: Mr. Hugh Goff, Covington, Ky.; and Mr. Switzer Goff, Huntington, W. Va.

Interment was in Walton cemetery with Chambers and Grubbs in charge of arrangements.

Walton Woman's Club Entertained At Johnson Home

Mrs. Cloyd Johnson entertained for the May meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club in her attractive country home at Beaver Lick.

The meeting was opened with the reading of the American Creed by Mrs. John Boyer. Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker presided over the business session. Mrs. W. W. Rouse gave the thought for the day using as her subject "Just Being Happy."

The highlight of the afternoon program was a book review given by Mrs. J. E. McCabe. The novel reviewed was a book of adventure and biography entitled "I Married Adventure" by Osa Johnson. This book was a tribute in memory of Martin Johnson and written by his wife Osa Johnson and it tells of his life and their life together and the wonderful work they both did thru their travels, pictures and lectures. Mrs. McCabe gave the review in her usual interesting and pleasing manner.

The hostess served delicious refreshments to the following guests: Mrs. Fred Hamilton, Mrs. C. B. Gordon, Mrs. Jake Cleek, Mrs. Merritt Jack. Members present were: Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbaker, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. G. S. Caroland, Mrs. C. S. Chambers, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. A. H. Gaines, Mrs. Rose W. Hamilton, Mrs. A. R. Johnson, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. D. L. Lusby, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Mrs. G. C. Ransom.

WITH
OUR BOYS
IN THE SERVICE

FROM MARINE SON
San Diego, Calif.
May 1, 1944

Dear Mother and Daddy
Well, here comes a letter from your Marine son. How are you all? I am fine. We have been working rather hard while we have been up here at the rifle range. I have gotten so I can get in some of the positions and it does not hurt me very much. We are going to shoot the B. A. R. rifle tomorrow. It is a big one, it looks like a machine gun.

We have a new mess Serg. up here and the food was a lot better today. We were sure eating good in this hut, after mail call today, there were seven pounds of candy and one large cake, that was eaten by twenty boys. We are all full up.

I got five letters today, and sure was glad to get them. I am going to get behind on my letter writing as I don't like to write. I just write one a night. I will be behind until Sunday then I may get them written.

We are going to a U. S. O. show tonight, it will not be very good I don't think, as they say they have not been before. We have to go. If we did not, I would stay and write some.

I will close now.
Your Son,
Billy Adams

MOTHER'S DAY GREETINGS

Mrs. Ruth Smith received the following Mother's Day poem from her son Richard E. Smith somewhere overseas.

I've known strange lands,
And sailed strange seas,
I've seen scenes and say,
But I'd like to be a boy again
And home on Mother's Day.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND

An Air Service Command Depot (Somewhere in England) Private First Class Kenneth E. Locke, son of Mrs. Alpha Locke, Verona, Ky., is now on duty in the Metal-Manufacturing Section on landing gear, brakes, and other hydraulic plane equipment.

Private Locke was employed as machinist by the Wright Aeronautical Corp., Lockland, Ohio before joining the Service on December 31, 1942.

Corporal Harley Littrell of Camp Barkley, Texas will be home on a fifteen day furlough on May 15. He still enjoys army life and writes that he enjoys his part of the firing of the big 75 M. M. guns off of tanks.

BURLINGTON AIRMAN FILLS 50th MISSION

The 50th combat mission of his career in the air forces was made on March 30 by T. Sgt. Alfred Ranes, of Burlington, Ky., according to dispatches from headquarters of the 15th Army Air Force.

Twenty-two years of age, the radio-operator-gunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress flew over Sofia, Bulgaria on this mission.

Sgt. Ranes entered the armed forces on July 7, 1942, and gained his wings on Jan. 12, 1943, at Tyndall Field, Fla. He entered foreign service on June 24, 1943, making his first combat mission over Aquino, Italy, on July 29, 1943.

Sgt. Ranes attended Burlington High School and before entering the Army he was a farmer. He has been awarded the Air Medal with nine Oak Leaf Clusters.

Fair Grounds Lake To Open Fishing On May 15

The Boone County 4-H and Utopia Fairgrounds Lake at Burlington will be open for fishing beginning May 15. Season tickets good for 10 fishings will be sold for $5.00 with children 15 years or under accompanied by parents free.

While the lake has been heavily stocked the past two years with young stock, it has not been heavily stocked for commercial fishing. The first fishing last week proved at that time fishing was excellent.

Tickets for fishing may be secured from members of the 4-H and Utopia Club Council or from the lake committee.

A diagnosis here is arrived at ONLY after a most thorough search for the CAUSES of impaired vision.

WITH THE REDS!

Now that they have proven themselves by winning the majority of their early games with the tough western clubs of the National League, the Cincinnati Reds are contending with the eastern teams in a long home series of fourteen contests.

Following Wednesday night's affair with the New York Giants, the Reds were to meet the Ottens in single games Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with Friday's contest being a "West day" affair.

On Sunday the Reds will meet the Boston Braves in a double-header. It will be the first chance for Cincinnati fans to see the revamped Beantowners of Bob Coleman, now Boston pilot. The Braves will also stay over for a single contest on Monday, May 15, and a morning game Tuesday, May 16. Play will be called at 11 A. M. on that day, an hour which will permit many war workers to view the club in action.

Martin county farmers have increased their acreage of hybrid corn by 100 percent.

—who leaves her range units on high after food begins to boil

Switching to low heat promptly when food comes to boil not only conserves electricity but also prolongs the life of the units. Don't forget and leave them on high like the young lady above. And follow these other timely tips on the use and care of your range:

- Use surface units in rotation. Favoring one unit will cause it to wear out before the others, and in these days replacements are difficult.
- Make sure oven units are pushed in tightly. A loose fit causes arcing, which will pit and burn terminal points.
- Use utensils that fit the units. Utensils larger than units spread heat to porcelain finish and may craze it.
- Wash porcelain finish with warm, mild soapy water. Don't use gritty cleaners or abrasives and be sure range is cool. Wipe up spilled milk or fruit juices promptly to avoid staining finish.
- Don't use sharp instruments to clean surface units. Spilled food will burn away.
- Don't slam oven doors and don't let the children sit on them.

Your range is probably the most important single piece of equipment in your home. Don't neglect it. Keep it in top-notch condition for the duration.

U. S.-British Heavy Bombers Continue
Blasting of Nazi Defenses, Railroads;
Task Force Hits Jap Base at Truk;
'Riot' Sales Reflect Need for Goods

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the writer. The writer is not responsible for the accuracy of the newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Bougainville—Yanks from 37th division, formerly the Ohio National Guard, go into action behind U. S. tank against Japs infiltrating into their lines on Bougainville in Solomon.

MEATS:
Supply Plentiful

Because of a halt in lend-lease buying, reduced military demands and bulging warehouses, the OPA removed all meats except beef, steaks and roasts from rationing.

Even as the OPA acted, packers were being deluged with heavy receipts of hogs, reflecting the tight feed situation recently aggravated by the government's embargo on all private corn sales in 125 midwest counties in an effort to divert 40,000,000 bushels of the grain to industrial processors for war uses. In one day, 20 leading markets received 200,000 hogs compared with 148,000 the previous week and 140,000 a year ago.

After one week of extensive solicitation by county AAA officials, it was announced farmers offered more than 21,000,000 bushels of corn for sale to the government for the sorely pressed processing industry. OPA's action removed from rationing all cuts of pork, real and imitation; all beef except the steaks and roasts; beef hamburger and steaks; all kinds of variety meats; sausage, ready-to-eat meats; canned meats and canned fish.

EUROPE:

Invasion Bombardment

Thundering over western Europe, thousands of U. S. and British planes continued their round-the-clock bombardment of Nazi coastal defenses and rail lines feeding them, as Berlin anxiously eyed the heavy concentration of shipping in invasion waters.

As the west rumbled under the crushing bombardments, quiet settled over the long active Russian front, but here, too, the storm reportedly brewed with the Red massing forces for an all-out blow at the Germans to coincide with the U. S. and British invasion.

About 1,100,000 Nazis were at arms along the heralded German "Atlantic Wall" under supreme leadership of Marshal Erwin Rommel, but leaving no stone unturned, they were reported prepared to protect their flank by flooding the Netherlands by blasting the dikes and dams holding back the rumbling sea water.

CIVILIAN GOODS:
Scarcity Rule

Reflecting the demand for civilian goods, crowds rushing to buy 1,500 model alarm clocks in a Chicago department store, smashed display cases and created a mild riot before police were finally summoned to restore order.

Although such riots are not expected to become the rule during the rest of 1944, scarcity of many items is. For instance, a few war model alarm clocks are expected to be produced in the second quarter of this year and some electric clocks with plastic cases will be available in July.

Baby carriages of prewar construction containing nine pounds of metal will continue to be marketed in limited numbers. Despite increased use of metal in up-to-date furniture, the shortage of lumber is expected to hold down production. Electric flat-iron should reappear in stock later in the year. No refrigerators but iceboxes of plasticized wood pulp will remain available.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BASEBALL: Attendance at major league baseball games is 13 per cent higher than last year, club secretaries report.

ASCAP: Two new members have been admitted to ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers). They are Leopold Stokowski, symphony orchestra director, and Al Trace, band leader, who introduced "Mairzy Doats."

LEATHER: White good quality hides are scarce, there will be a sufficient leather for shoes within the limits of rationing, according to trade sources.

SPION-CROONER: The British have begun a nationwide search for a singer who can send the girls into "raptures of rapture" as Frank Sinatra is reported to do, says the London Daily Mirror.

LABOR:

Union Security

Perked by Montgomery Ward and company's persistent opposition to the maintenance of membership clause compelling employers to remain within a union for the life of its contract with a firm, the industry representatives on the War Labor board opened up a fight on the provision.

Asking that the WLB agree to test its power to impose the maintenance of membership clause on employers by taking the case to court, the industry representatives declared:

1. Maintenance of membership restricts a worker's freedom to decide his own union affiliations;
2. Maintenance of membership has yet to be proved a device for stimulating production, and;
3. Maintenance of membership might disturb harmonious relations between labor and capital.

Foremen Strike

Opposed by industry generally on the grounds that foremen properly are a part of management, the question of unionization of foremen came to the front in Detroit's automobile plants.

In the five plants of the Briggs Manufacturing company, 6,000 members of the United Auto Workers staged a two-hour sit-down in support of the request of 1,000 foremen for recognition of the Foremen's Association of America.

At the Hudson Motor company, an undetermined number of foremen struck in protest against the alleged discharge of a supervisor without a hearing, but the firm continued production despite their absence.

OLD WORKER: Comes Back

At 99-year-old Jacob S. Coxey stood on the steps of the nation's capitol in Washington, D. C., in a good blue suit and high old fashioned collar with a black string tie, there were memories of his celebrated march to the same site at the head of 1,000 unemployed in 1894.

Then, Coxey had intended to petition congress to issue interest-free government bonds for erection of public works, but police herded Coxey and his followers to the outskirts of the capitol.

Fifty years had not changed Coxey's views. As he appeared in Washington, D. C. this time in connection with his attendance at the 36th annual convention of the Hoboes of America, he again shouted for government issuance of interest-free money instead of dependence upon the private banking system for currency, provided through its purchase of U. S. Bonds.

NEUTRALS:

Curb Axis Business

Responding to U. S. and British pressure to curb shipments of tungsten to Germany, Spain agreed to limit deliveries of this vital metal hardening ore to the Nazis to 20 tons monthly during May and June and 40 tons monthly thereafter.

As a result of the agreement which also included the ouster of all German agents in the Gibraltar region, the U. S. and British pledged to resume shipments of 48,000 tons of bulk oil and 15,000 tons of packaged petroleum products monthly to Spain.

U. S. and British pressure on Turkey to stop increased chrome shipments to Germany resulted in a temporary suspension of deliveries pending review of the request, but Sweden has held out against Allied demands for termination of its lucrative ball-bearing trade with the Nazis.

SUPREME COURT:
Can't Tax U. S.

In a 7 to 2 decision read by Justice Jackson, the U. S. Supreme court ruled that government-owned property is not taxable, regardless of whether assessments are made directly against the government or its lessee.

The court's opinion was handed down in a case where Allegheny county, Pa., had placed a higher valuation upon a gunmaker's real estate because the factory on which it stood contained government equipment used in manufacturing operations.

Declaring the county's procedure amounted to placing a general property tax on government-owned equipment with resulting higher taxes to the government for defraying the gunmaker's increased tax payments, the court said that actually the assessment was made against the "machinery and not against the real estate."

AUTOS

There are only about 47,000 new passenger automobiles on hand, the Office of Price Administration reports. At the beginning of rationing, there were 532,000, most of which have been sold to purchasers for war essential activities.

Explaining the policy of holding on tightly to the small number still remaining an OPA representative said: "It is essential that some new cars be made available as long as possible to take care of highly important services."

Washington Digest
Swine Industry Develops
Feed Conservation Plan

C. D. Carpenter Helps Hog Growers Solve Problems; Program Tailored by Cooperative Business Men of Agriculture.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

When I learned that a former feed man had been the moving spirit in drawing up the present swine program which you'll be hearing about shortly, I reacted as I should I once heard in London:

"The profit in the swine business is in the mustard you leave on your plate."

That was the statement once made by a famous British mustard manufacturer. In other words, the consumer's waste is the producer's gain.

The proposition seems logical enough and nobody could blame the mustard-maker for hoping that you and I would be as profligate with our condiment as possible. On that basis, I was recently surprised to learn that the government had called in a man in the feed business and paid him a dollar a year to help solve the feed problem. I wondered if it wasn't just possible that maybe the consumer was going to suffer.

I had a talk with some members of the department of agriculture after I learned that the gentlemen had done so much for the poultry raisers that they picked him to help on the swine program which is as closely connected with the feed problem as the fly is with the flypaper.

"Why should you pick a man whose interest it is to have the farmer come at me with the feed?" I asked.

"This whole program," the government official told me, "is worked out by the swine industry itself; the men who produce the hogs, the men who process them, help feed them, distribute them. That's the point. The government merely cooperates. You had better talk to Mr. Carpenter."

Dollar a Year

Clifford D. Carpenter carries the title of "special assistant to the chief of the feed and livestock branch of the food production administration." For that long title, he gets the short fee of a dollar a year. He has no desire to remain a public servant. He wants to get back to his business. But he is enthusiastic over the new swine program.

He and his colleagues of the industry have worked out a part of which is the conservation, not the waste, of feed.

I asked him, when his business was to sell the farmer as much feed as he could?

"Because," he said, "the success of the feed business lies in having efficient customers, not careless wastrels. One of the ways we helped to increase the poultry output was to teach the farmer to stop feed. For instance, you have no idea how much was wasted by having the farmer put a rim on the chicks of his feed troughs so the edges would not spill almost as much as they ate, and who would even more than that was something much simpler—we got the farmer to fill the feed receptacles three-fourths full instead of brimming."

He went on at some length on this subject, especially emphasizing that the interests of the consumer and the producer are the same in the whole of the swine industry. He pointed out, he pointed out, the other's efficiency—that he pointed out, in the benefit derived from good results in government, one of the results which many persons feel come by having businessmen in the many government agencies.

Profitable Patriotism

The whole swine program has been tailored by the "businessmen" of the swine industry and that includes the farmer who raises the hogs, for he is a businessman, too, to be it to be successful.

Last month, in Chicago, a group of these men got together, representatives of hog farmers, breeders, the veterinarians, the packers, the feed men, the equipment manufacturers—everybody interested in the whole cycle from the sow's first squeal to the dining table.

"It's patriotic to make your herd profitable" was the slogan this group worked out which was a sentence with a two-way kick—you can turn it around and it is just as true.

When RCAF searching aircraft locate stranded airmen but cannot get to them, a trained pigeon is dropped in a metal waterproof container attached to a small parachute. The stranded men then send the paratrooper bird back with a message of their needs and condition, according to the Canadian Information Bulletin, Weekly Editor Looks at Ottawa.

True—"It's profitable to make a patriotic bird."

These experts decided that there was plenty of feed obtainable in America to meet the war goals, provided that certain conditions are carried out. They agreed on four principles, all of which lead to making efficient producers which they all decided is both patriotic and profitable. These principles are:

Specific Measures

- (1) better breeding to improve the size and quality of litter and (2) conservation of available feed stock
  - (3) reduction of loss through diseased and parasitic
  - (4) improved management for greater efficiency and production.
- More specifically, the five things necessary to produce the feed which is necessary to reach the animal food stuff goals are these:
- (1) to feed no more than 14 pounds of feedstuff for one animal unit
  - (2) to achieve the maximum use of pasture and grazing land
  - (3) to sell the animal for meat, before it becomes an inefficient consumer of feed
  - (4) to stop the loss caused by rats or spoilage or wastage in other ways
  - (5) to bring about a higher standard in health in animals.

True Cooperation

Those who are directly concerned with the production of swine are about as far apart as the ends of the earth. They have developed places before them emphatically in the farm trade papers, over the radio, in lectures, from the county agent and through their own organizations, so I won't go into it in detail. But the point that many will not realize is that there has been no real achievement brought about by the cooperation of industry and government.

These hardheaded businessmen have produced a program which has been going to do its best to put into effect through the various means of publicity and education which I mentioned. It was unanimously agreed that the producers should plan to finish hogs at 200 to 240 pounds in order to make more efficient use of the feed and for the production of more meat.

They also emphasize the need of taking full advantage of clean pastures and they point out that the saving of feed is not per unit of feed. They also emphasize the need of taking full advantage of clean pastures and they point out that the saving of feed is not per unit of feed. They also emphasize the need of taking full advantage of clean pastures and they point out that the saving of feed is not per unit of feed.

They are telling each other for each other's benefit.

Manpower Needs

While everybody is talking about demobilization, it seems, strange that mobilization in many fields is still far from being complete. There are crying needs for men and women in power in two phases of the war effort causing serious trouble.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, which is the federal government's experimental and scientific research organization, needs 1,500 men. Without this complement, the NACA director of personnel says "the development and production of new and improved aircraft is being hampered."

The need is localized—in laboratories at Langley Field, Va., Moffett Field, Calif., and Cleveland, Ohio. Engineers, physicists, chemists, metallurgists, toolmakers, sheet metal workers, instrument makers, engine makers, electricians, pattern makers and other skilled tradesmen are needed.

At the same time, the National Women's Advisory committee of the War Relocation Commission reports that the women's corps of the armed services are falling far short of their enlistment quotas and many thousands of women also are needed in areas of labor shortage. The committee is urging women's organizations throughout the country to urge the recruitment job as a major war effort.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The U. S. army will need 75,000 to 100,000 men monthly to maintain its peak strength of 7,700,000 personnel, according to the war department. The navy will need 400,000 additional personnel by September 1, to get the navy, marine corps and coast guard up to peak strength of 2,800,000.

Cereal Leftovers make Wonderful Rolls!

Make them with Fleischmann's yellow label Yeast—the only yeast fresh with more EXTRA vitamins.

CEREAL ROLLS
1 cup milk
2 1/2 tablespoons sugar
4 teaspoons salt
4 tablespoons shortening

1 cup cooked leftover cereal
1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast
1 cup lukewarm water
8 cups sifted flour

Scald milk, add sugar, salt, shortening and cereal; cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water and add to cereal mixture. Knead half the flour and beat until smooth. Add remaining flour slowly enough to make easily handled dough. Knead dough quickly until smooth and elastic. Place dough in greased bowl and lightly oil with warm place, free from draft. Let rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 1/2 hours. When light, shape into rolls and place close together in greased layer cake pan. Cover and let rise again until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. ## OUR FARM NEWS

FEED SHORTAGE BECOMING ACUTE

The feed shortage for the livestock producer who must buy his feeds is becoming acute according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Prospects are that the situation will get worse the next few months and not better.

Farmers are faced with the problem of adjusting their farm organization and livestock operations to meet this changing situation or to probably face some difficult situations. One of the greatest needs now is to increase the feed and food crop production for this year. A few timely suggestions that in some instances may be profitably carried out are:

1. Increase corn production thru (a) Increasing acreage where practical. (b) Using high yielding adapted hybrid corn seed. Adapted hybrids include Ky. 102 and 103 and U. S. 13 among the yellow hybrids; and Ky. 99, 72B, 201 and 203 among the white hybrids. (c) Using larger amounts of recommended fertilizers (including manure) in approved methods. (d) Making most efficient use of corn and corn fodder produced.

2. Increase pasture production. Have all land producing the highest quality pasture possible thru improved seeding, fertilizers grazing and other management practices.

3. Provide an abundance of high quality hay for next winter. Prospects are that hay will be high next year. If grain shortages come to the worst, most livestock can be brought thru the winter on roughage alone. One acre or one ton of good roughage is worth in feeding value more than two tons of poor hay or roughage. Quality to a large extent can be controlled.

4. Secure protein supplements when available.

5. Produce your own food. The accomplishment of last year has paid the greatest return to the nation's war time food production program.

6. Keep all livestock healthy. Healthy livestock, like a correctly adjusted, well lubricated engine, does the most efficient production job.

FERTILIZER SHORTAGE ENCOUNTERED LOCAL DEALERS

Farmers who are late ordering their fertilizer needs for tobacco and other crops may not be able to secure their needs, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Many farmers have taken advantage of earlier recommendations and have secured early delivery sufficient to cover their needs.

Phosphate is one of the difficult of fertilizers to secure. The county A.A. office has unfiled orders of thirteen car loads on file. Some dealers have been able to get a limited supply while other dealers are unable to make delivery. The use of 1000 pounds of phosphate and 750 pounds of complete fertilizers per acre turned under and 250 pounds of complete fertilizer beside the row, is recommended for tobacco land where the crop is to be grown year after year on the same land. General recommendations include 500 pounds of phosphate per acre for new alfalfa seedings and 300 to 500 pounds per acre for new grass and clover seedings.

Complete fertilizer mixtures are available in larger quantities than are the straight kinds, the higher the analysis usually the better the buy in complete fertilizers. Home gardeners will ordinarily find the 3-9-6 combination their best buy at around $2.00 per ton. Liberal applications where turned under, or beside the row or mixed well in the row in most cases will give satisfactory results. Potash of sulphate instead of muriate of potash should be in the tobacco fertilizer mixture.

A few dealers have the new 32.5 percent ammonium nitrate nitrogen fertilizer for sale. This fertilizer at prices from $80 to $85 per ton is the best nitrogen buy on the market.

Farmers who have not already secured their fertilizer needs should contact their dealers and make sure that their order will be filled. This is one year that heavy applications of fertilizers properly applied will pay dividends.

FISH AND WILDLIFE SUPERVISOR APPOINTED FOR WESTERN KENTUCKY

The appointment of Earl Wallace, a native of Georgetown, as fish and wildlife supervisor in the Western Kentucky area, was announced recently by Harold A. Browning, Director of the Kentucky Department of Conservation.

S. A. Wakefield, former director of the Division of Game and Fish, made the arrangements for getting Wallace back to Kentucky and away from the Wisconsin Conservation Department and Browning upon being named director of the Department of Conservation, completed the negotiations.

Wallace is to be an "ambassador" to the department in West Kentucky, with headquarters in either Benton and Mayfield. He is to keep in close contact with sportsmen of the area and make known their needs to the State office at Frankfort.

The new game and fish commission and the director chosen by the commission will determine whether or not the supervisor's office will be made a permanent part of the organization of the division. But if the sportsmen and Wallace show that the office can do as much as it is hoped it can do, there should be little doubt about its permanence.

Wallace spent six years with the National Geographic Society as a natural history and wildlife writer in the United States and abroad. Since 1929, he has been with the Wisconsin Conservation Department and had charge of the state wildlife improvement program.

In Wisconsin the greatest factor in game management has been a shortage of food. To overcome that, Wallace established at Wisconsin Rapids, a game food nursery for propagating and producing trees, shrubs and vines that would produce natural wildlife food. These species were planted throughout the State by C. C. and W. F. A. employees to furnish a monthly sustained food supply for wildlife. The nursery was the first of its kind in the world. Since its inception in Wisconsin, similar projects have been established in other States.

During the wildlife improvement program, Wisconsin embarked upon its public hunting grounds program and Wallace had charge of and developed the first one, a 28,000 acre area in Wood County, for upland game birds, waterfowl and white-tailed deer.

A War Job with a Future

—in a War Industry with a Future!

DO YOU WANT to do some real war work...in a job with a future...in an industry that is going places after the war?

If so, take a look at the 100,000 job opportunities which the American railroads are offering today.

These jobs are available because more men and women workers are urgently needed by the railroads to keep the trains "rolling for Victory." It is real war work. And it is exciting, fascinating, satisfying work...in peacetime as well as in time of war.

Today, the Nation is depending on the railroads to move the fighting men and fighting freight.

Tomorrow, when Victory comes, the Nation will still be depending on the railroads for its essential transportation service. For no other form of transportation can supply the economical, dependable mass transportation service which American industry and agriculture will need in the post-war era.

That's why railroad work is vital war work with a future. The railroads won't fold up when the war ends. They're proving now...with the great wartime job they are doing...that the Nation can't get along without railroads.

If you want one of these war jobs...in an industry that has a tradition of steady employment...in an industry that is going places after the war...talk it over with a railroad officer or agent, or apply direct to any office of the Railroad Retirement Board or the United States Employment Service.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"We can't argue with the Judge on that point, can we Mabel? It's not fair to penalize the many for the actions of the few."

"That, folks, is exactly what we would be doing in this country if we ever voted for prohibition again. Authorities who have made a careful study of the problem, report that only about 5% of those who drink abuse the privilege occasionally...95% drink sensibly. Probably doesn't compare with the number of folks who overeat and do other things to excess. Prohibition certainly isn't the answer. It's not that simple. We had nearly 14 years proof of that, didn't we?"

"The real answer is education and better control. In fact, the responsible members of the distilling industry are working constantly toward that end. They don't want anybody to abuse the use of their product any more than the three of us do."

"If everybody would take that sensible attitude, Judge, and cooperate as more and more are now doing, we'd be a lot better off a lot quicker."

VERONA HOMEMAKERS

The Verona Homemakers held their regular monthly meeting with Mrs. Arch Noel, Friday, May 5, with 18 members present.

We were glad to add one new member to our roll, Mrs. Joe Rouse, and to have with us Mrs. Gaynel Flynn, our county president and Mr. Hume, the County Agent of Grant County.

Most of the afternoon session was given to Mr. Hume who brought us some timely and helpful hints on the prevention and destruction of garden pests and diseases. We also enjoyed his pictures of gardens, crops and scenes of beauty.

We wish to thank Mrs. Flynn and Mr. Hume and invite them back again.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

I Think Somebody Ought to Take a Bow

You know, friends, to my way of thinking, the Kentucky Committee of the Brewing Industry Foundation deserves a vote of thanks for the part they've played—and are still playing—in improving social conditions in and around our army camps and war production centers. Their accomplishments at Camp Beckinsridge and Camp Campbell are outstanding.

I wish you could read, as I have read, some of the letters they've gotten from army and navy officers and from their officials—federal, state and local—all telling how they appreciate the Foundation's active cooperation in helping solve these vital wartime problems.

From where I sit, we here in Kentucky are mighty fortunate in having an organization which recognizes these questions as part of their responsibility—an organization which can, and does, act quickly and efficiently in the cause of our social welfare.

1:00 P. M., Demonstration Contests in Agriculture and Home Economics.

2:30 P. M., Clothing Style Show Revue.

2:55 P. M., Presentation of Ribbons.

Adjournment.

Adult 4-H leaders are preparing their members to enter in one or more of the five named contests: clothing judging, foods judging, individual and team demonstrations both in Agriculture and Home Economics projects, and the Style Revue. Committees composed of the 4-H community and adult project leaders will supervise the various contests.

Judges for the contests will be: Miss Lulle Logan, Assistant State Leader of Home Demonstration Agents, Miss Edith Lacy and Mr. E. E. Fish, 4-H Field Specialists.

Foods Training Class

"Outdoor meals" will be the subject of the third in a series of Foods Training Classes for project leaders in Homemakers Clubs. The class will be held at the 4-H and Utopia Fair Grounds near Burlington next Tuesday, May 23 at 10:30 (E. W. T.), according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Each club plans to send two leaders to the Training Class. Miss Florence Inlay, Nutrition Specialist, University of Kentucky, will give the lesson on Outdoor Meals and how to build an outdoor fireplace.

Food Production Outstanding War Contribution

Home food production the past year has been given credit as the outstanding contribution in the nation's food production program. It is largely responsible for taking many of the nation's foods off the ration list.

1944 probably presents a more serious threat than last year according to the County Agent's office. With rationing so severe in many instances, many families may not work as hard in the planning and producing of their 1944 food supply. Many of the wisest and more experienced will probably plan to expand their production, expecting a more acute shortage than was anticipated last year.

Below are a few important and timely home food production suggestions:

1. Dairy cow or cows—the dairy cow is the most efficient source of high quality food. Milk is the nation's number one food shortage problem. Where possible, feed well. Feed usually is the limiting factor in all livestock problems.

2. Plant a good garden based on family needs. Make a good seed bed; use good seeds and an abundance of fertilizer.

3. Poultry and hogs—raise where possible own meat and plan for at least enough early hatched pullets to supply own eggs for this winter.

Five Per Cent More Canning Is Need This Year

The Government has asked that all homemakers whether living in towns or in the country can 5% more fruits and vegetables than last year. Because of the increased supply required for military and Lend-Lease needs, civilians face in 1944 an approximate 43 per cent increase in the more popular canned fruits and a 19 per cent cut in the best-liked canned vegetables.

Homemakers are urged to start canning season early, according to Mary Hood Gillespie, Home Demonstration Agent.

By starting early, the homemaker has the opportunity to can a greater variety and get a product that is more flavorful and tender.

Now is the time to can rhubarb, wild greens, spinach and kale. Canned rhubarb brings a breath of spring into the winter menu.

In canning rhubarb, wash, trim, cut in one to two inch pieces, measure, add one-fourth as much sugar as rhubarb. Cook without water by baking in oven until tender. Pack in hot, sterilized jars, seal (see directions of paraffin you are using), process five minutes, in a hot water bath.

The University of Kentucky bulletin "Can Fruits and Vegetables for Victory" may be obtained from the Home Agent's office in Burlington or call Burlington 412.

Rural Life Sunday Observance To Be Held Sunday, 21st

Rural Life Sunday will be observed in Kentucky on May 21. It is announced by the Kentucky Rural Church Council, The Council and the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics cooperate in sponsoring this special observance, assisted by such organizations as the Farm Bureau, 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Homemakers' Clubs and other groups interested in agriculture.

Both town and country churches observe Rural Life Sunday. Some country churches have dinner on the grounds County and city pastors sometimes exchange pulpits.

The announcement of the Kentucky Rural Church Council says: "Rural Life Sunday is usually the fifth after Easter, but was set on May 21 this year to avoid conflict with Mothers Day May 14. It stems out of Christian emphasis upon the Rogation Days, and is a day for special attention to the meaning of Christianity to rural life, and for the invocation of God's blessing upon the seed, the fruits of the soil and the cultivators of the earth. It has been observed nationally each year since 1929. This year, as last, it is an occasion for stressing the farmers' vital task of producing food in greater amount than ever before."

Sportsmen To Hold Convention Monday, May 22

The League of Kentucky Sportsmen will hold a one day convention on May 22, in the Hotel of Lexington, according to an announcement received by J. M. Perkins, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, from Donald Gooch, president of the League.

Having passed up the 1943 convention in order not to add to the civilian travel load, officers of the League for some time have been of a mind that the organization in so doing, lost some ground in its wildlife conservation work and that it is justified in having a full-attendance convention this year.

Members of the League feel that this meeting is especially important since the new civil service law for the Division of Game and Fish was passed recently by the Kentucky Legislature.

The new law provides that Governor Willis appoint a new nine-man game and fish commission from nominations made by the sportsmen in each Congressional district. The sportsmen are to select five persons in each district at meetings, which Perkins, Director of the Division, is required to call within 30 days after the law becomes effective June 13.

Since the League represents the organized sportsmen throughout the State, it will be in position to give Perkins a good deal of help in getting the sportsmen into those district meetings.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR FOUR YOUNG WOMEN

The Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics announces that it has four $100 scholarships for young women finishing high school this spring. They will go to girls having good records in 4-H club work and in high school, and will be issued before the beginning of the fall college quarter. The Farm Writers' Association of Chicago is providing the money.

Girls now enrolled in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics who received similar scholarships are Lucille Laymen, Grayson county; Mary Katherine Ewbank, Gallatin county; Frances Wilhoite, Oldham county; and Doris Barclay Guilford, Fayette county.

NOTICE

Mrs. Alva Dickerson, is now connected with the Crescent Dairy Lunch Room, on 7th St. Any of her old friends from Boone County.

Will serve them in her usual way with a "Smile." Give her a call.

Revival Meeting at Walton Methodist Church

REV. W. E. GARROTT

The revival meeting of the Walton Methodist Church will begin May 29 and continue through June 11th.

Rev. W. E. Garrott, pastor of the Erlanger Methodist Church will assist the pastor C. G. Dear.

During these series of services, the public is invited to attend these services.

Farmers Nitrate Their Plant Beds; Good Results

Many farmers called the County Agent's office the past week in reference to applying nitrate fertilizer to tobacco beds where the plants had not made desirable growth. The application of nitrate of soda quickly stimulates plant growth but may make tender, brittle plants that may need hardening before transplanting.

The recommended application of nitrate of soda for a bed 9 feet wide and 300 feet long is as follows: Dissolve ten pounds of nitrate of soda in a fifty gallon barrel of water. Five gallons of this solution will treat from 20 to 30 running feet of a nine-foot bed. Twice as much water as the amount of soda used should be used to wash the plants off. The canvas should be removed when applying.

A limited number of College of Agriculture Extension Circular No. 77 is available at the County Agent's office on request.

Sorry to report Mrs. Nettie Fulfillove ill at this time.

Mrs. Donald Stephenson is spending the week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Linzie O'Banion of Williamstown.

On The Stage Of The RKO Albee Theater, Cincinnati

Sing and Sway with Sammy Kaye, will be the watchword in the band for the week beginning Friday, May 19, when Sammy Kaye and his orchestra open a week's engagement at the RKO Albee Theater, featuring that well established novelty "So You Want To Lead A Band."

And if you have ever had the urge to stand in front of an orchestra and wield the baton while the musicians followed your every move, here is your opportunity. For Sammy Kaye gives you just that chance, and if you are in the audience and he calls for volunteers to lead the band all you have to do is go on the stage and do just that.

The picture attraction for the week is "Falcon Out West" with Tom Conway and Barbara Hale in the stellar roles.

Surplus Nitrogen Fertilizer To Go To Farmers

The County Agent's office in Burlington was notified Monday that the supply of the new ammonium nitrate fertilizer is at present larger than the demand. Farmers where possible, are urged to take advantage of this cheap fertilizer.

Ammonium nitrate is a by-product of the factories making explosives. It tests 32.5 per cent nitrogen compared with approximately 15 per cent for nitrate of soda, and 20 per cent of ammonium sulphate. The price of this new high powered nitrogen fertilizer is around $60.00 per ton. Some dealers who have encountered increased expense in locating the material are forced to charge slightly more.

Nitrogen fertilizer is the quickest acting, most active and powerful of all the fertilizers used. One hundred pounds per acre plowed under is expected to increase corn yields around 10 bushels per acre. Grass and hay crops show immediate results.

The post-war period will probably see our farmers using large amounts of ammonium nitrate. It will pay most farmers to start this year to learn how to best use this important fertilizer. Approximately ten tons have already been sold to farmers in the county.

Granny Cleek Is Honored as Oldest Mother, Sunday

The various churches of Walton commemorated Mother's Day on last Sunday.

The Christian Church paid tribute to Granny Cleek, the oldest mother by presenting her with a beautiful potted plant.

Granny Cleek is 85 years of age, has reared two families and has been a wonderful mother and friend to everyone in the community.

We wish her many more years of health and happiness.

The writer has often wondered what Grannies recipe for gentleness and happiness is. I think it might be answered by this quotation: "Life is not a cup to be drained, life is a measure to be filled."

Walton Homemakers Meet

The Walton Homemakers met Friday, May 12, at the home of Mrs. Scott Chambers.

The president, Mrs. H. F. Mann opened the meeting with the reading of a poem, "Mother's Day," which was followed by a prayer by Mrs. W. O. Rouse. The roll call was answered with original poems on "Mother."

The major project of the day, Wartime Food Preparation, was presented by Miss Mary Hood Gillespie and Mrs. Stanley Ransom. Suggestions for the conservation of both food and time were given.

A contest in miniature flower arrangement was an interesting feature of the day. Miss Marie Chambers, Mrs. John L. Vest, and Mrs. Ora Fry were the winners in this contest.

Members and guests present were, Mrs. Ora Fry, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. Will Sturgeon, Mrs. H. F. Mann, Mrs. R. P. Demolise, Mrs. Alan Gaines, Mrs. Sara G. Edwards, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. D. Hee Vest, Mrs. Leo Flynn, Miss Marie Chambers, Miss Mary Hood Gillespie, Mrs. Stanley Ransom, the hostess, Mrs. Scott Chambers, and her daughters, Mrs. Allen Conner and Mrs. Wallace Grubbs.

The June meeting of the club will be at the home of Miss Alice Neumeister.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad entertained at dinner Sunday in honor of his mother Mrs. Bess Conrad, Mr. O. K. Powers of Verona, Mrs. B. Powers and Mrs. Mary Scales.

WITH OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

THINKING OF OLD FRIENDS
May 7, 1944
Camp Blanding, Fla.

Dear Editor:

I would appreciate very much if you would mail me the Advertiser. It is a great little paper and every one knows that every soldier enjoys hearing from his home town and what could be nicer than his home town paper.

It was not my pleasure to become very well acquainted with you before I left but I wish you all the success in the world in your new business and I'm sure that you will find that the people of Walton and surrounding community is composed of some of the finest people that you will ever have the privilege and honor of meeting.

Give my best regards to Mrs. Wallace the first time you see her and tell her I think of her quite often. As a matter of fact I think of all my friends in Walton and I am honored to have the privilege of protecting and helping to protect their rights to live as citizens of this dear old U.S.A.

Your truly,
Ward R. Rice.

PVT. DONALD L. STEPHENSON

Word has been received from Pvt. Donald L. Stephenson son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Stephenson and husband of Mrs. Dora Stephenson that he has safely arrived on an island in the South Pacific. Donald says it is very warm there, very few white people that can speak English, plenty of natives though.

We hear from Donald real often and he is doing fine. He is with the 48th Replacement Bn. 3rd Marine Amp. Corp.

Sgt. Blackburn Decorated

An Eighth Air Staff Sgt. Woodrow Blackburn, waist gunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress, has been decorated with the Purple Heart for wounds received during a bomber attack on enemy Europe.

Sgt. Blackburn, 28 years old, was graduated from high school at Crittenden, Ky., and attended Cumberland College. Before entering the service, February 9, 1942, he operated an ore train for the Mountain City Copper company at Rio Tinto, Nev., and was secretary of Local 466, I. U. M. & S. W. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lee Blackburn, of Elizton.

To date Sgt. Blackburn has taken part in twenty combat missions over enemy Europe and for "meritorious achievement" has been decorated with the Air Medal and three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Earl Dean Alexander of Camp Forrest, Tenn., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Alexander and family of Mt. Zion.

WLA TO HELP OUT

At least 115 Women's Land Army members in Hickman county will help with farm work this spring and summer. During the past winter, their jobs included stripping tobacco, caring for orphaned lambs, milking cows and caring for poultry flocks.

28,000 TREES SET

Thirty-five farmers in Marshall county set 28,000 trees this spring. Most of the trees were pine, with 5,000 locust. County Agent H. E. Rothwell notes that some of the trees were used to replace dead ones, the majority were planted to control erosion.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Natural rubber is still something of a mystery, even after years of laboratory experiments. It has been found to be a complex of many different substances, but there are other qualities which have not as yet been determined.

Before the war, 60 per cent of the tires and tubes made each year were used as replacements, and 80 per cent of the new motor vehicles sold replaced those already scrapped.

Small rubber selling at $3.04 a pound in 1910 stimulated the development of the Middle East plantations to the extent that 3,000,000 acres were under cultivation in 1915, providing the bulk of the world's supplies.

Indian Heel

by HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

W.M.A. RELEASE

LEW BURNETT is tall, broad, and good looking. He is a Texas cowboy, and he is a Texas cowboy. He is a Texas cowboy, and he is a Texas cowboy. He is a Texas cowboy, and he is a Texas cowboy. He is a Texas cowboy, and he is a Texas cowboy.

Wing thought about it, frowning. "Your contract I know," he said, "calls for delivery across the river. As far as the army is concerned, I can't see that thirty miles makes anything. All we do is act as escort for the Indian agent. But I think there's where you'll run into trouble."

He shrugged. "Not telling tales out of school—you know how it is. The agent deals with the Indian Supply Company, and two partners of that company are in Ogallala now, waiting for a herd of their own."

"Sure," Lew said, "the Open A. Fought me all the way up. That's why I've got to beat this quarantine. If I'm held after September first my subcontract with them is broken. They can deliver their own herd any time." He looked at the officer and thought the army was a decent outfit after all. But he knew now with some Indian agents.

"You think," he asked, "you would do any good if I rode in to see your commandant?"

"No," Wing said, "you needn't do that. I'm sending a courier in this morning. I'll write a note and have an answer back sometime in the afternoon."

"All right, thanks," he moved his horse and stopped and sat, gripped toward the picket line. He wanted to know and didn't want to know either. He had said she would write and tell him how Clay was. In the end he said, "If I can't too much trouble to let me know how the Cross T mail."

Riding along the ridge after before turning south, he could see the wide twisting line of the South Platte river bottom and almost make out the town far across the gently sloping plain. For a man to be this close, hardly a frog's jump away, compared to the trail, he didn't think he was in luck.

He shook his head and put that sight behind his back. His hope was small enough, but it carried him through that afternoon, riding guard on the loosely guarded herd until he thought it was time to get his mail. Then he saw a yellow-legged trooper looking out of the north. He waved the rider over, thanked him and said there was a good poker game going in camp and was alone then to two envelopes in his hand.

He opened the brown official one of the War Department first and was not surprised, only a little heavier inside, to read that it had been determined that he could be no member of the quarantine. The Cross T herd would have to be delivered one mile north of the South Platte as per contract.

The other was a gray paper of the telegraph office. She never was much on letter writing, never a girl to waste a lot of words. It was that in this message when he opened it: "Clay recovering. Will be able to come by train soon." He counted them. Ten exactly to tell him all he needed. He didn't have to guess. They'd be married, he knew, before they started that journey of a week together. He looked at the date. It had been sent August fifteenth. Maybe they were now.

The night when he crossed August twenty-ninth from the cook's alarm was like every other. He watched Steve play at one of the games for a little while, saw him stand up and look around for something, then come on past the firelight.

Afterward he was able to know point and accept it right here. Why not? It's going to be scattered any way. You won't hold it in Ogallala.

What brought Steve to him. But that took time. His first thought was, as Steve came, that he was down at his side without a word, was that the kid was moved by a sort of pity, and that turned him bloody silent. But it wasn't pity for him altogether that had brought Steve here now.

Perhaps that was part of it, a little. Steve knew he was almost back under the tent, and then on some common ground. But what he saw in the hollowed, staring eyes was a loneliness that he understood. Steve knew that black shadow and that was the last thing left.

There comes a time when you can't go any longer alone. "Steve," he said and laid his arm across the drooping shoulders, "buck up. What is it, kid? He closed his hand in a strong grip. "Get it off your mind."

There was a little while a whoop burst from the circle down the road, legged at the card game. From the darkness off toward the head ground he heard Charley Storm's guard sang for an occasion.

A faint smile turned the straight set of his mouth and something in the clowning folk's song lifted the weight in him. Then Steve said, "Lew, what are you going to do?"

"Me?" He hadn't meant to talk about himself. "I don't know exactly. We can salvage something out of this. It won't all be lost. The regulars gone for best, but five dollars a head for hides and tallow, maybe." He figured it up. "That makes fifteen thousand. You can bank the money. Then there's a bunch of a thousand sheeps and young stuff, less two hundred the Cheyennes got. They'll start your herd back in Wyoming. Beef is bound to pick up again. It always does after a drop. Out loud the future didn't sound so bad.

But he saw Steve move his head slowly back and forth, not looking at him. "Not for me, Lew. I told you once I can't go. He paused, staring down. "I've got to go back."

"Back where?"

"Texas. It's like you said; I'm going to be on the jump for the rest of my life whenever a badge shows up. Once I thought I could face it like that. But I can't. I found that out the other day. I'd rather hang than be on the dodge."

It was bitter talk and a little young in its remorse, he felt, swinging too far from one side clear to the other. "Want to let me in?" he asked. "Where did it start, the bank?"

Steve nodded. "That's it. Earlier in the evening I was with the bunch who did it and rode with them. Crazy Woman afterward that night. No one would believe this. I got drunk and haven't any idea what happened between. But they said I held the horses and killed Steve Rayburn when he found me. It's the word of four of them against mine."

"Now wait," Lew said. He pulled his arm from the bent shoulders. "Who were the four? Do I know them?"

"One, Ed Spahn. I don't think you've ever saw him other than. But they're riding with the Open A. This didn't tell much that he had not already guessed. He let Steve come in and when no more seemed coming he asked, "Where was Clay come in?" And then to keep it straight, he added, "I'll tell you what I know. Clay let some of the bunch run off your father's horses at the start. That put the traitor's brand on him right there."

Steve's head turned beside him sharply. Lew, it wasn't that! Clay tried to stand in front of him and caught himself. I know how you feel about him. You've had plenty of reason to hate him on the trail. But after the robbery, let Clay know the fix I was in. Ed Spahn and the other three hadn't joined the Open A. They were only drifting. I'd picked up. Clay made a deal with them to get clean out of the country with what they knew. Their price was twenty head of saddle stock. I know now it was a blunder. They didn't leave and came back for more, and then riding north with the Open A, they could hold over both of us who they knew. Hadn't you thought of that?"

No, he hadn't. Not Clay's part, trying to help Steve; and it held him silent thinking you could never think he'd judge any man. Clay, he thought before, had his tail in some kind of a crack. Tracing it through those unexplainable times of letting Spahn run him and seeming only trying to block the Cross T herd he could see now how Clay was setting under the Open A's threat of knowing Steve Arnold had killed a man. It was like Clay, Clay, to make one blunder and then horn in deeper in his bullshy way.

"Lew," Steve was saying, "you should've let me go into the Open A. Clay did. That was my fight. We talked about it. If we got Spahn and the other three in a corner we'd wipe them out."

"If Clay thought that," he said, "something broke loose in his brain! But he's getting along all right." He hadn't told about the telegram. He got word from Jay today. They'd be up here pretty soon. He thought about it. "They'll be married, Steve. I figure."

BIG VS. LITTLE FARMERS

Forty years have passed between the high-business battles of Teddy Roosevelt and Cousin FDR, but one issue which plagued the former is also plaguing the latter and is yet before congress. It is the question whether government irrigation, government water, and government reclamation shall benefit the big landowner or the small.

The issue is now one of the hottest fights both in California and in congress, where Secretary of the Interior Ickes has been called to testify on a rider which Congressmen Elliott and Carter of California have skillfully smuggled into the rivers and harbors bill—a rider permitting big landowners in California's central valley to benefit from government low-cost irrigation.

The question in Teddy Roosevelt's day was whether any farmer holding more than 160 acres should benefit from government irrigation. The issue arose when the land kings of the Far West wanted to develop their ranches and speculative holdings through irrigation at government expense.

The West was for it, but the East objected. Eastern states claimed they would be footing the tax bill and that Western irrigation would come out of their pockets. The West replied: "You best bet, but the fact of that day would provide benefits for small Eastern farmers who migrated westward tomorrow."

Paul, like every other Jewish boy, had learned a trade, something he could do with his hands. He was a tent and sail maker, and was not ashamed to work at his trade. A more recent follower of Christ put it thus: "My business is to preach the gospel, but I pack meat to pay the expenses."

But notice that Paul did not let this work become the chief thing. As the Lord prospered him he did not decide to "go back into business with his own hands." He began as was his custom, in the synagogue, presenting Christ to Jews and Greeks. The Jews opposed him (see v. 6), and then Paul addressed himself to the Gentiles.

God prospered that ministry and encouraged Paul by a vision, assuring him that the Lord had "much people" (v. 10) in that wicked city. The love of Christ in Paul thus shone forth as a light in the darkness of the Gentile superstition.

Love was something which the heathen world of Paul's day had so misrepresented and distorted (even as it has today) that it needed definition and exposition. So we have:

II. An Explanation of Christian Love (I Cor. 13).

This is one of the outstanding chapters of all Scripture. Its magnificent discussion of the greatest of all themes has drawn forth many choice expositions.

The thought centers around the simplicity of the loveless life, the glory of the life of love, and the eternal unchangeable power of love. We gather it up in three words:

1. Indispensable (vv. 1-3). Without love man's attainments are empty. He may become an orator with a "heavenly" gift of speech, but unless he truly loves, his elegant and persuasive talk is just a meaningless noise. How true!

One may also have marvelous gifts of prophetic insight and a wonderful feeling for God, and find that it is all a vain and empty exercise without love. Our world leaders could well study that verse just now. Sacrificial interest in the needs of mankind is a fine trait in man, but it must have the love of Christ in it or it is too pitiful.

We think of feeding the hungry nations of the earth, let us not forget to make it worth while by doing it in Christian love.

2. Incomparable (vv. 4-7). The standard for the life of a Christian is a very high one; in fact, it is impossible of attainment apart from the grace and power of Christ. No man can do it for himself. He must be patient, proud, suspicious, resentful, etc. The new nature in Christ is just the opposite, for love rules.

Note that phrase "endureth all things." It is not that in these days when it is so hard to keep on going, or as someone said, "to keep on keeping on." Love endures all things.

3. Immutability (vv. 8-13). All things in life change and pass away. Love is eternal and unchangeable. Even the spiritual gifts have their fulfillment and pass from view, but love shall endure through all eternity. God, the Eternal One, is love (I John 4:8, 16).

When we are able to that perfectness of understanding which is to be ours one day, when we shall know even as God now knows us, there will be no love as the supreme gift, eternal in its power and validity.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

As busy as he is, President Roosevelt will soon be called upon to settle the question of whether a rail worker's vacation week is six or seven. Railroad workers were granted a week's vacation as part of the wage compromise last year, but the railroad industry now claims that FDR meant the vacation should be six days, not seven. If the railroad workers get seven days, they'll stay away Sunday, which is a holiday anyway, plus Monday, or an actual total of eight days.

FOUR-Fs

Despite all the army howls for 4-Fs to get into war plants, it remains a fact that physical examination in many plants is so stiff that they can't get in. In fact, the physical in some plants is stiffer than in the army.

Many a patriotic 4-F has worn out shoeleather making the rounds of war plants, only to find that he can't get in. A punctured eardrum, for instance, is considered just as important in a war plant as in the army.

In recent weeks, helmed steps have been taken to relax some of these physical restrictions, but much still remains to be done. So you can't blame a lot of the 4-Fs if they aren't in war plants.

Another difficulty which the War Manpower commission might well dig into is the fact that anyone can quit work in a vital war plant without a certificate of availability, cannot transfer to another war plant without a permit, not until after a 90-day period.

In other words, you can step out of an aircraft factory or a synthetic rubber plant and go to work in a harbor ship or at a hootch stand, or just loaf at home. They are not essential industries. But if you want to switch to munitions plant, you can't without a certificate of availability (which you probably can't get), or without waiting the required cooling-off period of 90 days.

As busy as he is, President Roosevelt will soon be called upon to settle the question of whether a rail worker's vacation week is six or seven. PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4 I Corinthians 13:1-13. GOLDEN TEXT—But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.—I Corinthians 13:13.

Who is a Christian? One might answer a number of ways. He is one who has been saved by the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ. He is one who seeks to live a life in accordance with the will of God. He is a witness for God, and so on. But the answer that the whole world understands is a life in which the redeeming love of Christ begets a true love for one's fellow man.

1. An Example of Christian Love (Acts 18:1-4).

Teaching and preaching are God's ordained way for presenting the truth. He is effective, but only when done by one whose life exemplifies the truth. In his letter to the Corinthians Paul gives the greatest discussion of love known to the world, but before he wrote it he had lived that truth before them. The Holy Spirit spoke through him of love, because he had already lived the truth of it.

Two things appear here: Paul was:

1. Working (vv. 1-3). The world's most distinguished missionary and preacher, Paul, was in Corinth. Where was the welcoming committee of local dignitaries? There was none. Whose comfortable home would receive him? None was there. He was the lot of the pioneer for Christ. He had to hunt up a Jewish fellow craftsman and go to work to earn his bread.

Paul, like every other Jewish boy, had learned a trade, something he could do with his hands. He was a tent and sail maker, and was not ashamed to work at his trade. A more recent follower of Christ put it thus: "My business is to preach the gospel, but I pack meat to pay the expenses."

But notice that Paul did not let this work become the chief thing. As the Lord prospered him he did not decide to "go back into business with his own hands." He began as was his custom, in the synagogue, presenting Christ to Jews and Greeks. The Jews opposed him (see v. 6), and then Paul addressed himself to the Gentiles.

God prospered that ministry and encouraged Paul by a vision, assuring him that the Lord had "much people" (v. 10) in that wicked city. The love of Christ in Paul thus shone forth as a light in the darkness of the Gentile superstition.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night... about all the grain used to distill was alcohol not really being used up. She didn't realize it, either."
"It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling... the part recovered is a highly-prized concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain... products rich in vitamins B1 and B2... so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."

HANNAH HASTYWASH

— who habitually overloads her washing machine

Overloading a washer strains the motor and decreases washing efficiency. Too heavy a load on wringer may lock rolls and even strip gears. So don't try to handle too many clothes at one time in a Mrs. Hastywash. Follow manufacturer's recommendations for loading. And check these other points on washer care:

- Don't plug in while agitator or wringer are in gear. You may blow a fuse.
- Empty pins, nails, etc., from pockets to avoid damage to water pump.
- Remove buckles, large buttons, etc., to prevent chewing up of wringer rolls.
- Lift agitator and clean agitator shaft frequently to prevent "freezing" of agitator in one position.
- Release pressure on wringer rolls when not in use. Saves springs and rubber.
- Rinse tub and agitator thoroughly after each washing. Remove all soap curds and lint. Leave cover off tub until dry to prevent musty odor.
- If stored near dust source, cover washer when not in use.
- Lubricate your washer regularly, following manufacturer's directions.

Your washing machine is more valuable than ever in these days of household help shortage. Give it the care and attention it needs. Make it last!

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

This is a Tried and Proved Idea

Droped in to see Judge Cunningham the other night. Got to talking about one thing and another including the brewers' self-regulation program.

The judge settled back in his easy chair, stretched his legs full length and took a few puffs on the old briar.

"You know, Joe," he said, "this business of self-regulation is nothin' new. Self-regulation is what the doctors had in mind when they organized the American Medical Association."

"For the same purpose, the legal profession has the Bar Association, professional base-hell has Judge Landis and the motion picture industry has Will Hays.

"In the same spirit of cooperation, the makers of malt beverages formed the Brewing Industry Foundation to insure their products bein' sold on a high and moral plane."

"Yes," I agreed, "and from where I sit, they're doin' a darn fine job of it. The Foundation's Kentucky committee is certainly an outstanding example!"

OUR FARM NEWS

Orchard Grass Can Be 3-Way Crop

How orchard grass may be grown as a triple-production crop is brought out in an article from the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. It can be grazed in early spring, a seed crop harvested about midsummer, and then it can be grazed again or cut for hay.

Orchard grass is well adapted to all parts of Kentucky, the college says. The interest in good pastures has increased the demand for seed. Formerly about a third of the orchard grass seed used in this country came from Denmark. That supply is now cut off. Also large quantities of seed are needed for export to England.

Farmers are told that orchard grass seed production is profitable at present. Prices are high, and a crop of seed provides a substantial cash income or saves spending money for seed, without materially lessening the feed produced by the crop. The stubble

College Furnishes Free Information

The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics at Lexington has for free distribution many circulars and leaflets dealing with farm and home subjects. Copies may be had at offices of county agents or county home demonstration agents or directly from the college. Publications of interest just at this time follow:

Farmers Urged To Save Clover Seed

When it is planned to save seed from the second crop of red clover, it is considered better to cut the first crop before it is in full bloom, says a statement from the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics urging farmers to save clover seed wherever practising clover seed.

When the first crop is not cut until full bloom the seed production of the second crop may be reduced as much as 25 percent, says the college. It also is noted that the best hay comes from the first crop when it is cut just before it reaches full bloom. Hence, early cutting means better hay and better seed.

Seed yields of the second crop of red clover in Kentucky are commonly much better than those of the first crop. Hay yields of the second crop, on the other hand, are usually lower than those of the first crop, and the hay less desirable for general feeding. For these reasons, notes the college, if the crop is harvested for seed it is usually the second crop.

Since larger amounts of clover seed than normal are likely to be needed during the year, it is desirable that as much seed as possible be harvested in Kentucky this season.

College Furnishes Free Information

The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics at Lexington has for free distribution many circulars and leaflets dealing with farm and home subjects. Copies may be had at offices of county agents or county home demonstration agents or directly from the college. Publications of interest just at this time follow:

Pulling Tobacco Plants: Control and Prevention of Poultry Parasites; More Profit from Lard; Lamb; Grapes for the Home; Storing Foods in Freezer Lockers; Chickens and Eggs for Home Use; Lime and Phosphate for Kentucky Soils; Conservation Farming; Grow Soil Producing; Recommendations for the Control of Wildlife and Leasport of Burley Tobacco; Plant Hybrid Corn This Year; Grow More Corn With Less Labor; Grow Your Own Food; When to Sell Spring Lambs; Summer Feeding of Dairy Cows; Basement and Cellar Storage Structures; One-Third More Pork with the Same Feed and Labor; More Milk from Family Cows; Home Canning Meats; Cutting, Curing and Storing Hay; How to Raise Turkeys; How to Raise Rabbits; Fresh, Clean Eggs for Market; Hints. Inexpensive Labor; Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables; More Beef from Kentucky Farms; Hints on Marketing Farm Timber; When to Sell Chickens; Beekeeping in Kentucky.

The College of Agriculture and Home Economics has many other publications furnishing information on agriculture and home-making. See a county agent or a home agent for a complete list, or write to the college.

LESS WORK PULLS TOBACCO PLANTS

A leaflet published by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics tells how to save work in pulling tobacco plants. Twelve pictures help to show how some farmers have developed easier and quicker ways of getting this job done. One of the pictures shows the use of a plant-bed board.

"Pulling the plants is tiring at best," says the leaflet, "but the use of a plant-bed board to sit on while pulling across the bed does away with much of the standing, stooping, or squatting that otherwise is necessary. This one device alone, which many farmers have not been using, speeds up the work and does much to make it easier."

KENTUCKY MAN SELLS TOP-FINISHED STEERS

W. J. Foster of Daviess county sold 60 Angus steers which were said by buyers to be the best-finished cattle received at the stockyards in Evansville, Ind., in two years. They averaged 1,100 pounds. All but one sold for 16½ cents, that one bringing two cents less a pound. Far mAgent John E. McClure notes that 19 of the steers had been bred by Mr. Foster.

DRY SUDS EASES HOUSE CLEANING

A new way to make house-cleaning jobs easier and more effective, is causing no small interest among homemakers in at least 30 counties in Kentucky. Following demonstrations of ways to use dry suds given by Miss Ida C. Hagman, of the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics, homemakers have given lampshades, upholstered furniture, rugs, window shades, and many other household articles, new usefulness.

FERTILIZER BOOSTS ONE-SUCKER YIELD

Charles E. Neely of Simpson county proved last year that a liberal use of fertilizer will result in a high yield of one-sucker tobacco. On 4.1 acres, he harvested 2,180 pounds per acre. Farm Agent Woodrow Cooles says that Neely used approximately 10 loads of stable manure to the acre, a part of which was turned under and, in addition, he broadcast 500 pounds of 20 percent phosphate and used 200 pounds of 4-12-8 at the row.

In Elliott county, farmers will increase their planting of hybrid corn to approximately 3,500 acres this year.

Farmers in Rockcastle county are improving pastures and growing legume hay to provide more feed for dairy cattle.

THE CURCULIO IS NOW ACTIVE IN NORTHERN KENTUCKY ORCHARDS

According to report from Albert Kenneweg and other men cooperating with the Northern Kentucky Insectary and Spray Service, curculio is out in considerable numbers in Northern Kentucky orchards now. The curculio was found on peach and plum trees.

Mr. W. D. Armstrong, Horticulturist, suggests that you do something to learn the condition in your own orchard. Records show that this year adults are ready to lay soon after they appear in the orchards.

USE TIMELY SPRAYS AND CONTROL CURCULIO

Where adults are found, a spray of 2½ pounds arsenate of lead, 2½ pounds of lime and 2 pounds of zinc sulfate per 100 gallons, is suggested. If no zinc sulfate is available, increase the lime to 8 pounds. Repeat this curculio spray in about 10 days, adding 6 pounds of wettable sulfur for peach scab control also.

4-H GIRL MAKES MONEY FROM PIGS

Lydia Fairchild, Wayne county 4-H club girl, recently sold 10 six-month-old pigs weighing 1,890 pounds, receiving the Louisville market price. Previously she sold a litter of 10 pigs for $300. They weighed almost 2,000 pounds two days before they were five months old.

FARM LABOR NOTES

Sheep Shearing—Large numbers of requests for sheep shearing are being received at the county office. Some of the custom operators began work Monday morning of this week. Higher prices are asked by some custom operators this year. The office will supply all requests with the list of available custom operators and the farmers where possible, should contact the operator direct. All assistance possible will be rendered farmers needing help.

Tractor Plowing—Farmers are as late this year in their spring plowing as they were in 1943. Farmers owning tractors and custom operators will play a most important role in getting land prepared for planting. Farmers who have tractors with which they would assist neighbors and all custom operators with equipment for hire are urged to notify the County Agent's office. Farmers who must hire extra equipment or help are urged to notify the office at the earliest possible date. It is often impossible to have equipment available exactly on the day needed.

Several applications for day and month hired help are on file at the office. Everyone who knows of unemployed help available for farm workers is urged to notify Will Smith at Burlington or the County Agent's office.

FRUIT NEWS

Peach and plum curculio (worms that make wormy peaches) were out in large numbers on peaches the last part of the past week. Peach growers cooperating in the Northern Kentucky Insectary program were notified to use at the earliest possible date, a spray containing 2½ pounds of arsenate of lead, 2 pounds of zinc sulphate per 100 gallons of water. The spray should be repeated in 10 to 14 days.

C. Liston Hempling of Constantine, reported he completed spraying a large peach orchard with the above mixture last Saturday morning.

Apples not properly sprayed this year, may be badly affected with scab. The season so far has been excellent for scab infection. Codling moths that make wormy apples may be expected to begin their infestation locally around May 15th. A poison spray should be applied.

Grapes will in all probability be affected with rot unless they are sprayed before bloom. Follow closely the college recommended spray schedule available at the county office.

Prospects so far are for another good fruit crop. Growers who are not thoroughly familiar with needed spray applications should secure leaflets at the County Agent's Office giving this information.

RE-OPEN ROCK QUARRY

Fleming county, cooperating with other agencies, has made arrangements for the re-opening of an old rock quarry to supply lime at the rate of around 30 tons a day. A power spreader has been purchased by the soil conservation district. The lime will sell at $1.25 per ton, with 75 cents per ton charged for spreading, and five cents per mile for hauling.

HOMEMAKERS HOLD DAFFODIL EXHIBIT

More than 300 daffodil blooms were entered by members of homemakers' clubs of Shelby county in their fifth annual daffodil show held at the home of Mrs. Ben Allen Thomas, winner of the first prize was Mrs. J. J. Sanford. The growing of daffodils has become a county-wide project for the beautification of homes and roadsides, 5,000 bulbs being ordered each year.

WOMEN'S WORK TO BE MADE SIMPLER

Homemakers in Kentucky are to learn easier and simpler ways to do their work, announces Miss Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home demonstration work. County home demonstration agents will attend a series of conferences with Miss Mary L. Collins of the United States Department of Agriculture, who will show them how housework can be simplified, made easier and done more quickly. Then the home agents will pass on the information to members of homemakers' clubs.

"With time and energy at a premium, and labor scarce, it is up to every homemaker to learn to do her work in the easiest and quickest way possible," said Miss Weldon.

Girls in 16 4-H clubs in Harlan county are learning to sew and to care for their clothes.

Number 59's a "local" . . .

CROWDS don't gather at the station to see No. 59 pull in. She's no sleek streamliner. She sports no fancy trimmings. And she has no jealously-guarded reputation for speed. For . . . No. 59 is "just a local" on the Southern Railway System.

But, when their soldier son came home on furlough . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jones met No. 59.

When new gears were needed to keep farmer Stevens' tractor working on the food front . . . they arrived in the express car on No. 59.

When bad weather came . . . the mail and express and the passengers continued to come in and go out, on No. 59.

Yes, No. 59's a "local" . . . one of the many Southern local passenger and freight trains that proudly serve the wartime South . . . that haul your farm products to market . . . that serve your local industries . . . that stop in your home town to take you where you want to go.

Today, No. 59—and all the other trains of the Southern Railway—are proudly serving the South and helping to speed Victory.

Tomorrow, when Victory comes, they'll still be serving the South . . . proudly supplying the economical, dependable, efficient transportation service upon which the modern, forward-looking Southland is being built.

Mad Dog Killed By Edwin Johnson; All Dogs Quarantined

A dog was killed by Edwin Johnson of Walton, recently when it came into his yard and started a fight with his dog. The dog was foaming at the mouth and after Mr. Johnson had shot the dog he decided that it should be tested for rabies, so he called Sheriff J. T. Williams, who instructed him to cut the dog's head off and send it to the University of Kentucky bacteriology laboratory for rabies test. The test came back to Sheriff Williams saying that the dog had "positive rabies." Part of the letter follows:

Dear Sir:

The bacteriology laboratory of this department reports that an examination of the dog head submitted by you and delivered to the laboratory on May 18, 1944 gave the following results:

POSITIVE for rabies.

Inasmuch as the examination of the brain indicates that this animal was infected with rabies or hydrophobia, anyone exposed to the saliva through handling or feeding within a period of ten days prior to the first symptoms, should take the Pasteur or anti-rabies treatment immediately to guard against contracting the disease.

G. S. Terry,
Assistant Director.

All Dogs Quarantined

The Walton Board of Trustees have ordered that all dogs in the city of Walton must be quarantined until further notice in order to protect people in this vicinity and prevent the spread of this dread disease. Any stray dogs found on the streets will be destroyed.

The people of Walton are requested to comply with this order rigidly since this dog that was killed by Mr. Johnson had been in the town for several days and there is no way to determine how many dogs this animal had attacked in that time.

NOTICE

Bids will be received until June 9 at 7 P. M. (E. W. T.) for four 600x20-8 ply truck tires, and 4 600x20 truck tubes. The town board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Signed D. Hess Vest,
Town Clerk

HOME NURSING FOR BOONE COUNTY

Large classes in Home Nursing have just been organized in Florence and Burlington. The first meeting at Florence will be June sixth at 7:30 P. M., Eastern War Time, at the High School building. A few more may enroll. Any may come to the first meeting and then if they are still interested, may enroll if there are any vacancies left. Burlington date has not been decided on, but it will be around the first of June.

Other places considering classes and it is hoped will soon be organized are Walton, Rabbit Hash, Taylorsport, Hunter, and Petersburg.

Any community who wishes a class in Home Nursing may have it if they have as many as ten entrants who will stick with it. The course is a weekly course covering ten weeks. The classes will be limited to twenty members.

Mrs. Jemison Aylor is Chairman for Home Nursing Classes in Boone County and Miss Elizabeth Lowry is the Instructor.

While the Text Book will be a guide and used in these classes, any group wishing to give most of their time to actual nursing and practical demonstrations may do so.

ALL DAY MEETING

On Sunday, May 28, the Wilmington Baptist Church will conduct an all day meeting at the church.

At this time a second drive for funds for improvement of present building will be made.

All former pastors have been invited to attend.

Rev. O. E. Bradshaw, will deliver the morning sermon, and other pastors will assist with the services.

All are invited to attend, especially all members and former members. Come with well filled baskets. Dinner will be served in the Masonic Hall.

Rev. T. J. Powers, pastor. I. M. Mullins, clerk.

All persons who are interested in the cemetery at Wilmington Baptist Church, Fickburg, Ky., are requested to kindly assist in cleaning the cemetery on Saturday, May 27, or contribute funds. Your assistance is much needed, and will be appreciated.

Farmers Faced With Serious Feed Shortage Problem

Boone County farmers are confronted with a serious livestock feed situation for next winter according to the County Agent's office. Farmers are urged to balance their livestock with the production of feed crops on their farms or the visible available feed supply.

Greatly increased acreages of the feed grains and hay are not in prospect this year in Kentucky. Increased yield per acre has a greater possibility. From a wise management standpoint, each Kentucky farmer can well look into his individual farm enterprises to determine the kinds and quantity of livestock that will give the most returns for the feed and labor that are in prospect on his farm. Necessary adjustments may be (1) stringent culling or even reduction in numbers of livestock for which feed is not in prospect; (2) shift in numbers between kinds of livestock; or (3) even in some cases an expansion in livestock enterprises for which feed and labor are potentially available.

Sheep Shearing In Full Swing Here

Sheep shearing began in full swing the past week. Most of the 14,000 old sheep in the county will be sheared during the next three weeks.

The Wool Pool plans to sell the pooled clip in the very near future. This factor and the fact that both sheep and lambs do better after shearing encourages farmers to shear early.

Rev. Will Smith, County Emergency Farm Labor Assistant, advises that several custom operators are available now for custom work. Farmers who expect to have their sheep sheared by these operators should notify the Co. Agent's office immediately.

CELEBRATE 89th BIRTHDAY

Several gathered at the home of Mrs. Kate Spillman on Sunday to celebrate her 89th birthday. Also Mrs. Lizzie McCormack's 70th birthday. Those present to enjoy the day were: Mrs. Cecil Wagerhauser, of Price Hill, O.; Robert Clarence Spillman of the U. S. M. C. who was home from overseas; Willena and Hilda Spillman and sister friend of Walnut Hills, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. G. Calhoun and sister, Hattie, of Reading, Ohio; Mrs. Sallie Whitson, Mrs. Lizzie McCormack and daughter, Isla; Raymond Scott, Arch Spillman, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Whitson and daughter, Janet. All enjoyed the day and the lovely dinner together.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my appreciation to all my friends who sent me cards, letters, flowers and messages of good will during my illness in the Jewish Hospital. Also thanks to Chambers & Grubbs and their co-helper, Mr. Robert Brush for their kindness in making my trip comfortable to and from the hospital.

Mrs. Ben Cook, 163 S. Main
Walton, Ky.

STATE FAIR TO BE RENEWED

At a meeting of the Kentucky State Fair Board in Frankfort, it was decided that the 1944 State Fair would be held August 28 to September 4 at Churchill Downs in Louisville. The home of the Kentucky Derby was selected as the site for the 1944 Fair because of the lease to the Girdler Corporation of Louisville of the Fair Grounds buildings for war work.

Mrs. Glenna Clegg and son have gone to Batavia, Ohio, to make their home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Thornton.

MILK PRICE INCREASE REQUESTED BY PRODUCERS

Producer organizations of the Cincinnati milk shed requested the A.A.A. Market Administration last Wednesday to increase the price of whole milk from $3.55 for class one milk to $4.00 per hundred. Class two milk will also be increased.

Production cost figures secured from representative farmers definitely showed that the cost of producing milk had risen and that the prices paid producers in other markets had risen while the price paid producers in Cincinnati since 1942 had not changed. The local County Agent attending the meeting reported prospects for a price increase looked favorable.

BUS WRECK TUESDAY MORNING TAKES TWO LIVES

Two persons were fatally injured and 36 others hurt when a Cincinnati-bound Southeastern Greyhound bus wrecked between here and Cincinnati, at Fort Mitchell. The two who were killed were: Hugh Conlee, Cincinnati, driver of the bus; and Miss Sue Hodges, 17, of Crossville, Tenn.

The accident happened at approximately 4:50 a. m. Tuesday. This bus was one earlier than most of the local people ride to work on.

GALLATIN SHERIFF FATHER OF BABY DAUGHTER

Felicitations are being directed to Sheriff Charles V. Hall, of Gallatin county, and Mrs. Hall over the birth of a daughter on Tuesday at the St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Mrs. Hall, the former Margaret Ascraft, and the baby are doing nicely. The Halls have another daughter, Patricia Anita Hall, who is 3.

Ye Editor wants to know where that "boy" is, Charlie?

METHODIST REVIVAL

The revival meeting of the Walton Methodist Church will begin May 29 and continue through June 11th.

Rev. W. E. Garrott, pastor of the Erlanger Methodist Church will assist the pastor, C. G. Dearing during these series of services.

The public is invited to attend these services.

FISH FRY

The members of St. Cecelia Church will entertain with a fish fry and card party Saturday evening, May 27 from 7 to 12 P. M. in the basement of the church. Public invited.

The following members and guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Jones and daughter, Daisy; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Gruesz, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Caroland, C. W. Ransler, Cloyd Johnson, Mrs. Florence Norman, Mrs. Ethaline Whitson, Mrs. Madeline Gault, Mrs. Alene Conner, Mrs. Mary Humphrey, Mrs. Lois Maze, Mrs. Mildred Rice, Helen Ruth Gardner, Mary Rensler, Laura Mae Whitson and hostess, Mrs. Mary Stephens.

The meeting date was changed from Tuesday night to Thursday night.

Gallatin Man Dies Recently At Home

Lloyd S. Kemper, a prominent citizen of Union, near Warsaw, died recently at his home near Warsaw. While in poor health for some time his death came as a surprise to many of his friends and neighbors.

He was the son of W. H. and Eva Ellis Kemper and was born in Gallatin County February 1st, 1889, and passed to the Great Beyond May 12, being at the time of his death 55 years, 3 months and twelve days of age.

He was united in marriage to Miss Lura Bradney, March 30th, 1915. To this union was born one daughter, Evelyn, who with her mother, survive.

He also leaves a half brother, Alfred Kemper, one half-sister, Mrs. Zerella Looz; three small nephews, an aged uncle, Sol Ellis of Lisbon, Indiana, and several cousins.

Funeral services were held at the Carlton Funeral Home, Warsaw, Sunday afternoon with the Rev. Will Smith, pastor of Oakland Baptist Church and the Rev. Bradford Curry, of the Warsaw Baptist Church officiating. The burial was in Warsaw cemetery.

Mrs. W. H. Bertram and children of Greenville, Ohio, are visiting relatives in Walton and Beaver Lick.

On May 1st, William Booth Memorial Hospital inaugurated its eighth Annual Campaign. In order to balance the hospital budget for the year, it was found necessary to raise $34,500. Of this amount, Boone County was given a quota of $850 and Mr. C. W. Ransler was chosen as chairman of this county.

It was indeed a happy and victorious group of workers who assembled at the Masonic Temple, in Covington, on May 17 to hear the final report. Instead of the $34,500 which was the goal, $36,574 was reported in cash and pledges which is $2074 over the top.

Mr. Ransler was able to report the splendid total of $851 for Boone County which exceeded his goal by $201. In addition to this sum, Boone County $500, contributed the generous sum of $800.

Mr. Ransler wishes to heartily thank his devoted and hard-working workers who, by their faithful efforts, made this fine achievement possible. On his own behalf, and on behalf of the hospital, he extends very sincere gratitude and congratulations on a job well done.

The following assumed responsibility for the various districts: Rev. George S. Caroland, Walton; Mrs. H. F. Dresman, Union; Mrs. Lewis Houston, Florence; Mrs. Al. Stephens, Petersburg; Mrs. C. D. Benson, Burlington; Mr. Cloyd Johnson, Beaverlick.

Wool Growers To Meet Saturday

Boone County Wool Pool members are being called to a meeting at 9:00 P. M. Eastern War Time at Burlington on this Saturday May 27th, to decide on a method for selling the 1944 clip, according to E. White, president of the pool.

The pool originally planned to sell the clip under sealed bids. Present Government restrictions requiring that all wool be graded and sold to the Commodity Credit Corporation, makes the former plan impractical.

The Sales Committee has arranged for a plan whereby the wool can be delivered and paid for at a satisfactory price on a similar basis to previous years. Growers will be asked at the meeting Saturday evening to approve this plan before it is finally adopted.

STANLEY R. ALLEN PROMOTED

A letter has been received by Miss Lucy E. Pennington from Stanley R. Allen, stationed in the Southwest Pacific, for 14 months, with the U. S. Marines that he has recently been promoted from Corporal to the rank of Sergeant. His many friends wish him as much success in the future and a speedy return home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Howard have received word that their son-in-law, 1st Sgt. Stanley Kacaba, has arrived in England.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hankinson received a letter from their son, Ed, better known as Hank that he is now somewhere in New Guinea.

William C. Piner, who was recently spending a short leave with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Russell Piner and Mary Lee, has returned to his training base in Washington, D. C. Upon his return he was moved to Little Creek, Va. He has received the advancement in rating from Seaman second class to Coxswain. William has been in the navy since January and the navy life seems to be agreeing with him.

Pvt. Chester Fugate from Camp Gordon, Ga., is spending a ten-day furlough with his wife and children in Richmond.

RECEIVES LETTER FROM BROTHER

Miss Dorothy Brooks of Verona received the following letter from her brother, Pvt. Walter A. Brooks who is stationed in Italy.

Dear Dorothy

Just a few lines to let you know I'm O. K. and received your letter. Glad you got the Purple Heart, its for a shrapnel wound in the hip, but its nothing serious. I didn't even knock me out of action. Have never met anyone that I know, except for one he was an operator on the L&N. Glad to hear you got a good price for your tobacco. I hope you got a little tobacco in every county I have been in, but most of the crops are grapes. Sure will be glad when this is all over, we sure have been going since we have been here. If you can please send me some pictures. I lost all I had in Africa when our boat went down, and that has been over a year ago. I sure have been places since then.

Guess I must close for this time. I hope this leaves everyone in good health. Keep writing when you can, and I will try and do the same. Say hello to everyone for me.

Love to all,
Walter

A SURPRISE PARTY

A surprise birthday party was held at the home of Mrs. Annabel Stephenson of Beaver Lick, Sunday, May 21, in honor of her son, Howard. A delightful dinner was enjoyed by all. Those attending were: Ruth Ann Sleet, Covington; Mary Jane Gibson, Lakonia; Betty Padgett, Covington; Louise Price, both of Covington; Elora Maines, Mary Cecil Ryan, Geneva Coppage, Bobbie Slayback, Bobbie Shields, all of Walton; Bobbie Carroll, Big Bone; Allan Judge, Walton; Mr. and Mrs. George Baker and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Kile, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stephenson and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Stephenson and daughter, all of Walton; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harmon, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Loomis, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Will Blaine and daughter, Dry Ridge; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mann, Mr. Vin Stephenson, of Independence.

Home sewing has been encouraged in Anderson county through the use of dressforms, 60 having been made the past month.

In Leslie county, 156 gallons of home seed corn have been distributed to 4-H club members, with a total of 88 result demonstrations.

Carroll county farmers have purchased twice as much fertilizer this spring as was used last year, according to local dealers.

TRIMBLE TOMATO CROP PROFITABLE

More than 16 tons of tomatoes to the acre were produced by James McKinney of Trimble county on two acres last year, bringing him an income of $980. He applied 600 pounds of 3-9-6 fertilizer to the acre, and set plants every 35 inches in rows 38 inches apart.

Another grower in the same county, D. E. Barnes, produced an average of 13 tons an acre on seven acres, returning him approximately $1,855. Mr. Barnes plans to build up the soil better than last year when he used 1,100 pounds of rock phosphate with an application of 2-12-6 fertilizer.

Considering the growing season last year, these records are excellent, notes Farm Agent J. D. Tolbert, as the county average is around five or six tons to the acre. Tomatoes are one of the most important war food crops, and farmers are being encouraged to grow as many as possible.

It is estimated that 85 percent of Hancock county's corn acreage will be planted to hybrid seed, U. S. 13 and KY. 103 leading in popularity.

A car of ammonium nitrate, ordered by the Shelby county Farm Bureau, was used principally on pastures, grain and row crops.

GUARD YOUR CARD!

A social security account number shows that the worker has an insurance account with the United States Government—Federal old-age and survivors insurance.

Insurance policies must be protected and that is why they are kept in safe places. The social security account card is evidence of a worker's insurance policy with the government. Give it the same care as any insurance policy, advises William J. McCauley, manager of the Social Security Board's field office, located in the Post Office Building, Covington, Kentucky.

For every account number it gives out, the Social Security Board sets up a separate account. The number on the card is the same as the number on the account. With the worker's name it identifies the account.

Old age is not the only risk the account insures against. The purpose of this insurance is to pay not only a regular monthly income when workers are 65 and stop work, but to pay benefits to the family if the worker dies. These monthly insurance payments are based on wages in the jobs that come under the old-age and survivors insurance system. Every day's pay on such a job helps to build up this family insurance protection. Be sure that these records are kept under one account number.

Families need this protection. When a worker or his family makes an insurance claim, his account should contain a complete record of ALL his pay in work that comes under the social security system. Even if he works only part time in such jobs, his wages should be recorded under his account. For further information, inquire at the Social Security Board office at the above address.

Ninety percent of the 4-H club members in Nicholas county are members of the labor project.

More than 5,000 sheep in Hardin county are insured against loss by dogs.

On The Stage Of The RKO Albee Theater Cincinnati

Edgar Kennedy, well known screen comedian, has hundreds of picture comedies to his credit. It will be the featured funster with Frankie Masters and his orchestra opening in person at the RKO Albee Theater, Cincinnati for the week beginning Friday, May 26. Masters will bring with him an assortment of singers and instrumentalists who have become very popular with music enthusiasts all over the country. Besides his specialty artists Masters on this show will also present Ann Rooney, popular motion picture starlet, Wilton and O'Rourke, rated as one of the best acts in vaudeville, and The Diamond Brothers who present a specialty that is said to be different from others in all respects. On the screen will be seen the eminent star of stage and pictures, Basil Rathbone, as Sherlock Holmes in the latest of the series entitled "The Scarlet Claw."

LEAFLETS HELP IN WAR FOOD PROGRAM

To help in the wartime production of food and feed, the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics has prepared a number of timely leaflets. All are free and are available at offices of the college or home agents, or from the college. Of special interest at this time are the following: More Profit from Late Lambs; Puling Tobacco Plants; Soil Tests for Lime and Fertilizer; Grow More Corn with Less Labor; Keep Fowl Pox out of your Flock; How to Can Fruits and Vegetables; Making Cottage Cheese in the Home; Farm Butter Making; More Beef from Kentucky Cows and Your Vegetable Garden.

25 EES; 48 LAMBS

Hamilton speaks of Garrard county reports a crop of 48 lambs from 25 ewes. He is feeding corn, barley and alfalfa hay, and free access to a cover crop of barley. Farm Agent Raymond O. Johnson says that many farmers in the county are using penicillin for the first time.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Burley tobacco growers in Breckinridge county realized $1,783,434 from their crop of 4,619 acres last year.

In readiness for spring and summer sewing, more than 50 sewing machines in Warren county were cleaned and adjusted in a month.

The demand for hybrid seed corn in Pike county has doubled over a year ago, farmers using KY. 203 or KY. 72B for white corn, and KY. 102 and KY. 103 for yellow.

In Laurel county, 4-H club girls arranged a display of articles made from feed sacks; one member made 61 different articles.

CONSERVATION FARMING

Kenton Soil Conservation District, Julian M. Dyer.

Just how much does conservation farming mean to you when you stop to think of it? We are all accustomed to thinking of the conservation of stock water in Kenton County, but are we really thinking enough of the conservation of the soil? It is true when a farm reservoir is constructed we have conserved a certain amount of water, but Conservation Farming is far more than that. It is true that we often consider the shortage of water the most important problem on Kenton County farms; but are our farmers really conscious of the speed at which our soils are washing away especially from cultivated fields?

THE DISTRICT FARM PLAN:

The Soil Conservation District was created by an act of the State Legislature of Kentucky and has set about to help the individual farmer to solve his problems of soil and water. The District works on individual farms under a written farm plan covering the entire farm and is concerned with the conservation of the soil as well as the water. Such a plan deals with the following farm practices:

1. Contour farming—farming on the level, across the slope which is highly effective on slowing the speed of the run-off water thereby reducing the amount of soil loss. It is interesting to note the first soil to wash away is usually the finest particles and the most fertile soil we have.

2. Laying out and construction of diversion ditches to remove hilltop water from the steeper slopes.

3. Gully control by diverting the water from gullied areas and encouraging grass cover.

4. Developing a good permanent sod in natural drains for water disposal from diversions or from land farmed on the contour.

5. Elimination of slopes too steep for cultivation by converting such slopes to a permanent pasture sod, where the sod will be kept in place and where a permanent income may be produced.

6. Proper rotation of crops to include a clean tilled crop followed by a cover crop and that followed by a temporary pasture or meadow for two years or longer, keeping each field in sown crops at least three years out of four and the liberal use of lime, phosphate and manure.

7. Pasture improvement by proper use of lime and phosphate, reseeding of grass and clover mixture, the manuring or mulching of pastures, especially on thin or galled spots and the moving of weeds.

8. The use of supplemental pasture to tide over periods of drought or dormance and to protect permanent pasture from over grazing.

9. The proper development of stock water by the use of farm reservoirs, gully pool dams or spring improvement.

10. Proper use of fish and wildlife as a supplement to the farm food supply.

Call at the Soil Conservation District office on the second floor of the Bank of Independence and let the District assist you in formulating a complete farm plan for Conservation Farming or leave your application with the County Agent. Service by the District is free for the asking.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YRS.

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disappeared the second day. Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

Warmer weather means your electric refrigerator must work longer and harder to protect your perishables and keep you supplied with extra quantities of ice cubes, cold drinks and frozen desserts. So give it the care and attention it needs to operate with maximum efficiency and economy. Keep unit compartment clean. Use fast freezing only when necessary. Defrost at least once a week. And if you have reasons to suspect mechanical trouble, call in a competent serviceman NOW. Repairs take longer these busy wartime days and if you wait until something serious develops you may find yourself without refrigeration for a time just when you need it most.

NICHOLSON

"Cast thy bread upon the waters and thou shalt find it after many days."

Grateful appreciation is extended to the Oak Island Baptist Church for kindly sending $25.00 toward defrayal of our hospital expenses, also to the Missionary Society for a lovely cluster of red and white carnations which lent beauty and fragrance to our hospital room.

Most heartily do we thank Mrs. Oscar Rankin for a lovely tray of delicious dinner.

On Mother's Day, Mrs. Everett Bolen was the happy recipient of a number of lovely remembrances, but especially was she pleased to receive a basket of fragrant blossoms from her overseas soldier son "Boots" Sunday morning, kindly delivered by Rev. A. K. Johnson.

Miss Ruth Schmidt was a recent pleasant caller.

Deeply appreciated were refreshments from Mrs. Harvey Fick and little Miss Janet.

On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Stephenson paid a pleasant call. Her soldier son, Donald, who is serving the armed forces somewhere in England, sent a telegram of "Mother's Day" greetings to his parents, which was highly appreciated.

BEAN BEETLES

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics

Beans suffer from three foliage-eating beetles. The most serious, of course, is the Mexican bean beetle, for it can make it impossible to grow any beans at all, any part of the season. Those angular, gnawed places in the leaves are its sign.

The other two are the southern bean beetle and the spotted cucumber beetle. Both these make roundish holes on plantings, but they leave beans when their more favorite herbage (weeds perhaps) becomes plentiful. Their damage is magnified when beans grow slowly, as in cool weather, but it is rarely fatal.

The rule applies that any leaf-eating insect can be stopped by spreading poison before it, but because of the tenderness of bean foliage, none of the arsenates are safe to use except magnesium arsenate, in a spray, 2 rounded tablespoons to 1 gallon of water, or, as a dust, 1 part to 6 of lime. Another dust that is safe is made of calcium arsenate, 1 part; sulphur 1 part; lime 4 parts. The arsenates are human poisons, and none should be used after pods have begun to form. Use only rotenone dust or spray. Because of the cost and the scarcity of rotenone, however, it should be saved until it must be used.

For the southern beetle and the spotted beetle, the dust or spray need merely be put on the foliage, while the holes begin. These insects eat the leaves through leaves. However, for the Mexican beetle, the only effective place is on the leaves' under sides, as it feeds only there.

For the Mexican beetle, too, a special schedule must be observed based on the beetle's own, which is this: Egg-laying proceeds for 10 days, and the eggs hatch in about 10 days. Also, the recommended control materials hold their potency easily 10 days, which makes the spraying or dusting schedule this:

At the first appearances of eggs dust or spray, and in 10 days, dust spray again. Thus have been surrounded all the egg-clusters of that generation, and in time to prevent the larvae from getting very far. Marking the date on a calendar, and counting 20 days ahead, prepares the gardener to cope with the next generation. In this state, in normal summers, there are at least 2 generations, and sometimes part of a third. If each is checked as it comes, the customary late summer holocaust of hungry Mexican beetles will not develop.

ON KENTUCKY FARMS

Homemakers in Anderson county have collected 2,150 lbs. of fat for salvage in the past seven months.

The municipal garden in Danville, Boyle county, which had 48 gardens last year, will have 56 gardens this spring.

It is estimated that several thousand pounds of phenothiazine will be used by sheep raisers in Shelby county this year.

In Fleming county, tobacco seed dealers report that the sale of Ky. 16 and Ky. 41A has surpassed other varieties.

Approximately 90 percent of the farmers in Taylor county will use phenothiazine for their sheep this year.

In Scott county, more farmers than usual are fertilizing burley heavily many using a ton or more of 8-8-6 to the acre.

Unusual amounts of bordeaux, lime and bluestone have been purchased by tobacco growers in Warren county this spring.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Dad Gets a Heap of Satisfaction out of Life

Dad Hopkins is not as young as he used to be. But he's still got the energy to cultivate a big victory garden and to keep the grounds around his home colorful and bright with Kentucky's native shrubs and flowers.

Only yesterday I stopped by the Hopkins' to admire his efforts. "I don't know of anything," Dad said, "that's calculated to lift a fellow's morale more than to work with flowers. Specially these days, when a man's got five sons in the armed forces."

"After I'm through of an evening," Ma and I sit here on the porch and just revel in the beauty of nature—with an ice-cold glass of buttermilk and me with my pipe and a mellow glass of beer."

From where I sit, things like that are typically American. They're things we're fighting for. They're things our boys on the battlefields abroad are looking forward to when they get back home again.

OUR FARM NEWS

ADVOCATES REDUCING NUMBER OF TOBACCO PLANTS TO THE ACRE

Setting fewer plants to the acre, thereby reducing the number of sticks produced, would help to solve the tobacco problem, says Russell Hunt of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Thousands of farmers now cutting 1,700 to 1,900 sticks to the acre could reduce the number to 1,300 to 1,500 without losing quality, he believes. And, of course, it would be easier to handle 1,400 sticks to the acre than 1,800 or 1,900.

There will not be many tobacco barns built, Mr. Hunt notes. "Generally speaking, farmers will be forced to house their crops in existing buildings or, at best, they will add a few sheds or extend the length of their barns one or two bents. Scores of men have inquired about adding sheds to barns. I think no greater mistake could be made than to build a 12 or 14-foot shed to the side of a curing barn. It would likely impair the value of the building for curing tobacco and result in houseburn, particularly if the season is unfavorable for curing. My recommendation would be to add a bent or two rather than to build a shed.

"The first thing I would recommend for curing would be sufficient ventilation. The number of side ventilators on most barns could be doubled or trebled with beneficial results. I also would recommend ridge ventilators. In case the tier poles in a barn are closer than four feet up and down, it would be desirable to rearrange them so they are at least four feet apart.

"I believe the careful farmer will make every effort to grow his full tobacco allotment and that by readjusting his spacing in the field he will find that it will be entirely possible from the standpoint of labor and housing facilities to grow his full allotment."

MADISON FARMERS FRAISE BALBO RYE

Farmers in Madison county are loud in their praise of balbo rye, notes Farm Agent J. Lester Miller. Even with an abnormally late spring, many have been able to take care of their stock without buying additional roughage. James Gentry reported that with his balbo rye, he was able to take care of 50 steers, while James W. Deatridge, also of Richmond, was able to pasture his cattle to pasture by feeding green balbo rye cut from a seeding with crimson clover.

BIG SAVING COMES FROM HOME-SEWING

That hundreds of dollars were saved in Kentucky during the past year by homemakers who made clothing for themselves and their families, was asserted by Miss Dorothy Threlkeld, clothing specialist at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. More than 20,000 families have taken advantage of the clothing instruction given to homemakers' clubs in 51 counties. The unusual interest in home sewing, the specialist said, was due to inferior quality of ready-made garments, their high cost, to the patriotic desire to save, and to gasoline rationing. Information on how to clean and adjust sewing machines, making dressforms, altering patterns, making different styles of neckwear, and learning simple tricks in keeping clothes in good condition has proved popular, as have the lessons on the construction of wearing apparel.

CLOSE CLIPPING INJURES LAWNS

Close clipping of lawns permits the sun to burn the grass crowns, warns the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. "Let the grass grow until it is at least 4 inches tall, and preferably 5 or 6 inches, and then mow it just as high as the lawn mower will cut," says the college's statement. For large country lawns, it is recommended that regular farm mowing machines be used, cutting the grass several inches off the ground.

SLOPING FLOORS SAVE MANY PIGS

Farmers using farrowing houses with sloping floors have had unusually good results in saving pigs, according to reports received by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Best results have been obtained where the floors slope approximately one and a half inches to the food and the house was equipped with a 12-inch board across the lower side, about 10 inches from the floor, so the pigs could get under it for protection from the sow.

Ted Axton in Oldham county owns five sows that farrowed 43 pigs in houses with tilted floors, with only one pig mashed. Ten sows farrowing 80 pigs on level ground crushed 20 of them.

Griffith Brothers of Tolu community in Crittenden county report the loss of one pig due to crushing, from eight litters farrowed on sloping floors.

On the farm of John C. Peterson in Marion county, three pigs were killed in 14 litters farrowed on sloping floors, and three were mashed in two litters farrowed on level floors.

No pigs were overlaid in four litters farrowed in tilted houses on the F. W. Owens farm, Worthington community, Jefferson county.

IN HOT WEATHER FOR BETTER EGGS

Hot weather brings problems in handling eggs. The Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics lists the following things that can be done to help preserve egg quality and prevent loss:

Produce infertile eggs. Gather eggs often—two or three times a day. Produce clean eggs. Arrange nests so the hens enter from the back. Keep ample nesting material in the nests. Keep litter on the floor and keep hens away from the droppings by placing wire over the roosts. Hold eggs in as cool a place as possible. Market eggs often. Watch for lice and mites.

Says C. E. Harris of the College: "Just because things are not favorable now should not discourage good feeding and management of the growing chicks. The way we care for them will determine what we get back next fall."

HOME SEWING SAVES IN WEBSTER COUNTY

That home sewing has saved farm women in Webster county considerable sums of money during the past months is told by Mrs. Charles Ogden, clothing leader of homemakers' clubs in that county. Approximately 1,532 garments have been made in the past few months, which she said conservatively estimated would have cost $3,422 bought ready made. In addition 1,136 pieces were remodeled. Mrs. Ogden further reports that women made 3,621 garments wear longer by mending, and that more than a thousand articles were made of feed sacks. They included children's garments and many different household items.

HOMEMAKERS' CLUB PLANS RECREATION

Member of the Oscar Homemakers' Club in Ballard county are of the opinion that farm families do a better wartime job if they get together occasionally for recreation. During the winter months, the club arranged weekly parties at different homes. Community a socials at the school building included taffy pulls, folk games, picture shows and old-fashioned box suppers. Home agent Susan Davis reports that more than 100 were in attendance at a recent meeting.

Forty-four farmers in Davies county bought 65,200 pounds of ammonium nitrate, most of which was applied to pastures and meadows.

TOBACCO INTEREST HIGH IN ANDERSON

That tobacco growers in Anderson county are making every effort to increase their yields this year, according to reports received by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics, is being treated their plant beds with bluestone-lime mixture, and 50 or more have used 1,000 pounds of fertilizer to the acre. Approximately 80 percent of the crop will be planted to a root-rot resistant variety.

SETS LAMB RECORD

Avery Carr of the Pilot Oak community in Graves county has a lamb production record that was hard to beat, says County Agent Wilson R. Hoover. Thirteen ewes have 22 living lambs. One ewe had triplets, seven had twins and five had singles.

BALBO RYE THRIVES

Balbo rye showed up well under unfavorable conditions in Trigg county. Herbert Light broadcast balbo rye and wheat by hand in the same field on the same day. The rye established a good root system, according to County Agent Keith E. Venable, while the wheat was slow in getting started and made less than a fourth as much growth.

EQUIPMENT MODELS MADE BY 4-H'ERS

Models of labor-saving pieces of equipment were made by 4-H club boys of Crayne and Oak Grove, Crittenden county. Included were two types of chicken-feeders, a hog-feeder, a cattle grain bunk, a cattle hay rack, a lamb self-feeder, a fruit-drying rack and a farm gate. Following an exhibition of the articles at all of the club meetings in the county, other clubs are making similar pieces.

RECOVER AUTO SEATS

Instead of buying new pieces of furniture, members of the Farmington Homemakers' Club in Graves county are saving money by recovering seats from discarded automobiles. A frame is made the correct height for the seat, then a slip cover is tailored.

The result is a modern-style divan or chair, comfortable and attractive.

The Bellevue high school science classes in Campbell county are growing plants for Victory gardeners; last year they grew 20,000 plants.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night... about all the grain used to distill war-alcohol not really being used up. She didn't realize it, either."

"It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling... the part recovered is a highly-priced concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain... products rich in vitamins B1 and B2... so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."

5TH WAR LOAN DRIVE STARTS JUNE 12; $600,000 FROM BOONE

Sunday Afternoon Recreation For Youngsters Is Plan

Plans are underway at the Walton Christian Church to supervise recreation for children and young people on Sunday afternoons, from 4 until 6.

It is hoped that this project, sponsored by the Willing Workers Class, will grow into a community recreation center.

The people of the community have realized for some time the need of wholesome recreation for our young people and children.

Beginning Sunday, June 12, there will be facilities for badminton, croquet, an horseshoe pitch in the back of the church and ping pong and shuffle board in the basement for young people, ages 12 to 24.

Mrs. Mildred Rice has offered the use of her lawn for the children under 12 to play games and a story hour.

The members of the Willing Workers Class have volunteered their help in supervising the project, and some of them will be present each Sunday to be with the young people and children.

Although the plan was designed primarily for the children and young people of the Walton Christian Sunday School, all other who are interested are cordially invited to attend.

Names of the leaders and further details will be announced next week.

FINER HOMEMAKERS

Mrs. Frank Rust was hostess to the Pinner Homemakers Club, May 17, with the following guests present, Mrs. Chas. Cupp, Mrs. Steve Rich, Mrs. Joe Rich, Mrs. Fred McMillan, Mrs. Willie Kidwell, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Christina Bridges, Mrs. Angelina Pelizzari, Mrs. John Doye, Mrs. Chas. Flynn, Mrs. Chester Mullins, Mrs. Dewey Fisk, Miss Zelma Byerly, the home demonstration agent, and Mrs. Odie Fisk.

Luncheon was served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Otis Fisk, June 21, at Fiskburg.

2 HURT IN AUTO
CRASH AT WALTON

Two men were injured in an auto accident early Friday on the Dixie Highway, near Walton, police reported.

The injured, Delmer D. Thorpe, 225, of 137 W. Ninth street, Covington, bartender at a Cincinnati cafe, was examined at Both Hospital for injuries and released, and Ernest Tipton Johnson City, Tenn., employee of a Michigan fruit dealer, suffered head injuries. The latter's condition was reported fair.

Police did not learn details of the mishap.

Baptist Vacation
Bible School Starts
Monday, June 5

Beginning Monday June 5th and each day through June 16th. The Baptist church will conduct a Vacation Bible School. On Sunday evening June 18th Commencement exercises will be held.

Each day there will be Bible and Character stories besides the teaching of the Scriptures and hand work for each department.

There will be department for boys and girls from the age of three years through 17 years old. On Saturday June 17th the entire school will be given a picnic.

The Baptist church extends a cordial welcome to any and all who want to attend. We trust that the parents of Walton will take advantage of this opportunity and send their children, and every effort will be made to give them a knowledge of the Bible.

SPARTA HOTEL CLOSED;

$1500 IN WHISKEY TAKEN

Saturday afternoon Sheriff Chas. Hall accompanied by two of Uncle Sams Revenue Officers entered the Sparta Hotel and confiscated $1500 worth of whiskey and trucked it away to a storage house in Frankfort. The business had been recently sold by the proprietor Ralph Taylor to a Jonesville party who had taken possession only two days before.

The arrest was brought about by a violation of the Federal Black Market law, and selling liquor without first procuring license.

Highlights of Farm Activities From All Over County

Farmers in several communities began setting their 1944 tobacco crop the later part of last week. Plants are reported as growing fast and many farmers do not have their ground ready for training work.

William H. of Idlewild reports he has the best livestock pasture he has ever had. He attributes his good pasture to the early use of his small grain pasture which saved his permanent pasture until it made a good start. This is the program that has been strongly recommended to Boone County farmers. Plan now to have good small grain pastures, next fall, winter, and early spring.

William Stephens and Lloyd Stekman, local hybrid corn breeders, report a complete sell out (except for round grains) of their yellow hybrid seed. Stekman has some high yielding white hybrid seed still in stock. These white hybrids are Kentucky developed and are good. Adopted hybrid corn seed demand has been the largest on record.

Hugh Baker of Petersburg, a new Hampshire sheep breeder, is developing a fine purebred flock.

Those sheep owners who have not treated their flocks with Phenothiazine should do so immediately. Phenothiazine is a cure for salt, 9 parts and Phenothiazine one part before the sheep at all times may necessitate treating the flock again during the summer.

This new sheep treatment is working wonders in parasite control. It is simple to give and results are soon noticed.

Farmers are getting behind in their plowing. Farmers who must hire plowing done should notify the County Agent's Office as early as possible.

The production of feed crops—corn, hay and better pastures are the most important war jobs confronting local farmers today. Prospects for the 1944-45 feed supply is serious.

Poultry raisers are reporting the usual season's losses from Coccidiosis. No medicine is officially recognized as a cure for this disease. Confining the birds to the house and dry cleaning every day at the same time is giving effective control. Milk helps grow the birds out of the set back caused by the disease. Secure the leaflet on Coccidiosis from the County Office.

Gardens are late—Don't be defeated by the weather—We need good gardens in 1944.

Farmers To Use
Jeeps After War

Farmers of Boone county, many of whom have indicated through a national survey their desire to own a Jeep after the war, can save approximately $799.820 for post-war rehabilitation if they take advantage of the scout car's four-sided personality, a recent study reveals.

This figure is based on the difference between the estimated price of a post-war Jeep and the total cost of the four farm units which, according to extensive research and experimentation, it can replace.

Recent tests by accredited farm experts, including officials of the Department of Agriculture, reveal that the Jeep has a great deal of farm blood in its mechanical veins," according to Ward M. Canaday, president of Willys-Overland Motors, who said his company's engineers have proven "on the soil" that the scout car can be used as an effective four-purpose substitute for the horse, the tractor, the independent power unit and the light truck.

In the Department of Agriculture's report on its recent experiments with the vehicle, issued by R. B. Gray, head of the Farm Equipment and Research Division, the Jeep was described as "highly useful in plowing, harrowing and other field work."

ARE YOU ONE OF THESE?

Are you one of our subscribers who have forgotten to pay their subscription recently? If you are we must tell you that we are going to be required by the Postal Laws, to remove your name from our list. As much as we want you as a reader, we must comply with the Postal Laws which say that a paper cannot send to a person unless the subscription is paid in advance.

We know that you want the paper in order to keep step with all news, sales, programs and special events that happen in your community, so drop in the Advertiser office the next time you are in Walton and keep the paper coming.

The Postal inspector says that our list must be in a paid-in-advance basis by the first of July, so that gives us 30 days—but don't put it off—do it today!

4-H Canning Leaders Met In Warsaw May 26

Representatives of Gallatin County 4-H Canning leaders and Neighborhood leaders met in the Courthouse at Warsaw, May 26 and planned a Food Conservation program for the County to be carried on through June, July, and August.

Miss Martha W. Taylor, who is carrying on the Demonstration in this work this summer, was at the meeting and told the ladies of the plan of War Food Administration in conducting the demonstration. She pointed out that emphasis had been placed on Food Producing in the past and very little has been done on Conservation; storing, canning, and etc. and that this program was to cover these phases.

Miss Taylor's first week in the County will be June 12 to 17. The Committee planned eight meetings which will appear in this paper next week. Every farm family is invited to take part in this program.

The leaders planning the program were: Mrs. Milo Sturgeon, Mrs. Owen Roberts, Mrs. Arnold Craig, Mrs. J. T. Cochran, Mrs. Victor Sawchell, Mrs. H. L. Crume, Mrs. C. O. Rider, Mrs. Elmo Baker, Mrs. Albert Osborne, Mrs. James Wallace, Mrs. Silie Rider, Mrs. C. H. Stahl, Mrs. C. Wallick.

Some sections were not represented because circumstances prevented leaders attending.

TWO COVINGTON RESIDENCE
SOLD FOR $18,425

Two large Covington residences were sold for a total of $18,425 by Rel C. Wayman, Covington real estate dealer and auctioneer. The sales were made to settle the estate of Mrs. Barbara Hooper. The Covington Savings Bank and Trust Co., was the executor.

The 21-room brick apartment building and store at 1731 Green-up street was sold to Wilford Geisen, operator of a meat market on West Seventh street, Covington, for $9250.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Ascare, of 1706 Scott street, Covington, purchased the 11-room brick residence at 35 Leavasser avenue for $9175. The building is situated on a lot 60 by 135 feet.

More than 25 persons took part in the spirited bidding.

HOME ON LEAVE

Technician Cpl. Harley Littrell of the 15 Armored Division, Camp Barkley, Texas, has returned to camp after spending a fifteen day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Littrell of Verona and other relatives and friends in Brainerd, Covington and Richmond.

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearne have received word that their son, Edward R. Dearne, has been promoted from Sergeant to Staff Sergeant. Sergeant Dearne is stationed at Camp Walker, Tex.

Died May 24, from a cerebral hemorrhage, Mrs. Mattie Estes at the home of her daughter Mrs. Elsie Wilson. The deceased was born in Owen County, Ky., Jan. 23, 1864 thus passing her 80th milestone on the road of life the youngest daughter of Erasmus and Margaret Bourne Samuels.

She was a good Christian woman kind benevolent and sympathetic. Early in life she became a member of the Christian Church and continued an active member until falling health prevented it.

She leaves to mourn the loss one daughter, Mrs. Eliza Wilson, one sister Mrs. Lucy Crawford, three grandchildren, Lieut. Ernest Gilbert Wilson stationed somewhere with the U. S. Army, Harold of Cincinnati, Lieut. Corine (Sister) Wilson who is serving with the W. A. C's. A twin brother Caswell Samuels passed away some years ago, also her husband, Samuel Estes preceded her to the grave.

The funeral was conducted from the home of Mrs. Eliza Wilson by Rev. W. J. Clarke of after which the remains were laid to rest in the family plot in New Liberty by undertaker Harry Bond of New Liberty.

The family have the sympathy of the entire community.

HOME FOR FEW DAYS

Henry Marsh S. C. husband of Neva G. Marsh has returned to home after a short visit at home. He and his wife spent his leave with his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. C. March of Verona, Ky.

Henry is an armed guard on a Merchant Ship and he has been away from home for some time.

Navy life seems to agree with him, he has gained several pounds since he has been in the Navy.

Two young people from this vicinity graduated from Eastern State Teachers College, Richmond, during the commencement exercises there May 27-31. They are Paul G. Adams, Walton, and Lillie Marie Wren, Paint Lick. We congratulate these young people.

TWO GRADUATING FROM EASTERN

Two young people from this vicinity graduated from Eastern State Teachers College, Richmond, during the commencement exercises there May 27-31. They are Paul G. Adams, Walton, and Lillie Marie Wren, Paint Lick. We congratulate these young people.

Twins BORN MAY 24
Larry Joe and Joe Anne Taggart arrived at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Taggart on Richmond Road Wednesday May 24. Weight 6 pounds each.

Residents recall that this is the 7th set of twins born on this farm. Attending physician was Dr. Daugherty.

Home Nursing
Class, Burlington

The first meeting of The Burlington Home Nursing Class will be Wednesday June 7th. 2:30 P. M. Eastern War Time at the home of Miss Elizabeth Lowry, which will be the regular meeting place for this class. The time for future meetings may be set to suit the majority in the class.

The Red Cross Text Book for the Standard Course will be used as a guide, but if the group so desires, not one of the required twenty four hours may be spent in actual nursing or practical demonstrations.

A recent ruling from Washington is that for Adults taking the standard no examination is required, but each person is expected to give at least twenty four hours to class work.

Those who have expressed a desire to join this group are as follows: Miss Estelle Rusey, Mrs. Kirtley Cropper, Mrs. Walter Brown, Mrs. Garnett Tolin, Mrs. D. H. Norris, Mrs. J. C. Layne, Mrs. Mary Louise Tewsend, Mrs. Katherine Easton, Mrs. H. R. Portner, Mrs. Clara Moore, Mrs. Lou Pope, Mrs. Geo. Smith.

A number of others have expressed a desire to join the group, but are not sure of their time. Not more than twenty may enroll, but up to this number is permissible.

Only about half as many chicks are being kept in Owen county as were purchased a year ago.

NOTICE TO BUSINESS MEN

S. R. Glenn, Collector of Internal Revenue, Louisville, Kentucky, today called attention to the fact that a number of taxpayers have failed to file reports 1096 and 1099 which were due to have been filed on February 15, 1944.

Where a taxpayer withheld tax from an employee, he is not required to file forms 1096 and 1099.

But, in a case where an employee was not subject to withholding tax, the employer should make a report to the Government on forms 1096 and 1099 covering the amount paid in salary, wages, fees, commissions and bonuses for the year 1943, if single $500 or more, or if married $254 or more.

Farmers are not required to withhold a tax from employees or share croppers, but if an employee or share cropper received during the year 1943 more than $500 if single or more than $254 if married, farmers should make a report to the Government on forms 1096 and 1099.

While the information returns should have been filed not later than February 15, 1944, Collector Glenn urges any one who is liable for the filing of these forms and has not done so to file same not later than June 15, 1944.

READS EVERY WORD:

Editor of Walton Advertiser
Walton, Ky.

Dear Sir:

I really appreciate receiving the Advertiser but since I wrote for it, I have been transferred to another company so would you please send it to the same address as before.

I have read each and every word printed from front to back and really enjoyed it.

It seems that Mr. E. M. Johnson made the headlines last week by killing a mad dog. I suppose that since I left Walton that he doesn't have as much trouble with his duties, because it was then that he spent most of his time chasing me. No kidding he is the best game warden in the state of Kentucky.

Thanking you again for your courteous response in mailing me the paper, I remain

Yours truly,

Pvt Ward R. Rice
Camp Blanding, Fla.

WITH THE AMERICAN (CORRECT) DIVISION AT BOUGAINVILLE—For his performance of duty in action against the enemy at Bougainville, Pfc. Leonard Phillips, Walton, Ky., has been awarded the Combat Infantryman Badge.

The badge, worn above the left breast pocket, is a silver rifle with a silver border, an elliptical wreath in the background.

Phillips is a rifleman in an Infantry regiment, the first Army unit to take the offensive against the Axis in this war. They landed at Guadalcanal on October 12, 1942 and helped the hard-driven Marines turn back heavy Japanese attacks. They fought with other units of the American Division until final victory on February 9, 1943.

Italy—U. S. engineers clear road under railroad trestle near Itri in Italian drive.

In the greatest single Allied push of World War II, the U. S. Fifth and British Eighth armies sought the annihilation of German Field Marshal Kesselring's 17 divisions below Rome in the historic fight for the Eternal City.

Even as U. S. and British troops struck out from the Anzio beach-head to press Nazi forces there against other enemy units fighting desperately to the south, thousands of Allied bombers thundered over western Europe to continue the non-

CLOTHING:

Cut Lines

Buyers crowding Chicago's Merchandise Mart for the fall and winter women's, children's and infants' wear market found fewer lines but better quality wools in wider color ranges.

With demand exceeding production and the labor situation still critical, manufacturers reduced the number of their lines, and then shortened these remaining lines to meet basic retail requirements.

With an easing of limitations on black, a better range of colors was promised, and more all-wools and new wools were included in medium and low-priced lines.

After a year-long swing upward, clothing prices were arrested in April, but not until some items had risen almost 100 per cent, the U. S. bureau of labor statistics reported.

Pointing out that prices in certain stores have advanced even above the national average, the BLS said that during the last year, percale house dresses went up 23 per cent, men's shirts 18 per cent, women's cotton nightgowns 16 per cent, and women's spring coats 14 per cent.

Although rises in clothing costs as a whole showed only a fractional gain in April, the BLS said appreciable gains were registered in women's inexpensive rayon dresses, percale house dresses, girdles, men's and women's felt hats and business shirts. Some increases in shoes and men's work clothing also were noted.

PRESIDENT'S STATE

When congressional leaders called at the White House for the first legislative conference following the President's return from South Carolina, he looked fit as a fiddle. However, Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley popped the question that has had the capital worried because of these wild rumors about the Commander-in-Chief's health.

"How do you feel?" asked the Kentuckian.

"Great," replied Roosevelt. He added that he had got 12 hours of sleep a night and plenty of sunshine.

He was brown as a berry and buoyant as ever. However, congressional leaders noted that his face was a little thinner. Admiral Roscoe T. McIntire, the President's physician, accepted responsibility for his patient's appearance. He said that Roosevelt had knocked off 10 pounds under McIntire's orders. He is still five pounds overweight according to his physician's standards, but McIntire argues that this can be corrected by proper dieting.

Allies, Holding Offensive, Have Invasion Advantage

Veritas, Famed British Military Expert, Sees Nazis Handicapped by Being Pinned Inside Defense Circle.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

What happens when "the coiled springs of action" are released in the cataclysm of invasion?

Europe is enveloped in the smoke and confusion of battle and only occasionally does this fog lift "showing" the wayward forms of vast armies amid the screaming clatter of mechanized combat. It descends again "blotting out the view and leaving us uncertain as to the shape of the plan."

That is the observation of one of the keenest British military experts, "Veritas," whose privately circulated analyses are called to this country and eagerly scanned by persons most interested in the conflict now going on.

And Veritas reminds us that we can only maintain our sense of perspective and proportion if we keep carefully in mind certain fundamental aspects of the military situation from the German standpoint. This, likewise, applies to the political aspects.

A well-known psychologist, Dr. Norman Maier of the University of Michigan who predicted the failure of the Munich appeasement program by demonstrating in advance that aggression is a psychological principle, it could not succeed, recently made some interesting observations.

He said that Hitler would be liquidated and in retaliation would take place in Germany as soon as the last of the "myths" created by the German propagandists for the purpose of lulling the Germans into a false sense of security were exploded.

The Germans, he explains, belong to a "frustrated society." Hitler cured their frustration with aggression in aggression is frustrated, nothing else will be left.

Training for Farmers

Recently the Office of Defense Transportation announced that public vocational training schools in 190 cities throughout the country were turning over to the automotive industry a "continually increasing number of workers trained in one or more phases of automotive industry."

The United States Office of Education is sponsoring the automotive maintenance training program. They are trying to help fill the gap in automotive maintenance personnel caused by the war.

But what many people do not realize is that it is also conducting courses that directly touch the farm. Congress appropriated $15,000,000 for the food production war training program which the Office of Education administers.

The minimum age limits for both school and in-school persons have now been removed and all courses are now offered to urban as well as rural persons.

Twenty-two courses are being offered in which the farmer is interested, and they run all the way from the operation, care and repair of tractors, trucks and automobiles to soil and water conservation. And besides the various handwork in the mechanical line around the farm such as machinery repair, woodwork, elementary electricity and construction of farm machinery and equipment, there are special courses in milk production, poultry production, eggs, pork, beef, mutton, lamb, wool, soybeans, peanuts and various commercial vegetable production.
